Panel Hits Commune Ban Plan

By KAREN PETERSON

Calling it an "infringement upon a citizen's rights," the Marin County Human Rights Commission Thursday night recommended defeat of San Rafael's proposed anticommune ordinance.

The ordinance, unanimously approved by the San Rafael Planning Commission, would prohibit more than five unrelated people from living in a single-family residence, if passed by the city council at its Sept. 4 meeting.

The human rights commission also urged rescinding of any similar ordinances in other Marin cities.

Protest against the ordinance was brought before the commission by Kenneth R. Frankel, co-owner of the 25-room mansion at 16 Culloden Park Road, now an Ashram for about 25 men and women and 10 children. J. Stanley Ott, assistant city planner, represented the City of San Rafael at the sparsely attended public hearing.

Commissioner Joaquin P. Gallardo's move to adopt the recommendation, after nearly two hours of hearings, was challenged by San Rafael City Mgr. William Bielser, who arrived shortly before the commission's vote.

Bielser claimed that Gallardo's vote would be influenced by his involvement litigation against the city of San Rafael over the city's redevelopment plans.

Gallardo, withdrawing his motion, said he felt "quite strongly about what Mr. Bielser said. But I still want to vote and will not stand for a denial of my vote."

The motion was then made by Commissioner Dee Fratus and passed 4 to 1 with Lily Whittle opposed. "Every game has its rules and regulations," said Mrs. Whittle, "without them society could not function."

Ott, in his statement to the commission, said that although some neighbors have complained about parking problems caused by the ashram, the ordinance is not aimed at any specific residence.

"Over the past four years," he said, "Our office has received and attempted to do something about complaints in regard to excessive occupancy by large numbers of people in single family residences in several sectors of San Rafael."

The major purpose of the ordinance, he continued, is to bring into conformity both the building code and zoning ordinance definitions of the word "family." The building code, he said, now defines a family as related by blood or marriage while the zoning definition is "so worded that almost any combination of people in any numerical amount could live in a place or residence. "We have to have regulations and lines drawn somewhere."

Ott also told the commission that if it is adopted, the zoning ordinance would permit applications for variances and adjustments if the house were "excessively large and had a large number of bedrooms."

Ott said, "San Rafael is not establishing any precedent with the ordinance ... in Marin now, we are the exception rather than the rule."

Frankel said he opposed the ordinance because the distinction between related and unrelated persons is discriminatory. Complaints about communes,

Shopping Center Faces New Tangle

Hahn Must Prepare An Impact Report

By MARY LEYDECKER

Even though a federal environmental agency has withdrawn objections to a fill permit for the proposed Ernest W. Hahn regional shopping center in Corte Madera, the project apparently faces a new tangle of governmental red tape.

A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers, which must issue the permit needed to fill 45 acres of marshland in east Corte Madera, said today that the Hahn firm still must go through lengthy procedures before a decision will be made.

In a letter received by Corte Madera Town officials Thursday, the regional office of the federal Environmental Protection Agency withdrew objections made earlier to issuance of the permit by the corps.

Some Corte Madera officials, unaware of further legal complications, said they believed this would lead soon to the granting of the permit.

Today, however, Col. James L. Lammie, district engineer for the corps in San Francisco, said that the project now must go before the Council on Environmental Quality in Washington, D.C.

In order to be considered by this agency, an "environmental impact study" must be prepared under new federal guidelines he said, and recent court rulings have held that an environmental impact report, such as already prepared in the Hahn case for state authorities, will not suffice.

"We have all the information and needed background," he said, indicating that a contracting firm could probably prepare the study within three or four weeks.

The study then will remain on file with the council for 90 days, he said, and persons wishing to comment may do so within the first 45 days. Finally, any comments will be incorporated in the study and it will be on file for another 30 days before being handed over to the Corps of Engineers.

It is expected then that the final decision on the permit will come out of Washington, not San Francisco.

In the meantime, the corps will seek public reaction to the proposed shopping center from the Marin County Board of Supervisors, as representatives of the county as a whole.

"After all, we're not in the business of telling Marin residents where they ought to put their shopping centers," a corps spokesman said.

A further complication for the Hahn firm is an election scheduled Sept. 18 in Corte Madera, in which three councilmen face recall. Some of their critics also have opposed the shopping center proposed for empty land east of Highway 101.

After objections on environmental grounds, Hahn redrew his plans for the center and currently is asking to fill only about 45 acres as compared to 75 in the original proposal. He also has agreed to leave two ponds in the north portion natural with surrounding open space.

The latest news from the corps about the need for sending a new report to Washington "means the whole project is several more months down the tubes," Councilman Edward W. Colthurst, one of the men facing recall, said today.

Meanwhile in Marin Superior Court, the Town of Corte Madera has lost a bid to dismiss two lawsuits challenging the shopping center.

Visiting Judge Harry Roberts of Mono County has denied the town's motion for a summary judgment in favor of the town in suits brought by Joel Shawn and by J. Patrick and Peter J. Hunt.

In the preliminary skirmish, the town contended there wasn't enough substance to the suits to warrant taking the cases to trial. Roberts disagreed.

The suits ask that work on the proposed multimillion dollar regional center be halted until a more thorough state environmental impact report is prepared and considered.

Fuels Freeze Extended, Other Lids Off Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Cost of Living Council Friday extended the price freeze on gasoline and petroleum products until Aug. 19, but said service stations victimized in price wars would get a break once the freeze is lifted.

For the rest of the economy, except beef, the price freeze expires Monday. Merchants and wholesalers will be able to boost selling prices in line with regulations under the administration's Phase IV stabilization program.

Council Director John T. Dunlop said it would take extra time to draft the complex rules that will govern the oil industry under Phase IV and that was the reason for the one-week extension of the freeze on prices of all petroleum products.

The Phase IV oil industry rules in brief:

Gasoline and home heating oil will be subject to a ceiling price that includes the markup for profit being charged last Jan. 10. But the council said soon it would have to charge a smaller markup than 7 cents a gallon. This provision was to avoid hardship to retailers who were involved in price wars at that time.

Service station owners will have to paste a sticker on every gasoline and diesel oil pump stating the ceiling price and octane rating of the fuel. This is supposed to prevent such price gouging techniques as selling a lower-octane gasoline for the same price.

Home heating oil retailers can raise their ceiling prices at the start of each month to reflect higher costs, but also must reduce prices if costs decline. The automatic price adjustment is designed to encourage more heating oil imports, the council said, and to avoid the sort of shortages that left some parts of the nation with cold furnaces last winter.

Oil drillers will be able to sell "new oil", that is, oil above the amount the company produced last year, at free market prices. This, too, is designed to encourage additional production.

Dunlop said the rules were designed to "strike a delicate balance between constraining prices while at the same time encouraging the necessary increase in supplies which a country must have."

"The council is aware that energy prices must be allowed to rise in order to stimulate development of new energy reserves and make possible the purchase of higher cost foreign oil," Dunlop said. "At the same time, we must prevent unnecessary price increases."

The council also announced new Phase IV rules for the insurance industry that will require big insurance companies to notify the council 30 days in advance of significant hikes in premium charges.

Health insurers with $50 million or more of earned premium and property-liability insurers above $150 million will have to notify both the council and state insurance regulatory agencies in advance of proposed rate increases of more than 5 per cent which affect $1 million or more in annual premiums.

Dunlop said the rules, similar to those that governed the insurance industry during the Phase II stabilization program, "will have a restraining effect on the amount of premium increases implemented by insurers during Phase IV."

Food Tab 15 Per Cent Higher Than 1972's

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Agriculture Department today said the cost of food in the United States during the second quarter of this year was 15 per cent higher than it was in 1972.

The department also said the production of wheat, corn and soybean crops will set new records this year, but experts said prices probably will not come down because the big crops are less than had been expected.

In other developments:

Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and House Minority Leader Gerald Ford, R-Mich., called for lifting the price freeze on beef before Sept. 12.

President Nixon accepted a compromise with Congress on a new farm bill that administration officials say will be the kick-off for a full-scale drive to increase food supplies. Higher

New York Bank Hikes Prime Rate—New High

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank today raised its interest rate on prime business loans to 9-¼ per cent, a new all-time high, and promptly got a pat on the back from Treasury Secretary George Shultz.

Shultz told a news conference in Detroit that Citibank's move is "desirable in the short run" because it should put a damper on "unsustainable economic growth."

But Shultz quickly added that such a high prime rate is most undesirable in the long run.

Nevertheless, he said soaring interest rates could help "cool down" the country's economic growth rate from a current 8 per cent to a much more sustainable level of around 4 per cent.

He pointed out that in spite of a dozen increases in the prime rate so far this year—the 9-¼ rate will be the 13th if it becomes general—the entire level of interest rates in the United

CHAMPION IS INVITED FOR DINNER

As auctioneer Bill Lefty called for bids Thursday, Ashcraft's fellow 4-H clubbers shouted "higher."

The steer was bought by Bill Deane, a family friend, who said he plans to use about 600 pounds of 15-year-old Mark's former pet for his family's table.

Bedayan Defense Pushes Insanity Angle At Trial

By BILL ROBERTS

William Brent Bedayan was floridly psychotic, experienced in an acute schizophrenic reaction and loss of thought process when he killed three people in Mill Valley in March.

So testified Dr. Alla Soufi, a clinical psychologist from San Francisco, at Bedayan's trial Thursday as the defense attempted to prove Bedayan insane at the time of the killings.

Dr. Soufi said Bedayan had a severe abnormality of the mind which completely distorted reality and he did not fully realize what he was doing or whom he was killing.

Defense attorney Frank J. Cox had admitted that Bedayan killed Melvin and Ruth Schallock and their 19-year-old son, Daniel, and set fire to their home.

Dr. Soufi said Bedayan experienced extreme depression near the time of the killings.

The doctor said the depression built up for quite some time and was based on guilt feelings of Bedayan who was troubled over his own concept of manhood and virility.

Bedayan was concerned over homosexuality, Dr. Soufi said. Although he did not think the defendant was practicing homosexuality he may have had homosexual feelings. These feelings caused the youth to question his own manhood and caused much of the depression, the doctor said.

On cross-examination today, in the 12th day of the trial, Dr. Soufi admitted that a person pleading innocent of triple murder by reason of insanity probably would give self-serving answers to psychological tests.

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales pointed out Bedayan's background in psychology classes at the College of Marin, work at the state hospital in Napa, and additional reading on psychological subjects. The doctor said an individual with such a background could tailor answers to fit a sanity defense.

Bales also noted what he thought were inconsistencies in some of Bedayan's answers to psychological test questions. But Dr. Soufi said most were

BART Train Makes The First Run Through Tube

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The new San Francisco Bay Area rapid transit system sent one of its sleek, no-driver aluminium trains through the tube under the bay for the first time today.

The three-car train zipped through the tube 120 feet under the surface of the bay in a time of just over five minutes for the six-mile trip from Oakland's West station to the Montgomery Street Station underground in the San Francisco financial district.

The run was the first test of a train going all the way through the bay tube. It carried officials and newsmen.

BART has been operating for nearly a year in parts of the system in the East Bay. Service on the San Francisco side, between the City and Daly City is expected to start before mid-November.

Completion of the $1.5 billion 75-mile system has been stalled by problems in the automated train-control system. The state has ordered extensive further testing before it will allow regular passenger service through the underwater tube.

The hangup in that key section is that the trains must operate at 80 miles an hour at 90-second intervals, and state officials feel the automated controls are not adequately tested for that.

Bill Stokes, general manager of BART, was aboard the test train today and said he would not make "any projections" about when regular transbay service could start.

The bay tube was built in sections which were floated out in the bay and sunk in a trench. Then rocks were piled over the tube. The builders say it is earthquake proof.

Hamilton Housing Use Aids Novato Schools

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — More than 500 Army, Navy and Coast Guard families are expected to begin moving into vacant housing at Hamilton Air Force Base in early September.

The Air Force has ordered preparations for the relocations to begin immediately even though Congressional approval of the move will not come until Congress reconvenes after Labor Day.

Most of the 525 families will come from Bay Area bases and military installations where on-base housing is not available. Some families may be moved to the base from Forts Barry, Baker and Cronkhite to open up the picturesque Marin headlands for public recreation.

The announcement of the impending relocation came today from Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District. He said the decision to start planning for the moves so the families can move in by the first part of next month was prompted by the budgetary crisis facing the Novato School District caused by plans to close Hamilton.

The Defense Department's April decision to close the base by the end of the year caught the school district by surprise and came after the deadline for notifying teachers if they were not to be rehired for the next school year.

Consequently, the district was faced with the loss of approxi-

Shortages Hurt Food For Peace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rising U.S. food prices and short supplies have begun to cut into this country's role as a provider of food to the underdeveloped world.

Officials said Thursday that U.S. government purchases from American farmers of food for needy people abroad under the Food for Peace program have been halted temporarily while officials review available domestic supplies and prices.

Ironically, the disclosure came on a day when the Agriculture Department predicted the biggest U.S. food crop in history this year.

It said this year's crop—on the basis of Aug. 1 conditions—would up 5 per cent from last year's record and 18 per cent above 1967. It said this would include record crops of wheat, corn, grain sorghums and soybeans.

But the Agriculture Department said that, with the exception of sorghums, each of these individual crops is below the levels predicted a month ago. This, in relation to the demand for the crops at home and overseas, is causing the high prices.

Against this background, officials said food for delivery under the overseas aid program from July through September has already been purchased from U.S. farmers and is being shipped. This includes grain for victims of the African drought.

But they said contracting for deliveries beginning in October, which normally would have begun last month, has been put off pending review of the government's crop report and the U. S. food situation.

The National Farmers Union (NFU) called the suspension "a tragic result of mismanagement and policy blundering."

The U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) said that if a decision is made quickly to resume contracting the holdup in food shipments may be brief.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Embassy Hunt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States expects to send a team of State Department experts to East Germany in August to find a site for a future American embassy in East Berlin, department officials said today.

The team will hold the first official talks with East German representatives in East Berlin since that Communist government was established in 1949.

Skylab Chores

HOUSTON (UPI) — While ground controllers consider feeding Skylab spiders Arabella and Anita a drop of astronaut blood to keep them healthy, the Space Station crew takes today off to relax, clean house and shower.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma were given a "shopping list" of scientific and housekeeping chores to do if they wish, but Mission Control recommended they take it easy for the day.

The crewmen each had 90 minutes set aside for a shower and could do some sun observation through their powerful telescopes if they wished.

The astronauts gave a fly-size bite of rare filet mignon to their space pets Thursday to keep them alive for the rest of the record two-month flight in the hope the spiders will continue spinning webs in weightlessness.

Pressure Eases

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Pressure by insurgents on Phnom Penh's southern defense perimeter eased today, enabling government troops to recapture one highway and secure another.

U.S. warplanes again blasted insurgent holdouts around the city in raids so fierce that concussions from the bombs crakced some window panes in the city and shook building foundations.

The air raids today came with only five days to go before the American air campaign in Cambodia ends.

Aerial Battle

CAIRO (UPI) — An Egyptian army spokesman said today an aerial battle with Israeli jets 20 miles west of the Suez Canal proves that Israel is creating tensions in the Middle East.

In Tl Aviv, Israeli authorities said only that Israeli planes were on a reconnaisance mission in the area of the Suez Canal when clash reportedly occurred Thursday.

An Israeli spokesman said all the Israeli planes returned safely.

Call For Summit

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has renewed its call for a high level meeting with President Nixon's participation before the end of the year to underwrite a new security system for the whole of Europe.

Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, said diplomatic sources today, raised the issue with his East European party chiefs at the Crimea meeting 10 days ago.

Communist diplomats, the sources said, are now spreading the word in Western capitals that such a high level meeting could take place this year.

Toll Is Heavy

SAIGON (UPI) — A Saigon military spokesman today reported more bloody Central Highlands fighting that has killed nearly 200 Vietnamese this week, and a field commander said he can spare troops for Cambodia if ordered to go there.

A south Vietnamese military command spokesman said 40 Communists were killed at a cost of one government troop dead and 29 wounded in two battles Thursday six miles west of Kontum, 260 miles north of Saigon.

Military sources said the action consisted of two Communist ground attacks on an infantry division's headquarters, defended by two battalions totaling about 1,000 men.

Laird Ordered Secret Cambodian Bomb Raids

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird ordered secret bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 with simultaneous air strikes in South Vietnam to provide a cover story for the press, the Senate Armed Services Committee has learned.

The committee also has been given information that secret bombing raids were ordered in Laos by the Johnson administration in 1967 with simultaneous raids in South Vietnam as a press cover.

Laird's order, a copy of which was given to the committee Thursday by Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements, appeared—to a degree, at least—to contradict Laird's assertion July 18 that he never directed or authorized "fabrication of official records."

The order, signed by Laird when he was secretary of defense, dealt with secret strikes, code-named "Operation Menu," to be carried out in Cambodia during the week of Nov. 23, 1969.

"The concept of the operation," the order said, "is to employ 41 B52s against Menu targets on each of two nights during the week of 23 November. The remaining available aircraft will be employed to strike cover targets as well as targets elsewhere in the country (South Vietnam) and in Laos.

"Strikes on these latter targets will provide a resemblance to normal operations, thereby providing a creditable story for replies to press inquiries."

The order was also signed by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. It was classified "top secret — sensitive — noforn (no distribution to other governments) — eyes only—absolutely for the eyes of the addressee only."

"This is the first solid evidence that I have had that there was an order to misrepresent targets," said Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, who has been the main force in the committee's probe of the Cambodia bombing.

Laird, now President Nixon's chief domestic counselor, said July 18 that he had ordered secret raids in Cambodia. But he added, "I did not at any time direct or authorize falsification of official records."

Bar Action Helps Push Pot Reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The vote of the American Bar Association (ABA) in favor of removing criminal penalties for marijuana possession has given new impetus to a lobbying effort in state legislatures.

Representative of the National Organization for the Reform of Marjuana Laws (NORML) were busy at the ABA's convention here this week buttonholing members of the House of Delegates who would be considering the subject.

On the motion of Cecil F. Poole of San Francisco, the House voted 122-70 to recommend wiping off the criminal statute books simple possession of marijuana by users. The action has particular significance at this time because in July the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws adopted an act having the same purpose and presented as a pattern for legislatures to follow.

The specific language in the ABA resolution was proposed by attorney Whitney North Seymour Sr. of New York, a past president of the association. The action was a long step from the one taken by the House a year ago, when only a reduction of penalties was recommended.

Frank Fioramonti of New York, one of the organizers of NORML, said he expects many state bar associations will follow ABA's lead with a resulting impact on state legislatures. He said his group will soon map strategy on how to take advantage of what he regards as two great steps forward by comparatively conservative groups.

Oregon is the first state to decriminalize marijuana possession. Gov. Tom McCall in July signed legislation reclassifying possession of up to one ounce as a "violation" with the maximum penalty a $100 fine. The new law, effective Oct. 15, provides that the offender not receive a criminal record.

Nixon Reportedly Cool Over Agnew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon "hit the ceiling" when he learned Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was under investigation in an alleged Maryland kickback scheme and tried to talk Agnew out of holding a news conference, White House sources said today.

An "angry" Nixon, the sources said, told Agnew at a meeting they held Tuesday that silence was a better posture than holding a news conference.

Agnew, however, told Nixon he felt he should go ahead with the news conference, the sources said. The vice president held the conference Wednesday, describing the allegations of bribery, extortion, conspiracy and tax evasion as "damned lies."

One source said of Nixon's reaction when he learned of Agnew's troubles that he "hit the ceiling."

The White House sources said Nixon plans to let Agnew "stand alone" in his defense against the allegations. Agnew indicated at the news conference he is prepared to do this.

"I think the vice president of the United States should stand on his own feet," Agnew said.

"So I am not spending my time looking around to see who is supporting me. I am defending myself."

Agnew said he met with Nixon for an hour and 45 minutes Tuesday evening. He described their discussion as "far reaching" but declined to amplify the remark.

Thursday, the Washington Star-News reported that Agnew's attorneys in New York and Washington were exploring the possibility of a claim of constitutional immunity for Agnew. Should Agnew make such a claim and should federal prosecutors go ahead with their case, the courts probably would have to resolve any conflicts.

Since the news broke, White House statements with regard to Agnew have been decidedly cool, with the President's spokesman shying away from expressing Nixon's full confidence in Agnew.

Some observers felt that Agnew's performance in his news conference had added to his stature, in the eyes of the public and the press.

Nixon today was at his Camp David, Md., retreat with his closest advisers preparing his public response to Watergate charges that have damaged his second administration.

Some of his aides believe that Nixon will take a "tough" stance in a televised address to the nation which may be delivered on prime time Tuesday or Wednesday evening.

Mexican grocers along the border with California were preparing for another weekend rush of U.S. shoppers eager to buy beef at prices ranging from 60 cents a pound for ground chuck to $1.15 a pound for steak.

All 55 kosher butchers in Pittsburgh said they would close for a week starting Monday because of the high cost of beef and poultry.

The Ideal Bakery Company of Jacksonville, Ill., said it will close this weekend because the cost of ingredients has gone up as much as 50 per cent and there is no lard to be had because meat packers are also closing.

Humphrey, speaking in Chicago, said the government's refusal to relax the ban on price raises before that date is "a political decision, and I think it's a very stupid one."

Also in Chicago, but at a separate news conference, Ford said, "I believe the current beef situation is so chaotic that it is essential the ceiling be lifted before Sept. 12."

The retail cost of a family food market basket from April to June of this year rose to an annual rate of $1,497, up 6 per cent from the first quarter and 15 per cent from a year earlier, the Agriculture Department's economists said in a report.

While the market basket cost does not represent the grocery bill for any actual or average real family, it does show how grocery bills for real families are rising. It covers the cost of farm-produced foods for a statistically average household of 3.2 persons.

The government economists also said consumers can expect more price boosts this fall because of higher raw farm product prices and increased middlemen's charges.

Adding all those factors ttlethegm 1973 retail food prices are expected to average 18 to 22 per cent above 1972, the department said.

Jury Declares Robber Guilty

One of two Marin City men charged with taking $177 from a Mill Valley takeout restaurant in a May 31 armed robbery was found guilty Thursday by a jury in Marin Superior Court.

Zack George Gaines Jr., 20, will be sentenced Aug. 30. The jury deliberated five hours before returning the verdict to Judge Charles Read Best. The trial lasted three days.

Gaines and James Edward Morgan, 18, were charged with holding up the Taco Boat restaurant with a toy pistol and making off with $177 from a floor safe after overcoming two teen-age girls working there.

Morgan pleaded guilty Aug. 2 to the armed robbery charge in a plea bargain in which Best promised he will not send Morgan to prison. Morgan will be sentenced Aug. 27.

Steel And Cement Shortages Reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Associated General Contractors (AGC) said today more than 30 states are experiencing shortages of steel and cement ranging from "slight" to "severe."

Lawrence F. Rooney of Muskogee, Okla., a spokesman for the group, said the shortages were reported in a survey of its members around the country.

Cotati Narrows City Manager Field To Six

The field of 35 applicants for the job of Cotati city manager, was narrowed to six candidates by the city council Thursday night.

The council will begin interviews Monday at 7:30 p.m. in its search for a replacement for City Mgr. Paul W. Salfen, who resigned effective Aug. 31.

Applications were received from all over the nation, but the council reduced the list to California residents since the new city manager must be hired quickly and should have knowledge of California laws.

Of the six candidates, five are now working in city management positions in other cities. The sixth candidate is reportedly a Cotati resident now working as a laborer.

COMMUNE

he said, could be based solely on someone's emotional reaction to different lifestyles. "It violates the rights of unrelated people who have the same rights as related people."

He also said the ordinance doesn't differentiate between sizes of lots and houses, and that it was too drastic and too general.

"The problems could be solved by specific ordinances," he said, "we wouldn't complain about a law dealing with the cars and parking. The city feels, 'Let's pass a law and if people deserve a favor, they can get a variance.' The people don't 'deserve a favor,' they should have the right."

Frankel also said that even though other cities have similar ordinances, "it doesn't mean it's a good law."

"An overly general law," said Douglas H. Bosco, director of the county human relations department, "is more like cutting off your head to get rid of the headache. It solves the problem but it solves it in such a way that it denies the right of association."

In other action, the commission accepted the resignation of human relations counselor Robert L. Hollis effective Aug. 15. Hollis has been with the commission for more than two years and will leave for a job in Daly City.

Boy, 3, Fair From Accident

A 3-year-old Larkspur boy was seriously injured Thursday when he shot out of his driveway on a tricycle, colliding with a slow moving car.

Michael Collins of 167 Elm Avenue was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with multiple scrapes and possible internal injuries.

Larkspur police said the accident happened at 10:25 a.m. when Michael collided with a car driven by Maria Cochran, 69, of 369 Elm Avenue. They said Mrs. Cochran, who was driving slowly, was unable to avoid the crash.

Infection Kills Board Chairman

Dr. Cutter was struck by a respiratory infection while on a trip in the High Sierra 10 days ago. He died Thursday.

The firm was established by his father in Fresno in 1897 and moved to Berkeley a few years later.

RATE

New York banking circles, meanwhile, predicted another early increase in the discount rate of the Federal Reserve banks. That is what commercial banks have to pay to borrow money from the Fed. Under current conditions, however, banks are paying higher interest rates to get money, as much as 10-½ per cent on $100,000 time deposits.

Banking circles said even the high interest rates on time deposits are not attracting any great inflow of funds because investors feel that interest rates will go still higher and are reluctant to tie up their money in time deposits until they feel the peak is reached.

If the 9-¼ per cent rate becomes general, and some banking leaders say it "likely will in view of Shultz's comment, its first effect will be felt only by the largest business companies. Under the two-tier prime rate system adopted early this year the prime rate for smaller businesses is one to two full per centage points lower than the prime rate for large companies.

In the long run most interest rates are affected by the prime rate but their movements up or down lag behind it. Some types of consumer interest rates such as small personal loans, automobile loans and other installment loans are the last to follow a prime rate rise because these businesses generate a substantial part of their own funds through monthly installment collections and are not highly dependent on general banking funds.

Tools Stolen

Paul A. Spinks, 625 C Street, Petaluma, told police that tools and fishing equipment valued at $412 were stolen from his pick-up truck Wednesday night while parked outside his home.

Commission Wants Limit On Heights

The Tiburon Planning Commission Thursday night recommended stricter control of building heights in the city, according to Richard G. Arjo, director of community development.

Commissioners agreed that buildings should not be allowed to exceed 30 feet measured from any point along the structure's grade. The present zoning law allows for buildings to exceed the height limit if the average height, measured at various points along the grade, does not exceed 30 feet.

Commissioners also approved plans by Charles McDevitt to subdivide and sell as condominiums 10 units in his Golden View Heights development on Linda Vista Avenue. The units are considered attached duplexes and do not fall under the city's ban on converting apartments to condominiums, according to Arjo.

The commission changed its regular meeting day to the first Wednesday of the month. It will also meet at 8 p.m. Aug. 27 to discuss the traffic and circulation elements of the general plan. The next regular meeting will be at 8 p.m. Sept. 5 in city offices.

mately 900 children from the base which last year sent 1,460 youngsters to Novato schools. Under the Air Force's gradual departure plans, 710 military children were expected to remain at Hamilton by September. But the end of December, less than 600 were residing there.

Mailliard said the new families should make up a significant part of the loss.

"I certainly shall urge a prompt approval of the plan when Congress reconvenes after Labor Day," the Congressman said.

Outlook Is Poor On Crash Victim

A Mill Valley man was reported in poor condition at Marin General Hospital today with injuries suffered Thursday night in an auto accident on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Fairfax.

Robert R. Murray, 51, of 25 Thomas Drive, received a broken leg and chest injuries when his car ran off the road and struck the Shafter Creek Bridge at 11:20 p.m.

California Highway Patrolmen said Murray told them another car ran him off the road.

Fairfax Sign Ordinance Eased

The Fairfax Design Review board last night moved to ease the town's sign ordinance.

The board recommended that the planning commission give merchants more time to meet requirements of the ordinance, reduce the cost of a nonconforming sign permit from $10 to $5, and set at eight feet the clearance required for signs overhanging sidewalks, rather than the present 10 foot requirement.

The town administration recently mailed about 50 letters to various merchants, calling attention to nonconforming signs and ordering complicance with the sign ordinance.

Town councilman Frank J. Egger had recommended easing the law after a barrage of complaints from businessmen.

BEDAYAN

only defensive reactions and did not constitute deception.

The doctor said Bedayan did not discuss the day of the murders, his plans before the murders, or his avoidance of police after the killings. The psychologist said such information was not important to test results.

Dr. Soufi, under direct examination Thursday, gave a detailed explanation of thought processes, told of the testing methods he used on Bedayan in April while he was in jail and gave conclusions concerning his mental state at the time of the killings.

Bedayan elected to destroy a source of menace to himself when he had to decide between killing himself or those he thought threatened his existence, Dr. Soufi said.

Bedayan thought he was destroying a menacing, vicious, supernatural force which was threatening him and the entire community, the psychologist said.

Dr. Soufi called Bedayan a paranoid schizophrenic, citing a high degree of delusion in that he attributed to physical objects qualities that exist only in his mind. Under Cox's guidance, the psychologist said, for example, that Bedayan could look at a 60-year-old man but see, instead, a 17-year-old girl.

That testimony was intended to bolster previous testimony by Bedayan's mother, Marcea, who said her son told her to be on watch for a 17-year-old girl in Mill Valley whom he "saw" at the Schallock home on the night of the murders.

She said her son told her that he did not kill Melvin Schallock, that there was someone else involved in the murders and that she should watch for the mysterious girl.

Mrs. Bedayan said her son also told her of a Mafia plot in Mill Valley and said several black Cadillacs had been cruising near his home.

Cox presented reports from the Marin Community Mental Health Clinic which said four days before the killings that Bedayan had "suicidal and homicidal potential". The document was part of what Mrs. Bedayan thought were involuntary committal proceedings for her son.

Although commitment the week of the killings was not certain, she had arranged an appointment at the mental health clinic for her son on March 15, the afternoon preceeding the murders.

She said she was told later by authorities at the clinic that her son had postponed the appointment until Friday.

Mrs. Bedayan said on cross examination by Bales Thursday, her son never showed remorse over the killings and did not discuss the Mafia activity with her prior to the murders.

She said he showed no symptoms of mental problems while a student at Alto-Edna Maguire School or Tamalpais High School but she noticed the change in his behavior after he began taking psychology classes at the College of Marin.

Mrs. Bedayan testified that her son had become convinced as a result of his psychology classes that he was full of hostilities which he must vent rather than suppress. For example, she said he hung a tire from the chimney and would beat it with a hose as an outlet for hostility.

But she expressed more concern about his withdrawal from family and friends.

Another Bar Music Issue On Agenda

Whether the Sweetwater bar in Mill Valley may continue to feature live rock music will be discussed Monday at a planning commission meeting at 8 p.m. at city hall.

Last week, the Mill Valley City Council denied a use permit for such music to the Old Mill bar. Residents in the downtown area have complained that both bars cause traffic and noise and attract many young patrons from outside the city.

According to Robert J. Hanna, associate planner, the commission will discuss whether the Sweetwater's permit should be modified or revoked.

Also Monday, the commission will review Safeway Stores' proposal to remodel their Miller Avenue store and add a carwash and expand a medical office complex on the same lot.

Originally, the commission had rejected the carwash plans. But their decision was overturned by the city council and returned to the commission for more study.

California Cattle Rustlers Busier

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A 77 per cent increase in rustling of California cattle the past six months may force ranchers to hire armed guards to protect their herds, a top state agriculture official says.

"Cattle producers of the state are hopping mad about the big losses and are taking steps to bring these losses to a halt as quickly as possible," Hans Van Nes, chief of the state's Bureau of Livestock Identification, reported Thursday.

Most ranchers are working "closely with their local sheriffs and the state to obtain increased patrols in the affected areas," he said. "Vehicles will be checked more often and some cattlemen may hire persons with professional peace officer qualifications to guard their herds."

In the first six months of this year there have been 124 "roadside slaughters," in which an animal is slaughtered on the spot it is killed. "They are considered 'crimes of opportunity,' but we know they are often performed by experienced rustler," Van Nes said.

He said the 124 figure was up 77 per cent from the 70 recorded in the same period last year.

The total number of lost, strayed or stolen cattle in California the first six months of this year was 2,701, a 10 per cent jump over 1972.

Van Nes also said that during the first six months of this year there have been 62 arrests for "grand theft, rustling," compared to 63 for the whole of 1972 and 45 for all of 1971.

Beef is a $1 billion a year industry in California, and Van Nes said to protect it against losses, cattlemen should improve their security.

Wife's Golf Mishap Case Tossed Out

DETROIT (UPI) — In a rare case, a jury of five women and one man has thrown out a woman's $100,000 damage suit against her husband.

The jury returned a verdict of no cause for action. The $100,000 in damages Mrs. Hunt sought would have come from the couple's insurance policy.

Mrs. Hunt took advantage of an 18-month-old Michigan law allowing husbands and wives to sue each other for the first time in civil cases.

She said she sued her husband because "as an individual I have a right to sue anyone."

Hunt's attorney, David Cooper, said the verdict probably meant the jury thought both parties were negligent in the golfing incident. The couple had told the jury different versions of how the accident happened.

Although she is unhappy with the verdict, Mrs. Hunt said she and her husband are still "harmoniously married." They have been married 22 years and have two children.

Hunt had no comment on the case, but his attorney said "he felt she was entitled to her day in court."

Oakland Fire

OAKLAND (UPI) — A two-alarm fire caused $30,000 damage to the Fox Oakland movie theater early today. Investigators said that it was purposely set.

Gate Spans' Traffic No Longer Soaring

A miniscule growth of traffic last fiscal year on the Golden Gate Bridge, the smallest since World War II, was reported today.

While a record-breaking 34,620,920 vehicles crossed the span during the year ending June 30, the figure was up only about one half of one per cent over the prior year, or 185,378 vehicles.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring also reported the first six months of this calendar year showed traffic down .24 per cent compared to the same period last year. He noted that the bridge's figures contrasted with the 2.35 per cent traffic increase this past fiscal year on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

Luehring also said a grand total of almost 585 million vehicles have crossed the bridge since it opened on May 28, 1937.

The annual traffic increase in the past decade on the bridge has ranged from 2.36 to 6.87 per cent.

Luehring said he was uncertain why traffic was falling, but suggested the reasons included increased use of transit and the gasoline shortage.

FIERY COLLISION KILLS TWO

A truck's burned-out cab dangles from an overpass at Wheeling, W.Va., after it and the larger truck at right collided in a merging lane just outside the Wheeling Tunnel. State police said Paul Carrara, 47, of La Habra, Calif., and his daughter Dawn Carrara, 16, of Peekskill, N.Y., were killed in the truck loaded with motorcycles, late Thursday.

Watergate Panel Sues For Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time in history, the President of the United States has to answer a lawsuit filed by a committee of Congress. The Senate Watergate panel wants the constitutional batttle over executive privilege to begin sooner than the usual procedure calls for.

The committee filed suit in U.S. District Court Thursday demanding that President Nixon turn over five tape recordings of Watergate related conversations made in his office and documents concerning the activities of 25 current or former aides.

It asked that Nixon respond within 20 days, the normal time limit for a private citizen, but one-third the time allowed for a government agency. The committee suit named Nixon as both President and as an individual.

The committee action followed by two days a White House response to a similar suit filed by Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, contending that releasing the tapes and papers would irreparably dmage needed presidential secrecy and that neither Congress nor the courts have the power to force the President to release documents.

Committee lawyers followed Cox's lead and argued that whatever claim of privilege Nixon made for the tapes was invalidated by his having let H.R. Haldeman, his former chief of staff, listen to two of them after he no longer worked for the government.

The committee subpoenaed the tapes and documents July 23 after testimony from former White House aide Alexander P. Butterfield that Nixon's conversations in the Oval Office and the Executive Office Building were taped.

Nixon wrote committee chairman Sen. Sam J. Ervin, DN.C., that he would not surrender the tapes but would consider "specific requests" for documents.

The suit said Nixon's refusal was "unlawful, unwarranted, and in breach of his legal duty to respond to and to comply with such subpoenas."

Haldeman told the committee he heard two tapes of conversations between Nixon and his former counsel, John W. Dean III.

The committee asked the court for a declaratory judgment stating that Nixon had no right to refuse, a writ of mandamus requiring him to carry out his official duties and release the subpoenaed material and a mandatory injunction forcing him to release the tapes and documents from his personal possession.

A response to the 20-day time limit is expected next week.

In another Watergate development, sources in Cox's office say that several corporate officials have admitted donating company money to Nixon's reelection campaign in violation of federal law.

The sources did not name the executives or the firms, but said they volunteered the information following recent disclosures that the board chairmen of American Airlines and Ashland Oil, Inc. donated company funds to the finance commitee of the Committee to Re-elect the President.

The sources said the newly disclosed donations amounted to about $100,000.

First Loot From Liner

FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (UPI) — Two former Navy aquanauts braved swift ocean currents and sharks Thursday to enter the cabins of the sunken Italian liner Andrea Doria, where they removed the first of the ship's treasure.

The divers did not reveal the contents of their first find, but they said most of the items sought, including $1 million in cash, were still in the inside of the 700-foot ship.

The first success in the attempt to salvage $2 million in cash and valuables was disclosed from the support ship Narragansett. Spokesman John Clark refused to tell what was taken from the cabins, although he confirmed articles were being brought up with surface cables and lines.

Operation Aimed At GI Dissidents Off

HEIDELBERG, Germany (UPI) — The U.S. Army today dismantled a brand new intelligence operation designed to keep watch over GI dissidents, calling it "inappropriate".

At the same time, an official Army statement slapped back at critics who have been accusing it of illegally tapping civilian phones in West Germany and denied the Army was persecuting dissident soldiers.

"An 8th Infantry Division document entitled Military Intelligence Counter-Dissidence Program has been rescinded by the 8th Infantry Division," the Army said in a statement issued Thursday from its Heidelberg headquarters.

"The document was determined to be inappropriate, as guidance on dissent contained in Army regulations is considered sufficient and soldier dissent within the command is presently at a very low level."

The cancellation came two days after The New York Times disclosed the existence of the 8th Infantry Division directive and quoted portions of it in a dispatch. The Times said a copy of the unclassified document had been leaked by a military clerk.

Defending its position in the matter of GI dissents, the Army statement said, "This headquarters is not directing an intensified military counterintelligence program against underground activities within the United States Army, Europe."

But the statement said the Army was obliged to protect its position as a combat-ready bulwark of North Atlantic Treaty (NATO) defenses, adding:

"We cannot ignore any possible threat to the safety of the command. However, it is misleading to characterize our legal and legitimate military intelligence and counterintelligence activities, conducted for many years, as aimed at soldiers who participate in lawful dissent.

"The major concern of commanders is with unlawful acts, such as espionage and sabotage to include bombing, arson and damage to equipment," it said.

In 1972, bomb attacks upon two U.S. Army posts in West Germany killed four U.S. servicemen and injured 30. A Communist revolutionary group claimed responsibility for the attacks and, police say, all leading members of that group have since been jailed pending trial or under court sentence.

Unidentified vandals did thousands of dollars worth of damage to military vehicles in an Army truck park earlier this year.

Military and civilian dissidents, however, say the Army has broadened the scope of its counter-intelligence surveillance efforts to go beyond defense against acts of sabotage and include surveillance of all shades of troublemakers.

Several GIs and civilians have accused the Army of illegally tappng German civilian telephones for this purpose. The Bonn government has denied that charge but confirmed its own agents have tapped phones legally at American request.

Rio Grande State in Brazil is often called the "Texas of Brazil" because of its cattle industry and "gaucho" cowboys.

Body Count Could Reach 30 In Texas Sex Killings

HOUSTON (UPI) — Police found two more bodies today buried in three-foot-deep graves in an East Texas pine forest, raising to 21 the number of murder victims — all believed young boys who were tortured, sexually abused and killed by a bachelor electrician and two teen-aged "assistants."

The first two bodies found today were dug up near Broaddus, Tex., on the shores of Lake Sam Rayburn 125 miles north of Houston.

Sheriff John Hoyt of San Augustine County said the two bodies found at the lake had been buried for "about six weeks." They were wrapped in clear, plastic bags and covered with lime — like most of the other victims discovered over the past three days.

One of the two teen-agers accused in the killings told police Thursday they will find about 30 bodies. If so, it would be the worst mass murder in U.S. history.

Police unearthed 17 bodies under a boat shed in southwest Houston. Two more were found Thursday night near those found today. "They are all within about a 600-yard radius," Hoyt said. The search went on for more bodies.

Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, was charged today at San Augustine, Tex., with four counts of murder. Justice of the Peace C. A. Renfro set bond at $100,000 on each count.

Police said they intend to take Henley to High Island near Galveston, Tex., where he said more bodies were buried in the series of sex murders over the past three years.

Another youth, David Brooks, 18, has confessed to police that he was involved in the slayings. He was questioned by Houston police today.

Henley, dressed in a gray jump suit and hiding his face in his hands, told a bizarre tale as he leaned against a patrol car at the lake today.

The story involved two teenagers—Henley and Brooks—who came from broken homes and hung around with Dean Corll, 33, an older man who they thought of as a substitute father. Henley said Corll was a homosexual.

"Dean decided he wanted to have sex with them, kill them and then he brought them out here," Henley said of the lake victims. "Corrll's parents have a place out here. He said the boat shed was getting full (of bodies)."

Henley said Corll told him he had killed "about 24" youths. And the youth said the older man offered to pay him money to bring him young boys.

"He offered to pay me $200 as a beginning price. He paid me some of that," Henley said, talking frantically, his speech coming in short bursts.

"I met Dean through David Brooks. I feel pretty grotesque. I almost cracked several times," he said of the three-year ordeal of murder and sadism. "I didn't feel I was going to be able to hold my sanity much longer."

And of the mothers, fathers and other relatives of the victims, Henley said:

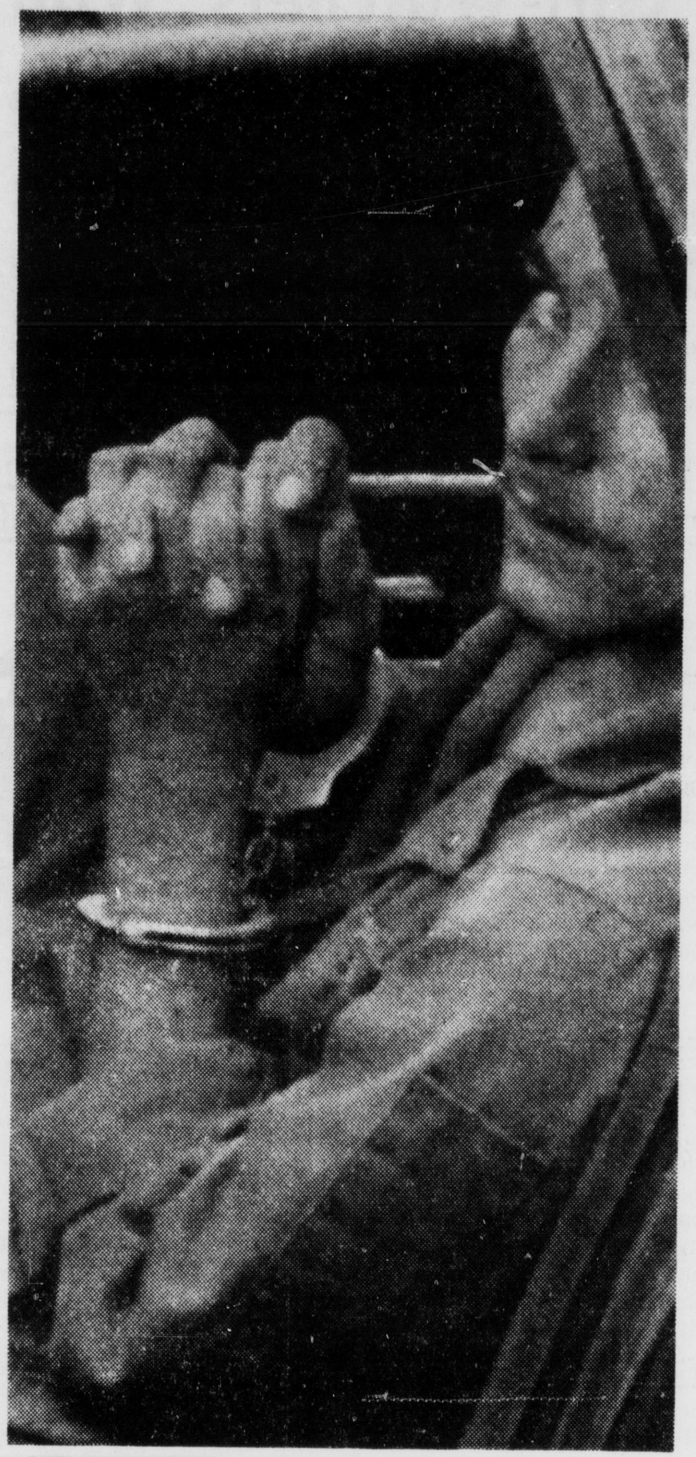
Police learned of the killings early Wednesday when Henley killed Corll at a paint-sniffing sex party. Henley called police after he killed his friend.



SEX SLAUGHTER — Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, accused as having taken part in a bizarre Houston sex slaughter, sits in a police cruiser after explaining how he killed Dean Allen Corll, 34, at a paint-sniffing sex party. Corll is alleged to be the mastermind of the sex murders, which may turn out as the worst mass slaying in U.S. history. (UPI Telephoto)

"He had a lust for blood," the youth said of Corll. "I was tired of him doing things like that, and it was either him or me right then."

The youngest of the victims was believed to be a 13-year-old boy missing since 1971. His parents spent thousands of dollars in a search for him.

Henley said Corll had previously told him about the burial ground at the boat shed. Henley also implicated the other teenager involved, David Brooks, 18.

Brooks was apprehended and said he took part in some of the killings. He told police they could find as many as 30 bodies buried in three different parts of the state.

"He has admitted to several of the murders, along with Henley and Corll," Police Lt. Breck Porter said of Brooks. "He admitted taking part in practically all of the killings over a three-year period."

In 1969 Corll rented the boat stall where the 17 bodies were found.

All the victims found buried in stall No. 11 were believed to be teen-age boys. Porter said Corll "never messed with anything but boys."

Some of the victims were buried in bathing suits. Some were naked. One youngster was dressed in a gold shirt. Another wore blue trousers. The 10th victim unearthed had a cord pulled tight around his neck.

"This guy must have spent half his time digging graves," Homicide Detective Larry Earls said. "This whole floor is covered with bones."

Henley said he and Corll were very close friends, and Henley's mother said, "Dean treated Wayne like a son and Wayne loved him like a father. He ate Easter dinner with us. He worked on my car.

"He loved to play with the kids."

Alton Brooks, David's father, said he hardly knew his son.

"I had no idea the boy had a problem of any kind," he said. "The boy and I have not been around each other in a number of years. I really don't know how you would describe him. He seemed a quiet boy, not aggressive in any way."

The most murders by one person in modern U.S. history involved the bodies of 25 farm hands found buried in a California farm along the Feather River in 1971. Juan Corona was convicted of the killings earlier this year and sentenced to life in prison.

SAFE, FOR A WHILE

In these days of rising crime statistics many people fear that they're sitting ducks for muggers in parks, so it's good to know a policeman's around. Apparently, that's how these St. Louis ducks and pigeons felt yesterday when they noticed Patrolman Fred Dobson and his horse taking a break from park patrol duty.

'Fort Wayne Story' To Courts?

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — The issue of whether or not Sen. George McGovern's name appears, or ever did appear, on the birth certificate of an illegitimate child born in Fort Wayne during the 1940s may be headed again to court.

The Indiana State Board of Health refused to honor an Allen Circuit Court order Thursday which authorized the records be opened to provide a "full, true and exact copy" of the certificate alleged to list McGovern as the father of an illegitimate child.

The Washington Post said last week that a brief mention of a "Fort Wayne story" in the Watergate hearings referred to a birth certificate listing McGovern as father of an illegitimate child born in the 1940s. McGovern denied having fathered the child. The mother was quoted as saying she had known McGovern, but said he was not the father.

Efforts by the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel to clear up the matter revealed that a father's name had been eradicated from a birth certificate in the Fort Wayne Board of Health's records.

State officials have turned to the attorney general's office for advice before complying with the order.

"We are now awaiting advice from the attorney general's office, but to my knowledge nothing has been done to attempt to force us to comply," said Kingston G. Ely, state registrar of vital statistics.

Officials with the Fort Wayne Board of Health, who were ordered earlier to open their records for the search of the purported certificate, said they are now considering court action to prevent examination of state records also.

The state health board was ordered Wednesday by Judge Pro Tem John Rogers to open its records when representatives of the News-Sentinel earlier in the day were denied access to them.

It would be "utterly impossible" for the state records to have been altered, Ely said, so if McGovern's name was originally listed, it would still be there.

On the other hand, it could not have been added subsequently.

The original records and two separate microfilm copies are on file here for all birth certificates, Ely said. He said the certificate in the Fort Wayne health office had been made from material abstracted from the original at the time of birth.

Park Plans To Change In Novato

The Novato Parks and Recreation Commission is planning to revise the city's recreation plan because the city's newly adopted general plan now envisages less growth than previously anticipated.

According to Recreation Director Edward W. Adams, the recreation plan was based on an ultimate population of 180,000 in the Novato area, while the new general plan has a limit of 90,000.

Commissioners recommended Wednesday night outlining seven districts in the city and determining what park and recreation facilities were needed within each district.

The district boundaries will be along natural boundaries such as hillsides and creeks and along thoroughfares, he said.

With the makeup of the population differing in various districts, the parks and recreation department plans to survey residents to determine what they want in recreation, he said.

Commissioners also agreed to sponsor activities of the 40-member Novato Horseshoe Club which is seeking installation of horseshoe pits at a city park, Adams reported.

The commission's next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Aug. 22 at the parks and recreation building, 917 Sherman Avenue.

Allende's Choices

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — President Salvador Allende failed to appease rightwing opponents Thursday with appointment of three military men. The National party said it was "stunned" that the officers accepted posts in the government.

A FUTILE GESTURE?

Police Ordered To Discourage Girl-Watchers' Wolf Whistles

But the ogles and catcalls at female passersby continued.

The worker said fewer men ate out on the street since the police detail arrived — "But only because they're married and don't want to get involved with all the publicity."

"The police think it's ridiculous too. Just yesterday one of the policemen saw an oriental girl. He said she was really nice," he added.

Some women are sticking up for their oglers. One seven-woman office on Asylum Street bore a sign on its fourth floor window proclaiming, "Hard hats, we're for you."

"These guys love their work," said the office spokeswoman. "They come out here in any weather, and now they can't even go where the girls are."

About two-dozen casually dressed hardhats who had congregated on one of the street corners roared with laughter as a helmeted young policeman fell off his motorcycle. The policeman grinned back.

Two policemen stood directing traffic at one intersection while two others, who looked very uncomfortable, stood nearby.

"We're not allowed to talk to the press," one said straight-faced . . . So the woman reporter returned to the office—followed by whistles and calls.

Brown Hits Charges Of His Mishandling

Novato City Mgr. Charles A. Brown, under fire for his handling of the resignation of Police Chief Allen V. Klemme, today rejected charges that he did not act decisively in the case.

In a three-page statement, Brown also blamed "imprecise reporting" in the press for the barrage of criticism leveled against him over the Klemme affair.

Brown also revealed in the statement that Klemme was not his first choice for chief when he was hired in March 1970.

The city manager said he had favored a Southern California candidate "who presented a more firm and more technical approach to law enforcement." But since the council obviously favored Klemme, Brown said he went along and recommended his appointment since he "considered the two candidates equal."

Chief Klemme left the department July 21 amid allegations by police officers of misconduct. A citizens group has charged Brown with mismanaging the case and called for his ouster.

"The uproar that ensued, in my opinion, need not have occurred," the city manager said. "Very little of it would have occurred had it not been for impatience on the part of some" and "imprecise reporting by the press which caused frustration, distrust and bitterness within the police department."

Brown also charged that local newspapers were determined to "make a Watergate out of an administrative problem which had been resolved."

In answer to accusations that the city manager waited too long to ask the chief to leave and so intensified turmoil in the department, Brown contended that he had acted properly.

He admitted being "unaware of the developing problem which existed between the men of the department and the chief." Yet, once the matter was brought to his attention in late November, Brown said, he investigated the situation thoroughly in December and January and discussed the problems with Klemme in February.

"I totally reject the charge that I did not act decisively during those three months," he said, adding that he thought he was justified "in attempting to salvage (Klemme's) career that spanned 20 years without blemish."

Brown also said he had done the right thing by "not yielding to demands that he (Klemme) should be terminated forthwith. He said many of the allegations of the chief's misconduct could not be "resolved conclusively inasmuch as they boil down to one word against another."

During the three months, Brown reported the chief was aware of his precarious position and knew "that I had developed serious questions about his leadership ability and that his future with the department was in jeopardy."

He said he made many efforts to understand the chief's position and determine whether he could regain his authority over his dissatisfied men.

When it became clear that Klemme could no longer be an effective chief, Brown said he and the chief "mutually agreed that he (Klemme) should seek employment elsewhere and prepare to submit his resignation."

Brown explained his reluctance to rush into dismissal proceedings by saying the chief had done a good job for two years and made many improvements within the department.

The city manager did not reply to the earlier complaints about his handling of the matter, he said, because he did not consider it ethical to debate his performance since "I am responsible to the council and it was fully informed on the situation."

But with Klemme gone and a new chief — John C. Coleman —appointed, Brown thought it was time to speak up on the matter "so the general public can make up its own mind, free from the emotionalism which has been fanned so heatedly during the past four months."

All-Evert Net Final Looms; Sharon Beaten

CINCINNATI (UPI) — There may be an all-Evert final round in the $75,000 Western Tennis Championships as Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, who might have prevented it, fell by the wayside.

Miss Walsh was defeated in women's singles Thursday afternoon with surprising ease by 15-year-old Jeanne Evert, 7-6, 6-2, and Miss Evert went on to drub Pat Pretorius of South Africa Thursday night, 6-0, 6-0, and move into today's semifinals against Evonne Goolagong of Australia.

Jeanne's more famous sister Chris, also of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., walloped Isabel Fernandez of Colombia, 6-2, 6-1, to move into the semis opposite unseeded Ilana Kloss of South Africa.

Defending men's champion Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., joined seven others in the quarter-finals with a 6-2, 6-1 triumph Thursday night over Australia's Dick Crealy.

Extra Jail Days Given For Pot

Two county jail inmates will spend 15 more days in custody after they pleaded guilty to charges of possessing marijuana in jail.

Edward John Bonadeo, 25, of Greenbrae, and Eric Ansley Van Horn, 22, of Mill Valley, drew the sentence Tuesday from Municipal Judge Robert A. Smallman, who declared the offenses misdemeanors.

The two were seen smoking marijuana in a hand-made pipe in the jail's trusty room May 25.

The 15-day terms will be added to terms the two already are serving. Bonadeo is serving six months for burglary, and Van Horn three months for driving without a license and violating probation.

Developers Cite Old Sewage Pact

A San Rafael development firm that has proposed a major development on the northeast tip of the city is turning to a longstanding agreement in order to assure itself of sewer connections, the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board learned Thursday night.

District managing engineer Edward Tibbetts said that Smith-Gonzalez Associates, which has proposed commercial development of portions of the Smith Ranch north of Northgate Industrial Park, is apparently seeking connections on the basis of an 18-year-old agreement.

When the district bought its plant site parcel from the Smith family in 1955, it agreed that surrounding property — or lands now proposed for development — would be annexed to the district, and served with connections upon payment of connection charges, Tibbetts said. The lands have since been annexed.

The board last night said that Smith-Gonzales has arranged to have former board members Arthur B. Carpenter, and other surviving members of the 1955 district board, give depositions on what their intent was when the old agreement was inked.

Carpenter will give his deposition in Marin Superior Court next Tuesday, Tibbetts said.

"We have never been approached for connections for this development at all," Tibbetts said, adding however the matter is apparently linked to plans for commercial development of Smith Ranch.

The board said it will study the matter on a continuing basis, and said it will consult legal counsel, according to Tibbetts.

The San Rafael planning commission last June approved a use permit under the city's building moratorium for a $8 million commercial project proposed by the firm for 40 acres along Higway 101.

The firm had dropped previous plans for a $40 million project on 190 acres because of opposition since the city's general plan is not completed.

The city council refused the firm's plea to refer the more massive project to city general plan consultants for immediate review to determine if it would mesh with the general plan, but has taken no action on the scaled-down version.

The Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board also:

SANITARY — Adopted a resolution extending until 1984 a contract for garbage pickup with the Marin Sanitary Service.

ORDER — Said the district will be able to meet an order by the Regional Water Quality Control board to expand plant capacity from 2.25 million to 2.40 million gallons daily, by an interim ponding treatment process.

FAIRGROUNDS — Said fees for connections for the county fairgrounds will be determined by area covered by buildings and by routine fixture unit charges.

BAY PARK — Said the district will meet with the county parks and recreation commission to discuss a proposal for a water reclamation project in the North Bay Front Park, but set no date.

NORTHGATE EAST — Signed a connection agreement for Northgate East, a project that will place an office and restaurant on a graded hillside north of the Civic Center.

CONNECTION — Extended for six months a connection permit for a single family home on Elivia Court in Marinwood.

ADJOURNAMENT — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m. Aug. 23 in the Civic Center.

Wins Order

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Police officer Doyle H. Dempsey, fired for throwing a rock during a disturbance at the sports arena, won a city civil service commission order for reinstatement Thursday.

Two Killed

CHICO (AP) — Two Martinez school teachers were killed Thursday night when their car and trailer collided with an oncoming van, the California Highway Patrol reported. They were identified as Martha Ann Chase, 48, and Charlotte Inabeth Roberts, 47.

Auto Maker Is Seeking Hikes

DETROIT (UPI) — American Motors, the smallest of the "Big Four" automakers, has become the first auto company to ask the federal government for an increase on its 1974 models to cover costs of new safety and emission equipment.

The price hikes, which are not expected to be granted by Sept. 5, the debut of new model vehicles, will range from $24 on the Hornet Sportabout four-door station wagon to $99 on the top-of-the-line Ambassador four-door station wagon.

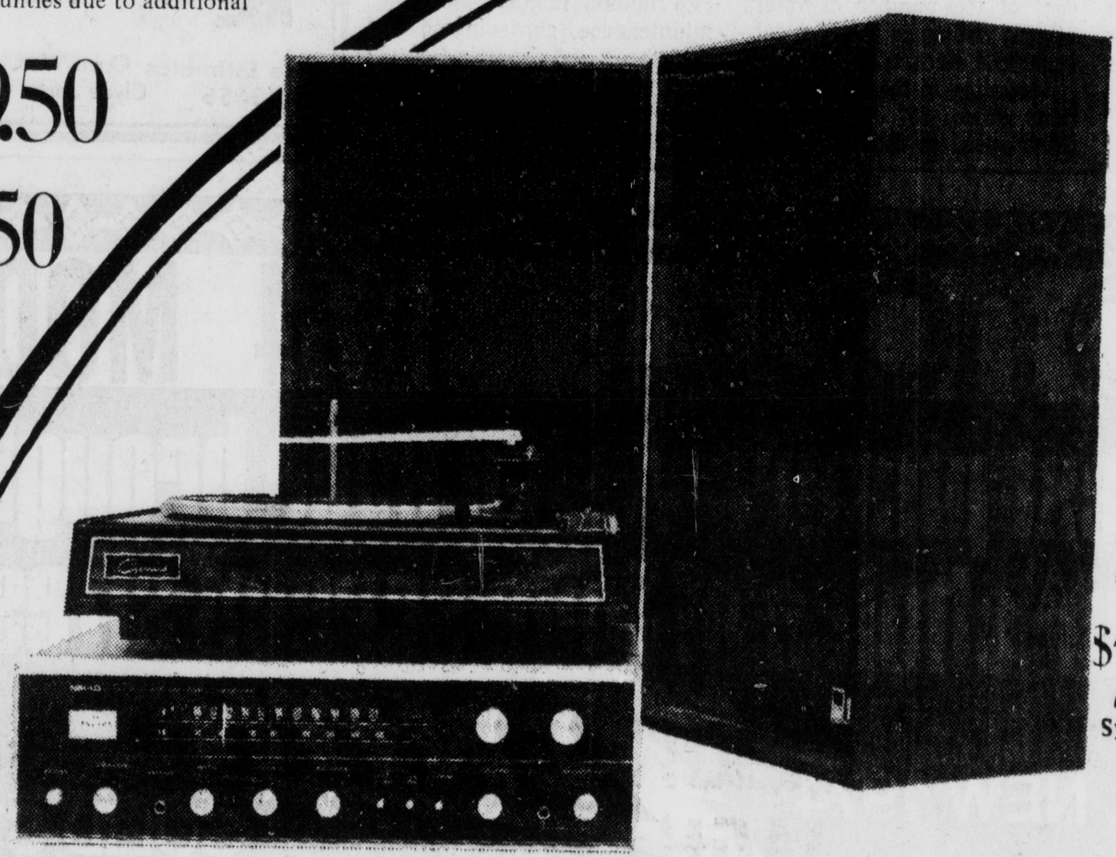
Big bass and a $113 saving too



Whenever we offer the Nikko 4010 receiver in a system around $250, it becomes a runaway best seller, and you can easily see why. The 4010 has an ample 24 watts (RMS) of power and an AM/FM tuner section that brings in the music loud and clear. There's a loudness contour switch to boost the bass that otherwise drops out at low listening levels, and microphone and guitar inputs give the 4010 unusual flexibility for a $189.95 receiver. The walnut case is included in the price.

The Garrard 40B is a totally reliable automatic record player with a gentle record changing action and damped cueing to help you keep your discs in mint condition. Our $60.90 price includes a base and an Empire 999XE/X elliptical diamond cartridge.

The Audio Design 1206's have a very big sound for their $119.90 a pair price; a good bit of the credit goes to the 12" bass speaker in each cabinet.

New Speakers From Fisher and a $140 Saving

The Fisher 205A AM/FM stereo receiver has 60 watts (RMS) of power, ample for anything but a mansion, and the tuner section outperformed those of many $500 receivers in our own lab tests. The 205A's convenience features include a midrange tone control in addition to the usual bass and treble controls, and the receiver is fully adaptable to four-channel whenever you're ready to convert. The price, without the walnut case, is $329.95.

Garrard's SL72B automatic record player has a sophisticated tonearm that has no trouble tracking even severely warped records, and the Synchro-Lab motor guarantees a rock-steady speed. The $116.90 price includes a base and an Empire 999XE/X elliptical cartridge.

Fisher's new XP-79 is a three-way, 10" acoustic suspension system that can turn out substantial low notes, and it has an exceptionally natural sound over its whole frequency range. The XP-79's. 79's usually sell for $279.90 a pair.

Save over $50 on a fine-sounding Sherwood system

Sherwood's S7100A is a lot of receiver for its $219.95 price: you get 44 watts (RMS) of power at low distortion, and the FM tuner section (always a Sherwood specialty) has a really excellent 65dB signal-to-noise ratio, so you'll get music undiluted by background noise. Even the AM tuner is pretty good, and you'll find all the convenience features you'd want. The walnut case is included in the price.

A low-friction tonearm, steady-speed synchronous motor and adjustable anti-skating control are among the features that help make the BSR 510A automatic record player an excellent value at $69.45. A base and a Shure M75ECS elliptical cartridge are included in the price.

Quadraflex Model 44's sound super good from the bass man's low E on up. They're two-way, ten-inch inch systems that are an outstanding value at their regular $159.90 a pair price.

Approval Given For Construction Grading

The Fairfax Planning Commission Thursday night approved the grading plan required for construction of the Canon Village and Tennis Club project.

Commissioners said the project met the seven conditions in the town grading ordinance and asked only that developers Robert D. Marshall and Denkmann and Co. provide written assurance they will be able to gain access to correct slide areas through the land of adjacent property owners, according to commission secretary Ernestine Healy.

Envisioned are 109 units on 88 acres along Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. Commission approval of the project's precise plans has sparked an appeal by eight citizens, who will appear before the city council at 8 p.m. Monday in the Fairfax Women's Club.

The commission will again meet at 8 p.m. Aug. 30.

Revolt Against Bolinas Sewage Disposal System

A revolt against the cost of a $1.6 million sewage disposal system planned for Bolinas surfaced Thursday with the circulation of petitions which could force a referendum on the purchase of a 95-acre property slated to be the site of the sewage treatment ponds.

Author of the petitions is C. L. Feusier, a Bolinas resident since 1947, and retired accountant. He said chief aim is to persuade or force directors of the Bolinas Community Public Utilities District to cut acreage for the sewer site back to 52 acres, and thus eliminate park or open space features, which he claims add unnecessary cost to the project.

In addition, the petitions ask that any state or federal grants received as reimbursement for district funds already spent on planning the sewage facilities be used for "expansion and improvement of our water supply and distribution system" instead of on land payments.

The utility board authorized a $250,000 contract for purchase of the 95-acre Sharon property adjoining Mesa and Overlook roads on July 2. It approved a $1,684,000 estimate for the entire system Aug. 1, in application for the state grant.

The petitions ask the district board to "fund only a minimum-cost sewer disposal plant installation" and not to purchase "extra land for other purposes which would increase materially our yearly maintenance and operation costs."

Under provisions of the state Public Utilities District Act, Feusier said, the utility board must either reduce the sewer site to 52 acres, or put the question to voters in a referendum, providing the petitions are witnessed by at least 10 per cent of the number of voters casting ballots in the last gubernatorial election.

According to the county elections office, 367 Bolinas residents voted in the 1970 governor's race. Feusier said he thus needs only 37 signatures to force board action or an election, but added that at least six property owners are circulating the petitions with the intent of getting a sizable number of supporters.

Recalling the 1971 revolt against an $8.1 million sewage project for both Bolinas and Stinson Beach, Feusier charged that the present board is repeating a history of runaway costs.

Feusier, who was appointed by the utility board as a citizen member of this year's budget committee, said he favored a return to the 1972 plan which ranged up to $724,500 in costs that were predicated on a 52-acre site.

Annual costs of operating the $1.6 million facility, including maintenance, gardening in the park area and amortization of debt, would be in the neighborhood of $60,000 to $70,000 per year, he asserted.

"This would require a $20 per month sewer charge, plus a 50-cent raise in the district's tax rate," he said.

He noted that three-fourths of the district property owners are in nonsewered areas, served by septic tanks.

It is based on a land retention system, in which the sewage is given tertiary treatment and disposed of through spray irrigation on the site.

Director Orville Schell has praised the system as one which recycles both water and sewage and provides several uses of the land for the community.

Board chairman William E. Niman has repeatedly stated that federal and state grants will cover 87 per cent of the project cost.

Feusier, however, responded "whether you get the money locally, from the state, or nationally, it's still squandering taxpayers' money. The cost of operating such a huge installation is far beyond what Bolinas people can afford."

The President has asked for a 5% decrease in energy consumption.

OFF
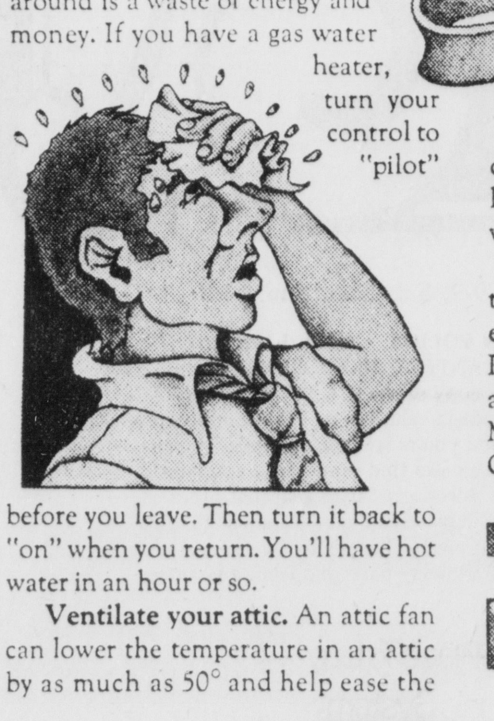
ON

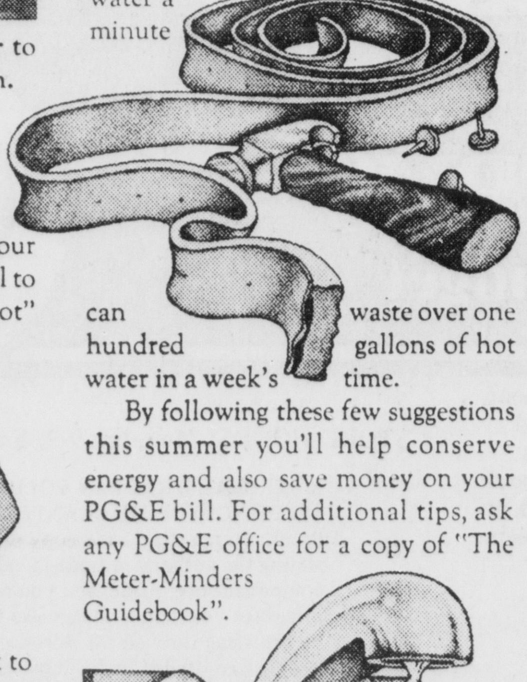
Turn your water heater to "pilot" before you go on vacation. Heating water when you aren't around is a waste of energy and money. If you have a gas water heater, turn your control to "pilot" before you leave. Then turn it back to "on" when you return. You'll have hot water in an hour or so.



Ventilate your attic. An attic fan can lower the temperature in an attic by as much as 50° and help ease the load on your cooling system. You'll have a cooler house for less energy.

Improve your insulation. Proper insulation and weatherstripping can help reduce the energy needed to heat and cool your house by as much as 45%.

Repair leaky faucets. One leaky hot water faucet dripping 90 drops of water a minute can waste over one hundred gallons of hot water in a week's time.



By following these few suggestions this summer you'll help conserve energy and also save money on your PG&E bill. For additional tips, ask any PG&E office for a copy of "The Meter-Minders Guidebook".

Stopgap Reprieve On Home Loans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed legislation Friday extending authority for the Federal Housing Administration to grant low-interest loans at least until Oct. 1 to ease the current squeeze on home mortgage money.

Simultaneous with White House announcement of Nixon's action, the FHA issued a statement saying its maximum interest rate on single and multiple-family dwellings was being raised from 7 per cent to 7.75 per cent.

FHA authority to grant low interest loans to would-be homebuyers expired June 30.

The interim measure signed by Nixon and cleared by Congress a week ago is designed to provide more time for the White House to reach agreement with the House and Senate on a bill to extend the FHA's authority to make such loans until next June 30.

The boost in the FHA's maximum interest rate had been expected. Housing Secretary James T. Lynn, whose department includes the FHA, said July 5 that he intended to raise the rate as soon as the FHA's lending authority was restored.

Under the new bill, FHA also gets renewal of its authority to insure loans for home improvements and mobile homes.

The bill that would extend FHA's authority for a full year has been stalled in Congress because of two amendments which House and Senate negotiators believe would precipitate a presidential veto.

One amendment, sponsored by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., would force the administration to spend money for subsidized housing programs which Nixon suspended to hold down government spending.

The other, by Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., would require the government to finance repairs on homes which passed FHA appraisal.

The Stevenson amendment was modified by congressional conferees to require the funds to be paid directly on the repair so that a recipient could not spend it for something else.

DINING OUT AND INNS

By HARRY CRAFT

Meat Scarcity, High Prices A Test Of Chef's Abilities

Conditions that have given cause to the saying that "Americans are the most overfed people in the world" may be in for a change.

They could be accompanied by increased pain in the pocketbook if not in the stomach.

But many restaurant owners, while voicing concern over high prices and food shortages, are still hoping for the best. Next week should begin to tell the story, which may vary from eating place to eating place. Some restaurateurs have managed to order and stock ahead, but it's an advantage that is likely to be short lived.

The real test as to whether they are able to survive or go out of business will rest in their adaptability to new conditions and in their kitchens. Those that have specialized heavily in beef dishes, for example, will be hit hard if they cannot substitute. And chefs who have been trained in working with a variety of dishes and making them attractive to customers will be in their glory.

That menus are in for a change is certain. But it will be on the left side as well as in the price column. In fact, there may be so many changes on a day-to-day basis it may be impractical to keep marking off items and adding others. Specialties, as particular foods become more available than others, will be the thing. The average restaurant goer will have to adjust his eating out habits.

It could happen. If it does, tag along with the experienced chefs. Among them, good bets will be those trained in Europe and those who have had to go through this before — who had to practice their profession during World War II, for example.

There are several of the latter in Marin. One who comes to mind at the moment is Bernard Epstein at Le Tonneau in Corte Madera. Born in Germany and trained in France, he is adept at making the most of what is at hand as well as producing those dishes of long tradition.

BERNARD EPSTEIN
Not overalarmed

In fact, he has already started. His Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night $3.95 complete dinners are much in demand. There is no real telling ahead of time what these specials will be. Bernard is a "food opportunist" and decisions are often made at the last moment. It's one way to put out a complete dinner these days at that figure. May it last.

He is not inclined to be overalarmed about what lies ahead. "If there is no beef," he said, "I'll use veal or lamb or chicken or sweetbreads. If there are none of these and nothing else comes along I can still turn out some pretty good omelets." (I'll testify to that and you'll find them on his lunch menu). He's bound that Le Tonneau will continue to serve good food.

ONE OF THE MOST undisturbed restaurateurs on this subject is Lou Sabella, whose family's seafood restaurant in Southern Marin is filling up its tables nightly and he is talking about having still another place in Sonoma County.

"You have to remember," says Lou, "that the price rise on seafoods started four years ago and the increase has been more than anything you've seen recently. If there is any doubt, just take lobster tails, abalone and crabmeat. Higher prices are nothing new to us. While we may have to raise them again on items in short supply, there are many that should continue with little if any change."

The $3.95 complete family dinner is nothing new to Sabella's, of course, and this has long been a favorite of its customers. There are plans now to increase the number of entree choices to about 10, probably including red snapper and sole and whatever can be purchased reasonably.

In seafoods, the fresh catches off the coast are the best buys.

Lou reports that wholesalers have informed him beef will will be available (at a price) but may not necessarily carry the same quality guarantee as before. "If it doesn't measure up, we simply won't offer it," he said.

He sees the present food situation as a challenge to restaurants — a time when they must find new ways to provide appetizing dishes at reasonable prices until those priced out of sight subside.

"For some time now we've been doing it," he commented, "and we expect to continue."

UP IN NOVATO, Pete and Doris Lind have just returned from a Hawaiian holiday, so it is apparent that they have not been gravely concerned about the weeks ahead and will take all problems in their stride.

Meanwhile, substitutions have already been made here — some at lunchtime, in order to save certain scarce foods for dinner. Plans are to serve more pork (if it doesn't go too high), lamb and of course seafoods, which are a regular thing at Shipwreck Pete's. And if you see such things mentioned as corned beef hash, stuffed peppers and lasagne, consider them seriously. Pete is a food man from way back and I have always found his table offerings excellent.

No doubt about it — Shipwreck Pete's will continue in business. It's already survived the highway problems.

JOE MORIN at the Medallion in San Rafael is looking at the situation optimisticly, in spite of the fact that "medallion" steaks are the specialty of the house.

But the Medallion menu has also been a varied one and the restaurant bills itself as "The House of Cannelloni." That offering should certainly continue as a favorite.

Fortunately, Joe says he has been able to hold to his price schedule. He'd like to continue doing so, but don't expect him to do the impossible.

THERE'S A NEW ENTERTAINER — Nancy Valencia — playing the organ and singing at New Joe's in Corte Madera. She has appeared in the county before and I recall that she is quite talented. Her schedule is Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights from 8 p.m. in the lounge.

New Joe's manager Rich Azzolino says he has been holding down prices but the point has been reached where he'll have to make some increases. And he believes he'll have plenty of company.

Anyone that buys food in the market will agree — he could be right.

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Energy Plan Clears Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A major measure designed to ease projected energy shortages in California narrowly has cleared the Assembly amid predictions of brownouts and blackouts in the state within a few years.

The controversial bill by Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, would establish a new five-member state commission and conduct experiments ot increase the efficiency of electrical products.

A new state tax on electricity would be imposed on state taxpayers, generating about $31 million annually for the commission's activities. The tax, .2 mil per kilowatt-hour, would cost the average homeowner about $3 and industries would pay proportionately more.

The bill (AB1575) was sent to the Senate Thursday on a 41-31 vote, the minimum margin necessary.

Stiff opposition to the bill is coming from several large utility companies and General Electric Co., one of the largest builders of nuclear power plants. The companies contend the bill would make construction of new power plants even more difficult than it is now.

The bill is based on the recent Rand Corp. report which recommended that the state should spend more time trying to conserve energy by increasing efficiency and less on building new power plants to meet ever-increasing energy demands.

The measure attempts to consolidate planning of development of energy sources in one agency and encourage new methods to reduce electrical use through increased efficiency of products ranging from electric toothbrushes to washing machines.

The proposed Energy Resources Conservation and Development Commission would spend most of the $31 million for research and development.

The commission would be composed of an economist, a lawyer, an ecologist, a member of the public and a scientist. None of the members could be connected with utility companies.

It would be the only agency in the state to decide the siting of nuclear power plants. Currently, a maze of local and state agencies must approve the plants in addition to the Atomic Energy Commission.

However, citizens still could block proposed projects by filing lawsuits, which could take years to settle.

DRINKING

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A bill designed to curtail the practice of courts to treat motorists previously convicted of drunken driving as first-time offenders has been overwhelmingly approved by the Senate.

The bill (SB1268) by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, was sent to the Assembly Thursday on a 24-3 vote.

During debate, Deukmejian noted California courts in the past year have invalidated the prior convictions of more than 25,000 drunken drivers so they could be sentenced as first-timers.

A key section of the bill reduces the jail term for a second drunken driving conviction to a mandatory 48 hours in jail rather than five days.

CONFLICT

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation requiring elected and appointed officials at every level of government in California to disclose their income and investments each year has advanced to the Senate floor.

The conflict of interest bill (SB716) by Sen. George Moscone of San Francisco, a Democratic gubernatorial contender, was approved Thursday by the Senate Finance Committee on a 10-0 vote.

PROPERTY

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A constitutional amendment to halt property tax assessment increases on homeowners was proposed Thursday by Assemblyman Joe A. Gonsalves, D-La Mirada.

The proposed amendment would provide that no owner-occupied homes may be valued at any higher value than their assessed value on March 1, 1973.

STATUS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A bill abolishing the requirement that women must disclose whether they were single or married when they register to vote has won unanimous passage from the Assembly.

Without debate, the bill (AB654) by Assemblyman Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico, was sent to the Senate Thursday on a 63-0 vote.

CAMPUSES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate, heeding warnings of rekindling campus unrest, Thursday defeated a bill requiring trustees of the state colleges to hear student recommendations on faculty hiring and firing.

The author, Sen. Walter Stiern, D-Bakersfield, said the legislation would merely give students a procedure to have their recommendations considered but not adopted.

The measure (SB118) failed on a 19 to 16 vote. It needed at least 21 for passage.

PROTECTION

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation permitting prophylactics to be sold in vending machines and virtually anywhere else has gained narrow passage from the Senate.

Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, said his bill (SB1179) would help prevent "unwanted conceptions and unwanted venereal disease, particularly in sexually active teen-agers."

The measure was sent to the Assembly Thursday on a 21-7 vote, the bare minimum necessary. A similar bill died in the Assembly Ways and Means Committee last year.

CAPITOL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Architect John Worsley has developed a plan to rebuild the century-old state Capitol and construct an addition around three sides of the Capitol's newer east wing, it was reported today.

The Sacramento Union said the plan, which would cost $57 million, was presented to Senate Republicans and Assembly Rules Committee aides earlier this week as a possible alternative to building a new legislative office complex.

Gas Chamber Revival Seen By Moretti

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A death penalty bill will be enacted before the Legislature adjourns next week, but it won't be the broad bill passed by the Senate, Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti predicted Thursday.

However, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger, a leading backer of death penalty legislation, warned that amendments restricting the death penalty could antagonize both foes and supporters of capitol punishment.

Younger said he is worried that the Assembly Criminal Justice Committee, which is scheduled to vote next Tuesday on the death penalty, might eliminate the killing of a police officer from crimes which would be subject to a mandatory death penalty.

If that happens, Younger said, the bill "will satisfy no one" and will force death penalty foes to circulate another initiative to enact the penalty.

Moretti predicted in a Capitol news conference that "the chances are better than even at this point" that a death penalty bill will be approved by the Criminal Justice Committee and then anacted by the full Assembly.

Moretti, a foe of the death penalty, is the Democratic chief of the Assembly. He predicted there "will be some amendments" to the Senate-passed measure by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach. But he said he didn't know what those amendments might be.

Currently the death penalty is all-but-totally abolished in California because only four rare crimes are punishable by death: treason to the state, perjury leading to the death of another, murder by a life-term convict and train wrecking that causes serious injury.

The major offences the Deukmejian bill would add to the mandatory death penalty list are murder of a peace officer and murder by hired killers.

A 1972 U.S. Supreme Court ruling permits the death penalty only in conditions where mandatory penalties are for specific crimes.

Younger, who followed Moretti's appearance with his own news conference, said of Moretti: "I think he probably can determine if a bill gets out" and what amendments will be made.

Younger said he had heard that the committee was considering striking the provisions of the Deukmejian bill which require mandatory death penalties for persons who kill a police officer.

Younger also disagreed with Moretti's statement that the Deukmejian bill could be made more restrictive.

GUIDES VOLUNTEERS

Creates Marin Play Areas

By PAT BALMES

"All my projects are with the community, with people who volunteer to work weekends," said playground designer Jay Beckwith of Sausalito.

The artist designs play complexes, procures materials and supervises volunteer unskilled labor. He builds his typical playground with volunteers in four weekends for about $1,000. His fee is one-third to one-fourth of the cost, he said.

His compensation has kept him "at poverty level," he said, until recently when he received $96,000 in revenue sharing funds to use to build 17 playgrounds in San Francisco with volunteer laborers from each community.

Strolling around his new play equipment at Marin Country Day School in Corte Madera, Beckwith said he is suspicious of buildings whose frames are underground. His bolted-timber structure, set on a bed of sand, is portable.

"I do not think that children play on equipment as much as they play with each other," Beckwith explained.

"Playgrounds that look safe are not. It is the dangerous looking ones that kids look out for," Beckwith remarked.

"If you give the kid more options, that is the last trouble you have," he said. A variety of equipment will give children more options so they will not play king of the mountain, struggling over one slide, he believes.

Last spring Beckwith spoke to the MCDS board members and "got them making drawings, all kinds of stuff." He integrated those ideas in a sketch, not an architectural drawing, he said.

"We ordered the lumber and we winged it, creating it at the site," he said.

More women than men volunteered and half the men did not know anything about building, he said.

"The reason I teach people to make playgrounds is so they would not need me anymore. I have been trying to teach women to build," Beckwith said.

HE DIVIDES women from men workers; generally they do not work well together, he has found. The women end up standing around because the men say, "Step aside. I'll show you how," said the artist.

While boys are building tree houses, girls are playing with dolls, he pointed out. Women do not know how to ask how to use a hammer. Men do not communicate the skill; they have a low patience level for specific instructions, he said.

"When I work with somebody, I teach them. I don't say, 'Come on. Hit the nail.' I say, 'Hold the hammer back a little. The reason the nails bend is that you are not holding the hammer face at right angles to the nail."

The hammer is the end of a whip which begins in the back. Any woman in reasonable health could use any of the tools of carpentry. They only have to learn to use them right, he said.

Books are in the library on how to use tools; get as much out of the book as you can, he advises. Find somebody who is willing to teach you about specific skills. Start out watching them work; do not ask any questions until you have gone quite a way studying, he advised.

IN MARIN, Beckwith built playgrounds at Beginning School in Marin City, Park and Alto-Edna Maguire schools and Children's Cultural Center of Marin in Mill Valley.

He has playgrounds in the making in Pacifica and South San Francisco, and is in the planning stages with five different groups including Belveron residents in Tiburon.

"It was absolutely predictable there would be a high population of young children without day care. The builders have been the longest time not putting the new play space in," he commented wryly.

"The women are having a little breakfast to ask the men's permission," he said, adding that if he were a woman he would not like to ask men for anything.

"A woman can come out to an all-in-one playground like this and watch 10 kinds; if she were out on a large blacktop area she could not do it. There are improvements which help take care of kids and free women to take care of other things," he said.

AN INSIDE-OUTSIDE show of Beckwith's playgrounds will be held at the DeYoung Museum in San Francisco beginning Sept. 22. A multi-media slide show of his playgrounds and a map of where to go to see them will occupy one room. Another will be a classroom where 60 children from the revenue sharing schools in San Francisco will daily come to design their own playgrounds.

Outdoors, Beckwith will supervise construction of a portable playground. If people come before 11 a.m., they can participate in his training sessions, he said.

Beckwith has built playgrounds for six years, the last two with community involvement.

Now that he is well known, people get in touch with Beckwith by word of mouth. He is booked up until next June.

He studied art and nursery school education at San Francisco State College and Pacific Oaks in Los Angeles. He used to paint and do ceramics and life drawing.

"THERE IS really nothing new in playgrounds; we came down from the trees," he said. What is new is that he is making a design solution that should not exist for a playground built by adults, he said.

"Adults say, 'Play should be segregated. We are going to give you this thing; you must play in it.' "

He prefers what is standard procedure in Europe, the adventure playground where generation after generation of children add on to it. It is in fenced-in areas in cities. The children put a tag on the wall to show that they are there and borrow tools to work on it, he explained. A council decides when it should be taken down.

"There is a place in Europe for planners of that kind. It will take me five years for a shot at one of those."

PERCHED ON a post of his all-in-one-piece portable play equipment at Marin Country Day School in Corte Madera, designer Jay Beckwith says with humor that he charges by the hour so community volunteers will hurry up and get the work done on their playground to get rid of him.

Money Troubles Hurt Shoe Sales

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — The world monetary mess has claimed a victim in France—deluxe high fashion shoes.

The French Footwear Federation said this week that some makers of the costly shoes gracing luxury shops on Fifth Avenue and other fashion centers are in trouble.

One reason, shoe industry officials said, is that the once-rich U.S. market can no longer can afford to buy many high-priced French imports with devalued dollars.

Moreover, the delicate shoes worn in the high fashion salon collections are running up against competition from Italian shoes.

The Italian lira is as shaky as the dollar, which means Italian exports cost no more to Americans, and Italian production costs much less than French.

IN THE TOWN of Romans, for centuries the center of deluxe French shoe-making, the Arnoux Salamander factory announced it is closing.

Another factory in the town, Seducta-Charles Jourdan, which is 75 per cent owned by the American firm Genesco, laid off 78 of its 1,300 workers. Other Jourdan employees went on strike, prompting national headlines of the crisis.

"The deluxe market mainly is in the dollar zone and it is troubled because of the dollar devaluation and the floating Italian lira," said Bernard Calaque, director of the economics department of the French Footwear Federation.

"The prices of French deluxe shoes now are very high for U.S. importers," he said. "There has been at least a 25 per cent drop in deluxe shoe orders in France."

CALAQUE SAID medium and law priced shoe exports were not affected.

The deluxe shoe industry, about 20 factories, is only one per cent of France's entire shoe industry but it is the cornerstone and pace setter.

A third headache for the French elegant shoe market—and all shoe makers—is the price of leather. Officials said the price soared 100 per cent in 1972.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Retirement-Idled Sister Is Becoming Pest To Busy Woman

DEAR HELEN:

Since my sister retired from her job a year ago she has made a pest of herself. She calls me every day, which is all right. But if I happen to be out, I get the third degree later. I must explain where I was, why, etc.

Yesterday I had a pie in the oven, and took time to remove it before I answered the phone. She sarcastically wondered why I let the phone ring five times. If the line is busy she demands who the H— I was talking to. After all I DO have other friends, but she makes me feel guilty if I'm not at her beck and call, including her in everything.

I don't want a fight, and I realize she is at loose ends, but how to keep my temper? — MRS. QUESTIONED BLUE

DEAR MRS. Q.B.:

Those "loose ends" need a few "nots." Like: "Do NOT become a querulous old party just because you're retired. . . "Do NOT depend on relatives for all your outside contacts. . ." "Do NOT ask questions you'd resent if they were asked of you."

Aim your sister toward organizations for retired people; introduce her to single friends; get her interested in volunteer work; and don't be afraid of a little constructive criticism. She needs it! — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Ever since the minister pronounced us "man and wife" (not "HUSBAND and wife"), I've been the little also-ran in the family. No matter what I accomplish, it isn't nearly as great as HIS accomplishments. I must make sure he wins most of the time (whenever we compete), or he sulks.

I mustn't talk about my job, but only listen to accounts of HIS work. Yet he expects me to work, as he likes the extra money.

I'm used to signing my name second on credit statements and stock proxies (even though it was MY earnings which bought the stock).

But it's the last straw when, after a tough week at the office, I spend all Saturday cleaning — only to have my well-rested husband greet guests at the door with "Please excuse the house. My wife isn't very domestic" — as if dusting the top of the refrigerator was my most important function. — ACCOUNT EXECUTIVE AT WORK, MERE WIFE AT HOME

DEAR EXECUTIVE-WIFE:

Why don't you buy your husband a subscription to MS. and stop playing up to his misplaced ego! Only a very "low-consciousness" man would insist his wife work, but give her no rights as his equal. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

This is the mother of Timothy Copeland, who can't walk yet, but has thousands of new friends, thanks to your column. The response to the letter about his accident and long rehabilitation has been tremendous. He has six large cartons of mail!

Our problem is that we can't answer all of it, though we'd like to. So could you please put a big "Thank You!" from Timmy in Helen Help Us? He's so happy with his letters.

Our family now realizes how many wonderful people there are, who care about their fellowman.

Incidentally, Timmy is home from the hospital, and out playing baseball (in his wheelchair). — MRS. A. COPELAND

GOWNS BY GALANOS

Back To School Dress Designed

FIRST YEAR

Aftereffects Of Birth Not Serious

(EDITORS NOTE: Fifth in a series on solving problems that most parents face during their children's first year of life, developed by the Office of Child Development, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.)

When he comes home from the hospital, the baby's eyes may have some white or yellow discharge caused by irritation from the medicine that was put in at birth. This should clear up within five or six days and should not get much worse at any time. If it does get worse or lasts more than a week, get medical advice promptly.

In passing through the birth canal, his head may become molded into a peculiar shape. It will become more normal in the first several weeks of life.

Body fluid may accumulate under part of the skin of the scalp causing a firm, spongy lump or "caput." This will disappear in a few weeks. Blood may accumulate on the surface of one of the bones of the skull, causing a soft squashy "cephalohematoma." This kind of lump may take several months to disappear completely. A child who always lies on one side of his head may show flattening and loss of hair on that part of his head. This, too, will disappear as he grows older. None of these "abnormalities" will cause any problems later in the child's life.

The stump of the umbilical cord, which is cut at birth, usually falls off by the fifth to ninth day. The naval then often shows a slight oozing or bleeding for a few days. If it does, clean it once or twice a day with soap and water or with alcohol. Bleeding or oozing that lasts more than two or three days after the cord falls off should be brought to the attention of a doctor.

Older brothers and sisters are often jealous of the time that you spend with a new baby. Try to find some time to give each of them special attention. Don't be surprised if a child between age 2 and 5 starts sucking his thumb, wetting his pants or asking for bottles or diapers in imitation of a new baby. He is simply seeking attention. Give him as much as you can of the attention he wants, but don't encourage him to return to baby-like habits. A child older than 3½ or 4 years can usually understand the arrival of a new baby and can help you take care of him.

Children between the ages of 1 and 3½ years should never be left alone with the baby. They are too young to understand the baby. They may pick him up, drop him, squeeze him too hard, sit on him, put dangerous things in his mouth or crib or hurt him with tools, utensils or furniture. This is not because they are "bad" but because they are naturally jealous of the new arrival. Give them the individual attention they need, let them help you and the baby in whatever way they can when you are with the baby, and never leave them alone with the baby.

ON BEING BLACK

People Are Still Naive About VD

BY SANDRA HAGGERTY
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

OAKLAND — "If you're black you can't catch VD" states the cover of the pamphlet in bold black letters. Page two continues, "But VD can catch you and kill you."

Even with today's supposed status of sexual enlightenment, venereal disease rates continue to rise, and far too many young people continue to be painfully naive about VD.

Many of today's youngsters are sexually active at a much earlier age. Sex is openly discussed and loudly heralded as the greatest contemporary invention. These youngsters say they are not hung up with the senseless inhibitions of their parents.

Still, "scoring" is one thing — it's chic to be sexually experienced. A case of the "clap" is something else altogether. Nobody wants to admit to having VD to his peers and certainly not to his parents.

Venereal disease services and awareness programs are greatly needed. Young people must become aware of the facts.

The knowledgeable may find them simplistic, but they bear repeating:

1. Sexual contact is the only way you can get VD.
2. Visible signs do not always appear in those who have VD.
3. Both gonorrhea and syphilis can be cured.
4. Treatment for VD will not keep you from getting it again.
5. Use of birth control pills increases a woman's chances of getting VD.
6. Using a condom will reduce (not eliminate) a man's chances of getting or spreading VD.
7. Medical treatment is necessary; VD is not a home remedy disease.

In the inner cities where black youngsters relate to such concepts as "Power to the People," it should be understood that "knowledge about health is power to the people." Young people must accept an adult responsibility for their own health if they are going to engage in adult sexual practices. They must demonstrate the degree of value they place on their friends and peers by being actively aware of venereal disease.

Black teen-agers are tremendously concerned about black genocide (primarily at the hands of the white man), but if they don't know the facts about VD they may be guilty of committing black genocide. VD can cause insanity, sterility, paralysis, blindness, heart disease and ultimately death. And it can be passed on to our children. Syphilis is no legacy.

Information about VD, confidential examinations and treatment are available through many county health agencies as well as private free clinics. Addresses of these clinics should be posted in every school, recreation facility, anywhere young people frequent.

The Correct Ingredients For Pickles

Three ingredients were dropped from a recipe for Zucchini Pickles in Wednesday's I-J Food Section through typographical error.

The recipe:

Cut four pounds of unpeeled zucchini into very thin slices, half or quarter the zucchini if large. Peel one pound of onions and slice thinly. Cover the zucchini and onions with water and add one-half cup of salt. Let stand one hour and then drain.

Combine with one quart vinegar, two cups sugar, two teaspoons celery seed, one teaspoon dry mustard, two teaspoons mustard seed and two teaspoons turmeric.

Bring to boil and cook three minutes.

Cotati Increases Employees' Pay

Salary increases of 5 per cent for employees were approved by the Cotati City Council Thursday night.

The council approved the increases in a budget session and also agreed to additional benefits requested by the police department.

The newly formed Cotati Police Officers Association received approval of its request for time and a half pay for overtime work plus increased life insurance benefits and an annual uniform allowance hike from $120 to $150. Officers may now also claim their birthdays as a new paid holiday.

The council heard that the salary increases should add approximately $3,000 to the proposed budget of $453,775.

Councilmen told other employees that they may return later in the year to request overtime pay and the additional holiday given to the police officers.

City Mgr. Paul W. Salfen also told the council that the annual audit of city financial records will begin the first week of September.

Budget review will continue at a meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Intertie Is Supported By County Chamber

The Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau has called upon the Marin Municipal Water District to proceed immediately with construction of the North Marin intertie.

In a letter to Marin County superviosrs, president Edward B. MacGuire said there is no logical reason to hold up the pipeline which would bring 4,000 acre-feet of water into the district annually.

The intertie was approved by voters in November 1970 and preliminary work was proceeding when the district board called a halt to the project. Directors have said the pipeline will not go forward until after the district presents a water supply bond iseue to voters in November.

MacGuire said water from the intertie is obviously needed since Marin Municipal has declared a threatened water shortage and banned new connections.

He said the small amount of water the intertie will produce will not thwart the countywide plan's proposal to limit the county's growth. Instead, the pipeline would provide the water neeced to permit the controlled growth which the plan calls for, he added.

"The county chamber is also deeply concerned about the depressing economic effects throughout Marin of a prolonged water connection moratorium," MacGuire said, even though the economic impact will not be felt for several months since most local contractors have a backlog of projects.

Some Marin Municipal board members opposed the intertie, saying that the public's overwhelming rejection of the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct in 1971 indicated district residents do not want Russian River water.

MacGuire disagrees. "There is no hard evidence that a majority of the citizens of Marin now feel that Russian River water is undesirable."

Two supervisors, Robert A. Roumiguiere and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., have criticized the district board for stalling the northern pipeline and urged that it be built immediately.

Injured Officer Is Recovering

Turner, 25, suffered a compound fracture of the left leg and back injuries.

He and two other officers were investigating at an apartment house at 32 Lakeville Street at 9:30 p.m. when Turner scaled a fire escape to see if windows were secure. When he turned to climb down, a step gave way and Turner fell to the ground.

No sign of a prowler was found.

Does West Just Guess Or Is There A Correct Opening Lead?

"Please settle a problem that is driving me and my friends out of our so-called minds," requests a correspondent. "We want to know if there is a correct play for West in the accompanying hand or if he just has to guess at the right play.

ACTION PLAN

"West thought long and anxiously about his opening lead. Since South seemed to be ready for a club lead, West decided to open a spade.

"Declarer put up the jack from dummy and East played the deuce of spades. West died a thousand deaths but South had to win the trick with the king and West breathed again.

LOW DIAMOND

"Then South led a low diamond and West had a horrible problem. If he put up the king of diamonds, it might turn out that his partner had the singleton ace. But if West played a low diamond instead of the king, it might turn out that South had led from the ace-queen and then West would lose his trump trick.

"West stewed anxiously for a long time and then played the king of diamonds. As you can see, that was the end!

"Did West make a horrible play of just an unfortunate guess?"

CAUSED MISERY

Just imagine that West had not doubled. If South led a low diamond, it would be obvious that he could not be trying to hoodwink West. If South had the ace-queen of diamonds he would take a normal finesse through East for he East for he would have no reason to suspect that West had the king of diamonds.

In other words, the situation would be quite clear and West could safely play his low diamond.

ANSWER: Pass.

This is an acceptable opening bid if the long suit is a major, but a doubtful bid if it is a minor suit.

Early Hartford Park An Urban Renewal

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Bushnell Park was Hartford's first city park and one of America's earliest urban beautification projects.

It was established in 1854 on land purchased by the city along the Connecticut River. When the city bought the land, it was an industrial slum and dump. The park was named after the Rev. Horace Bushnell, whose work led to the purchase.

AQUARIUS — Did Jack Benny's birth on Feb. 14 make him stingy and want to drive an antique auto? PISCES — Robert Young, born on Feb. 22, is no doctor. But good ratings on "Marcus Welby, M.D." make his future secure as an actor. ARIES — Shirley Jones smiled when she was born March 31. She still does as mother on "The Partridge Family."

TAURUS — Glen Campbell was born June 22, the seventh son of a seventh son. But he still lost his regular TV show.

GEMINI — Dean Martin, born June 17, has a birthday party every week. CANCER — David Brinkley was not born a twin on his July 10 birthday.

LEO — Julia Child is "The French Chef." But her Aug. 15 birthday was nothing to do with it. VIRGO — Larry Hagman was born Sept. 21, the son of Mary Martin. He shone in "I Dream of Jeanne" but flickered out on "The Good Life." LIBRA — Lloyd Haynes was born Oct. 19. But Pete Dixon, the role he plays on "Room 222," was delivered by ABC.

It wasn't Zodiac that made him conservative. CAPRICORN — Mary Tyler Moore, a Dec. 29 baby, reads the signs in her life, the TV ratings on her show.

DALLAS MUSEUM

Meso-American Cultures Pushed

By ALINE WILLBUR
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

(Christian Science Monitor photo)

DALLAS — The acquisition of 60 of the finest pieces of pre-Columbian art known, catapults the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts into prominence in the field of Meso-American cultures.

A well guarded secret ("We are not at liberty to divulge where and from whom the pieces were bought") and the union of two foundations, the McDermott and the Algur H. Meadows, led to this coup.

The museum already had an impressive pre-Columbian collection. Started 30 years ago as "station-wagon-art" with friends of the museum bringing artifacts they either had excavated themselves or bought at the excavation sites, the collection had grown through the years grouped and exquisitely displayed around the great Tlaloc, the rain god "who makes things grow." The huge ceramic head and his two acolyte frogs were found together and dominate the museum's main pre-Columbian gallery.

Thirteen cultures of ancient Mexico, ranging in date from the first great Meso-Amrican culture, the Olmec, 1000 B.C., to the last, the Aztec, A.D. 1500, are represented in the new acquisition.

The strength of the new addition is in Olmec culture and blends beautifully with the museum's present collection. But what links every period of the new acquisition more than their chronological order is the human, moving quality of its pieces. They speak to the heart as much as to the scholar:

The two seated terra-cotta figures, gossiping behind the half-raised hand, legs nonchalantly crossed over ankle; the seated man and woman, arms entwined after a hard day's work, whose faces have the strength and serenity of some of Millet's peasants; the standing female figure whose rounded forms and whimsical face recall Windblad's porcelain figures; the seated man with black-and-white turban, whose shell eyes gaze at the world with detachment.

The outstanding piece of the Olmec period is a white jade mask. How has it been bleached? No one knows. With the full, massive look of a bitter Roman Caesar it was fully hollowed in the back, including the nose and could have been worn in ceremonial rites. Another extraordinary mask, this one in stone, is of Teotihucan art, which gave us the Pyramids of the Sun and Moon outside of Mexico City. The incredible impact of the mask is still there in spite of the fact its slit eyes have lost their jade and the mouth its enamel teeth.

The Olmec section is mostly made of large stone pieces and ceramics, but there are a number of smaller figurines in jade and hard stone probably intended for an offertory cache, and several pendant ornaments in the shape of legendary animals. They are fashioned and delicately carved in the blue-green jade favored by the Olmec over the bright green jade admired by the Maya.

Outstanding ceramics from the West Coast of Mexico again stress the human representative quality of the period: a brown seated couple from Jalisco with white His and Her turbans, and the extraordinary dog from Colima who looks so "doggish" seen from the side and so human when seen from the front.

The most recent piece in the acquisition is a standing figure of Xipe, the God of Spring, dated AD 1400-1500. This Aztec piece is unique in that it shows in the bent arm the four holes where it was tied back together after it was broken and repaired by a pre-Columbian craftsman. The figure still retains the red coloring on the body of the "impersonator." Spring coming out of its winter skin: the maillot-like skin was laced in the front and back, the mask face is ready to fall off revealing the inner shell eyes and double mouth.

The 60 new pieces will be incorporated into the existing collection and the entire pre-Columbian galleries will be re-installed in larger quarters in the fall.

Potatoes Popular

LONDON (UPI) — Britons ate 2.3 per cent more potatoes in 1972 than in the previous three years, the Potato Marketing Board reports.

MOTION PICTURE GUIDE

The Marin Motion Picture and Television Council provides these ratings of movies now being shown in Marin County. The council's findings are from California and National Parent-Teacher Association magazines and Parents' Magazine unless otherwise noted. More complete reviews may be obtained by calling the San Rafael City Library.

FAMILY

"Living Free" — Dramatic but laugh-provoking adventure of lion cubs in this excellent sequel to "Born Free." A delight.

"Lost Horison" — Spectacular musical version of classic tale about Shangri-La, that mystical hidden valley of brotherly love and tranquil longevity. Fine cast.

"Neptune Factor" — Exciting and novel adventure science fiction. Film is about the efforts to locate an undersea laboratory which has been swept to the bottom of the sea by an earthquake.

"Support Your Local Sheriff" — A western spoof along the lines of "Cat Ballou." A goldmining town where a lawman never lasts longer than a day gets a newcomer to take the job. Some dialogue in poor taste.

"Ten From the Show of Shows" — Hilarious skits from classic Sid Caesar TV shows of early fifties. Pure entertainment.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"Day of the Jackal" — Highly charged but lengthy thriller about an attempt on the life of DeGaulle by extreme right-wing French OAS because he decolonized Algeria. Some suggestive scenes.

"Hireling" — Set in 1920s in England this unusual film details the sensitive relationship between a chauffeur and the aristocratic lady he drives. She has a nervous breakdown and he helps her regain her confidence.

"Legend of Boggy Creek" — Documentary that chronicles the experiences of people who live around Fouke, Ark., who have seen a huge, hairy monster for the past decade. All attempts to track this creature have failed. (Box office Magazine)

"Paper Moon" — An expertly crafted sophisticated comedy drama recreating the 1930s. A traveling salesman-con artist agrees to deliver a 9-year-old orphan girl to an aunt in Missouri. The girl is tough, smokes and swears and outswindles her mentor. Disturbing thought is that some children may copy her behavior.

"Rio Lobo" — Due to a Yankee spy a secret gold shipment is stolen by Confederates. After the war the U.S. colonel in charge of the gold searches for the informer but becomes involved with several other problems. Usual action-packed old fashioned western.

"Slither" — Deathbed instruction from a fellow convict sends a man on a wild chase for hidden stolen money. This kooky off-beat comedy has plenty of profanity and violent overtones.

BORDERLINE

(Most sources say Adults Only)

"Bananas" — A raw, raucous satire on subjects formerly held sacred. Plot is an excuse for all kinds of hilarious situations.

"The Family" — Considerable violence in this action drama about a professional killer for a syndicate. He eventually develops a conscience until he finds he has been used by the woman he loves. (Boxoffice Magazine)

"Legend of Hell House" — Intriguing haunted house horror movie is steeped in parapsychological lore. Some violence and vulgarity but phenomena is reported in a low-keyed fashion.

"Man Who Loved Cat Dancing" — Attempted gang-rape, vicious handfights and heavy gunplay do not commend this film to the impressionable young. During a train robbery in the Old West, a married woman is abducted in the get-away. Love develops between the thief and the lady. (Film Information).

"Touch of Class" — Sophisticated French bedroom farce. An expose of the difficulties inherent in an extramarital affair. Frank sexual scenes and language.

"Travels With My Aunt" — A prim British accountant becomes embroiled in drug smuggling, illegal currency and theft. Film seems excessive, turning a light comedy into heavy fantasy.

"You'll Like My Mother" — Violence and a graphic birth scene add terror to this story of a pregnant war widow who receives a hostile reception from her late husband's family. She uncovers some shocking secrets.

ADULTS ONLY

"Blume In Love" — Self-indulgent romance about a lawyer who tries to win back his divorced wife. Story told in confusing flashbacks. At an adult level love, hate and sexual feelings are explored from a man's point of view.

"Play It As It Lays" — Penetrating film on insanity peculiar to Hollywood alone. Story of a fading film star. An unloved ex-wife, mother of an institutionalized child, is always a victim.

"Scarecrow" — The poignant story of the friendship of two likable drifters is punctuated by comic incidents. Sex, nudity, cursing and violence are played for realism rather than exploitation.

Vandals Damage A Construction Site

Vandals ripped up electrical conduits and damaged plumbing at a bank under construction at 1707 Grant Avenue, causing damage estimated at $800, according to Novato police.

The contractor, Carl N. Swenson Co. Inc. of San Jose, reported the damage occurred between 6 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Japanese Attend A-Bomb Memorial

NAGASAKI, Japan (UPI) — About 11,000 persons attended a memorial service Thursday on the 28th anniversary of the World War II atomic bomb attack against Nagasaki.

Mayor Yoshitake Mototani used the occasion to denounce nuclear tests such as those conducted by France in the South Pacific.

The port city in western Kyushu was the second Japanese city hit by an atomic bomb in August, 1945. Three days earlier, Hiroshima became the first target of an atomic bomb.

Giant Vessel On First Trip

The bulk-carrying ship Ultramar left Wednesday night for Vancouver, B.C., to be loaded with coal for Japan. It is 892 feet long and can carry 81,500 tons of cargo.

The $30-million vessel was turned over by the National Steel & Shipbuilding Co. to the new owners, Aries Marine Shipping Co. of New York, and assigned to the U.S. Merchant Marine.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Does West Just Guess Or Is There A Correct Opening Lead?

"Please settle a problem that is driving me and my friends out of our so-called minds," requests a correspondent. "We want to know if there is a correct play for West in the accompanying hand or if he just has to guess at the right play.

ACTION PLAN

"West thought long and anxiously about his opening lead. Since South seemed to be ready for a club lead, West decided to open a spade.

"Declarer put up the jack from dummy and East played the deuce of spades. West died a thousand deaths but South had to win the trick with the king and West breathed again.

LOW DIAMOND

"Then South led a low diamond and West had a horrible problem. If he put up the king of diamonds, it might turn out that his partner had the singleton ace. But if West played a low diamond instead of the king, it might turn out that South had led from the ace-queen and then West would lose his trump trick.

"West stewed anxiously for a long time and then played the king of diamonds. As you can see, that was the end!

"Did West make a horrible play of just an unfortunate guess?"

CAUSED MISERY

Just imagine that West had not doubled. If South led a low diamond, it would be obvious that he could not be trying to hoodwink West. If South had the ace-queen of diamonds he would take a normal finesse through East for he East for he would have no reason to suspect that West had the king of diamonds.

In other words, the situation would be quite clear and West could safely play his low diamond.

Early Hartford Park An Urban Renewal

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Bushnell Park was Hartford's first city park and one of America's earliest urban beautification projects.

It was established in 1854 on land purchased by the city along the Connecticut River. When the city bought the land, it was an industrial slum and dump. The park was named after the Rev. Horace Bushnell, whose work led to the purchase.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

AQUARIUS — Did Jack Benny's birth on Feb. 14 make him stingy and want to drive an antique auto? PISCES — Robert Young, born on Feb. 22, is no doctor. But good ratings on "Marcus Welby, M.D." make his future secure as an actor. ARIES — Shirley Jones smiled when she was born March 31. She still does as mother on "The Partridge Family."

TAURUS — Glen Campbell was born June 22, the seventh son of a seventh son. But he still lost his regular TV show.

GEMINI — Dean Martin, born June 17, has a birthday party every week. CANCER — David Brinkley was not born a twin on his July 10 birthday.

LEO — Julia Child is "The French Chef." But her Aug. 15 birthday was nothing to do with it. VIRGO — Larry Hagman was born Sept. 21, the son of Mary Martin. He shone in "I Dream of Jeanne" but flickered out on "The Good Life." LIBRA — Lloyd Haynes was born Oct. 19. But Pete Dixon, the role he plays on "Room 222," was delivered by ABC.

SCORPIO — Walter Cronkite was born Nov. 4. Was it fate that decided he would become a CBS news anchorman? SAGITTARIUS — William Buckley was born to wealth on Nov. 24. It wasn't Zodiac that made him conservative. CAPRICORN — Mary Tyler Moore, a Dec. 29 baby, reads the signs in her life, the TV ratings on her show.

DALLAS MUSEUM

Meso-American Cultures Pushed

By ALINE WILLBUR
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

DALLAS — The acquisition of 60 of the finest pieces of pre-Columbian art known, catapults the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts into prominence in the field of Meso-American cultures.

A well guarded secret ("We are not at liberty to divulge where and from whom the pieces were bought") and the union of two foundations, the McDermott and the Algur H. Meadows, led to this coup.

The museum already had an impressive pre-Columbian collection. Started 30 years ago as "station-wagon-art" with friends of the museum bringing artifacts they either had excavated themselves or bought at the excavation sites, the collection had grown through the years grouped and exquisitely displayed around the great Tlaloc, the rain god "who makes things grow." The huge ceramic head and his two acolyte frogs were found together and dominate the museum's main pre-Columbian gallery.

Thirteen cultures of ancient Mexico, ranging in date from the first great Meso-Amrican culture, the Olmec, 1000 B.C., to the last, the Aztec, A.D. 1500, are represented in the new acquisition.

The strength of the new addition is in Olmec culture and blends beautifully with the museum's present collection. But what links every period of the new acquisition more than their chronological order is the human, moving quality of its pieces. They speak to the heart as much as to the scholar:

The two seated terra-cotta figures, gossiping behind the half-raised hand, legs nonchalantly crossed over ankle; the seated man and woman, arms entwined after a hard day's work, whose faces have the strength and serenity of some of Millet's peasants; the standing female figure whose rounded forms and whimsical face recall Windblad's porcelain figures; the seated man with black-and-white turban, whose shell eyes gaze at the world with detachment.

The outstanding piece of the Olmec period is a white jade mask. How has it been bleached? No one knows. With the full, massive look of a bitter Roman Caesar it was fully hollowed in the back, including the nose and could have been worn in ceremonial rites. Another extraordinary mask, this one in stone, is of Teotihucan art, which gave us the Pyramids of the Sun and Moon outside of Mexico City. The incredible impact of the mask is still there in spite of the fact its slit eyes have lost their jade and the mouth its enamel teeth.

The Olmec section is mostly made of large stone pieces and ceramics, but there are a number of smaller figurines in jade and hard stone probably intended for an offertory cache, and several pendant ornaments in the shape of legendary animals. They are fashioned and delicately carved in the blue-green jade favored by the Olmec over the bright green jade admired by the Maya.

Outstanding ceramics from the West Coast of Mexico again stress the human representative quality of the period: a brown seated couple from Jalisco with white His and Her turbans, and the extraordinary dog from Colima who looks so "doggish" seen from the side and so human when seen from the front.

The most recent piece in the acquisition is a standing figure of Xipe, the God of Spring, dated AD 1400-1500. This Aztec piece is unique in that it shows in the bent arm the four holes where it was tied back together after it was broken and repaired by a pre-Columbian craftsman. The figure still retains the red coloring on the body of the "impersonator." Spring coming out of its winter skin: the maillot-like skin was laced in the front and back, the mask face is ready to fall off revealing the inner shell eyes and double mouth.

The 60 new pieces will be incorporated into the existing collection and the entire pre-Columbian galleries will be reinstalled in larger quarters in the fall.

Potatoes Popular

LONDON (UPI) — Britons ate 2.3 per cent more potatoes in 1972 than in the previous three years, the Potato Marketing Board reports.

MOTION PICTURE GUIDE

The Marin Motion Picture and Television Council provides these ratings of movies now being shown in Marin County. The council's findings are from California and National Parent-Teacher Association magazines and Parents' Magazine unless otherwise noted. More complete reviews may be obtained by calling the San Rafael City Library.

FAMILY

"Living Free" — Dramatic but laugh-provoking adventure of lion cubs in this excellent sequel to "Born Free." A delight.

"Lost Horison" — Spectacular musical version of classic tale about Shangri-La, that mystical hidden valley of brotherly love and tranquil longevity. Fine cast.

"Neptune Factor" — Exciting and novel adventure science fiction. Film is about the efforts to locate an undersea laboratory which has been swept to the bottom of the sea by an earthquake.

"Support Your Local Sheriff" — A western spoof along the lines of "Cat Ballou." A goldmining town where a lawman never lasts longer than a day gets a newcomer to take the job. Some dialogue in poor taste.

"Ten From the Show of Shows" — Hilarious skits from classic Sid Caesar TV shows of early fifties. Pure entertainment.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"Day of the Jackal" — Highly charged but lengthy thriller about an attempt on the life of DeGaulle by extreme right-wing French OAS because he decolonized Algeria. Some suggestive scenes.

"Hireling" — Set in 1920s in England this unusual film details the sensitive relationship between a chauffeur and the aristocratic lady he drives. She has a nervous breakdown and he helps her regain her confidence.

"Legend of Boggy Creek" — Documentary that chronicles the experiences of people who live around Fouke, Ark., who have seen a huge, hairy monster for the past decade. All attempts to track this creature have failed. (Box office Magazine)

"Paper Moon" — An expertly crafted sophisticated comedy drama recreating the 1930s. A traveling salesman-con artist agrees to deliver a 9-year-old orphan girl to an aunt in Missouri. The girl is tough, smokes and swears and outswindles her mentor. Disturbing thought is that some children may copy her behavior.

"Rio Lobo" — Due to a Yankee spy a secret gold shipment is stolen by Confederates. After the war the U.S. colonel in charge of the gold searches for the informer but becomes involved with several other problems. Usual action-packed old fashioned western.

"Slither" — Deathbed instruction from a fellow convict sends a man on a wild chase for hidden stolen money. This kooky off-beat comedy has plenty of profanity and violent overtones.

BORDERLINE

(Most sources say Adults Only)

"Bananas" — A raw, raucous satire on subjects formerly held sacred. Plot is an excuse for all kinds of hilarious situations.

"The Family" — Considerable violence in this action drama about a professional killer for a syndicate. He eventually develops a conscience until he finds he has been used by the woman he loves. (Boxoffice Magazine)

"Legend of Hell House" — Intriguing haunted house horror movie is steeped in parapsychological lore. Some violence and vulgarity but phenomena is reported in a low-keyed fashion.

"Man Who Loved Cat Dancing" — Attempted gang-rape, vicious handfights and heavy gunplay do not commend this film to the impressionable young. During a train robbery in the Old West, a married woman is abducted in the get-away. Love develops between the thief and the lady. (Film Information).

"Touch of Class" — Sophisticated French bedroom farce. An expose of the difficulties inherent in an extramarital affair. Frank sexual scenes and language.

"Travels With My Aunt" — A prim British accountant becomes embroiled in drug smuggling, illegal currency and theft. Film seems excessive, turning a light comedy into heavy fantasy.

"You'll Like My Mother" — Violence and a graphic birth scene add terror to this story of a pregnant war widow who receives a hostile reception from her late husband's family. She uncovers some shocking secrets.

ADULTS ONLY

"Blume In Love" — Self-indulgent romance about a lawyer who tries to win back his divorced wife. Story told in confusing flashbacks. At an adult level love, hate and sexual feelings are explored from a man's point of view.

"Play It As It Lays" — Penetrating film on insanity peculiar to Hollywood alone. Story of a fading film star. An unloved ex-wife, mother of an institutionalized child, is always a victim.

"Scarecrow" — The poignant story of the friendship of two likable drifters is punctuated by comic incidents. Sex, nudity, cursing and violence are played for realism rather than exploitation.

Vandals Damage A Construction Site

Vandals ripped up electrical conduits and damaged plumbing at a bank under construction at 1707 Grant Avenue, causing damage estimated at $800, according to Novato police.

The contractor, Carl N. Swenson Co. Inc. of San Jose, reported the damage occurred between 6 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Giant Vessel On First Trip

The bulk-carrying ship Ultramar left Wednesday night for Vancouver, B.C., to be loaded with coal for Japan. It is 892 feet long and can carry 81,500 tons of cargo.

The $30-million vessel was turned over by the National Steel & Shipbuilding Co. to the new owners, Aries Marine Shipping Co. of New York, and assigned to the U.S. Merchant Marine.

Japanese Attend A-Bomb Memorial

NAGASAKI, Japan (UPI) — About 11,000 persons attended a memorial service Thursday on the 28th anniversary of the World War II atomic bomb attack against Nagasaki.

Mayor Yoshitake Mototani used the occasion to denounce nuclear tests such as those conducted by France in the South Pacific.

The port city in western Kyushu was the second Japanese city hit by an atomic bomb in August, 1945. Three days earlier, Hiroshima became the first target of an atomic bomb.

Burglary, Pot Charges Denied

A Belvedere youth accused of illegally entering his parents' home has pleaded innocent to felony charges of burglary and possessing marijuana.

William Edward Hoefer, 18, will have a preliminary hearing Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

Belvedere police said they caught Hoefer climbing out of a window at his parents' house, even though the Hoefers had forbidden their son to enter the residence while they were on vacation.

Police said a quantity of marijuana was found in his pocket.

Benefit Concert Set In Berkeley

An evening of music for the benefit of the Ali Akbar College of Music will be presented Aug. 25th in Berkeley, not at the college in San Rafael as erroneously reported yesterday by the Independent-Journal.

The concert at the Berkeley Community Theater will start at 8 p.m. and will feature sarod master Ali Akbar Khan and teachers from the college: flutist G. S. Sachdev, tabla drummer Zakir Hussain and Kathak dancer Chitresh Das. Appearing with them will be Alan Watts, philosopher, lecturer and teacher, an authority on Zen.

Wilderness Land Supported For Oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special federal-state commission recommended Thursday 75 per cent of 80 million acres of federally-owned wilderness in Alaska be opened for oil, gas and other mineral drilling and mining.

But the Federal-State Land Use Planning Commission, in a report filed with Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, said any mineral resources exploration and development should be allowed only under permits and leases, with adequate environmental safeguards.

Some of the 60 million acres the commission recommended for mineral development overlapped with nearly 41 million acres the panel said should be set aside for primary use of water foul preserves, fish and wildlife habitats, recreation or archeological or other scientific study.

The commission's recommendations dealt with federal lands that comprise 19 per cent of Alaska. The lands, scattered over various parts of the state, do not include 90 million acres of federal land already set aside for parks, wild life refuges, military preserves and other public uses.

Nor do they include 103 million acres of federal land the state of Alaska is entitled to under the 1959 act making it a state, or the 42 million acres Eskimos and other native people can claim under the Alaska Native Claims Act.

Morton has until Dec. 18 to make his recommendations to Congress on what should be done with the federal wilderness areas, which range from remote mountains to arctic ice fields and includes wild rivers.

The petroleum and mineral industries on one side and environmental groups on the other form the extremities of the interests lobbying Morton and Congress on uses of the land, comprising the largest tract of wilderness.

The 80 million acres does not cover the North Slope oil fields or the route of the proposed trans-Alaskan pipeline that will bring oil to Valdez, on the southern coast. But Interior Department officials said the land is known or suspected to contain vast mineral resources, in many cases in some of the most scenic spots.

Some options open to Morton in his recommendations include parks, wildlife refuges and forest preserves. Or he could propose leaving the land in the general public domain, opening it up to homesteading or selling it to private interests.

Another option would be to open some of the land to the state of Alaska, which so far has selected 63 million of its 103 million acres, or to the Alaska natives, who have not made any selections.

The commission, which held numerous public hearings on the subject, conceded that one of its main problems was to strike a balance between resources development and environmental and scenic preservation.

It said it also had to recognize the rights of natives and other persons living mostly off the land. Therefore, it said all 80 million acres would remain open to hunting and fishing.

Of the 60 million acres proposed for mineral development, the commission said 2.68 million acres should be limited to oil and gas extraction.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

TV Group Hopes To Give Marinites A New Soapbox

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Click on the trusty living room television set in September and there, a few turns of the dial away from the networks' new fall cops-and-robbers shows and situation comedies, you may see your neighbor, or perhaps yourself, giving views on an issue of particular community interest in Marin County.

It will be possible, promises the nascent Marin Community Video Association, to watch a running account of the issues and events surrounding the attempt to recall the mayor and two city councilmen in Corte Madera over Community Antenna Television (CATV) — or Cable TV.

This Corte Madera coverage, which will be the first, and others to follow will be brought to the citizens of Marin County by the citizens of Marin County, say members of the Marin video group.

"Every place should have public access television, every place will have public access television and we will have it here," said Gerald Pearlman, a member of the ad hoc executive committee of the community video association.

Pearlman, 39, once produced community-oriented programs broadcast over cable TV in Canada. A resident of Muir Beach, he is a former director of the community services district there. In 1968, he helped produce an award-winning film account of the events during the Democratic convention in Chicago.

The Federal Communications Commission has agreed with Pearlman. Last year it ruled that all cable TV companies in the top 100 markets — practically the entire U.S. — make at least one public access channel available by 1977 for the free use of the community.

Although local cablecasters are not legally bound to provide public access for four more years, Televue Systems, the largest cable TV company in the county with 35,000 subscribers, has indicated that it will provide some air time before the Corte Madera recall election Sept. 18.

If it does, the Corte Madera shows — following a scenario written by a part-time reporter, Barbara Boxer —will include the history of the controversy, discussions with shopping center developers and their opponents who sparked the recall vote, plus man on the street interviews intended to provide a barometer of local feeling.

Tentative plans are for two programs, about an hour long, Sept. 16 and 17, the two days before the recall vote.

Under the FCC ruling, the cablecaster must let any citizen put a show on the air on a first-come, first-served basis. The cable company must make basic production facilities available free or at a nominal cost. And the cablecaster is forbidden to exercise control over what people put into their programs.

So, short of being libelous or obscene, a person can do anything he wants on video tape and it will go on the air and can be seen in any home in the county hooked to cable TV. There are six cable companies in Marin with a total of about 54,000 subscribers.

"Whether the Rotary Club has something to say about what they're up to, or the Black Panthers, or whoever, it's going to go on the air," Pearlman vowed.

With hardly any money and no equipment of its own, the video association, its members readily admit, is more of a concept and an idea powered by the energy and talents of its dozen or so executive committee members and their less active friends.

The association recently moved into a tiny cinderblock cubicle of an office at 21-A Corte Madera Avenue in Mill Valley. Steve McNamara, publisher of the Pacific Sun, donated the space in a corner of the Sun's new quarters.

Another association member, John Korty of Mill Valley, has provided some video equipment that has been used on practice tapings and will be used for the Corte Madera work. Korty, an independent videotape producer, has contributed footage for "Sesame Street," "Electric Company" and the "ABC Movie of the Week."

The association — arranging incorporation as a nonprofit organization —is operating on a $1,500 grant from the Cambium Foundation of San Francisco and members are preparing applications for other grants to supply enough money for the group to operate for the next three years.

Members envision a central studio office with cameras, editing equipment and a tape library or resource center. Plans are for four satellite bureaus, probably in Novato, San Rafael, Corte Madera and Marin City.

The bureaus will be essentially storefront operations manned by a community person the association will train. It will be equipped with a portapak outfit, which consists of a handheld camera and videotape recorder that is carried with the aid of a shoulder harness. The equipment sells for about $1,500, putting it within reach of schools, churches and community groups.

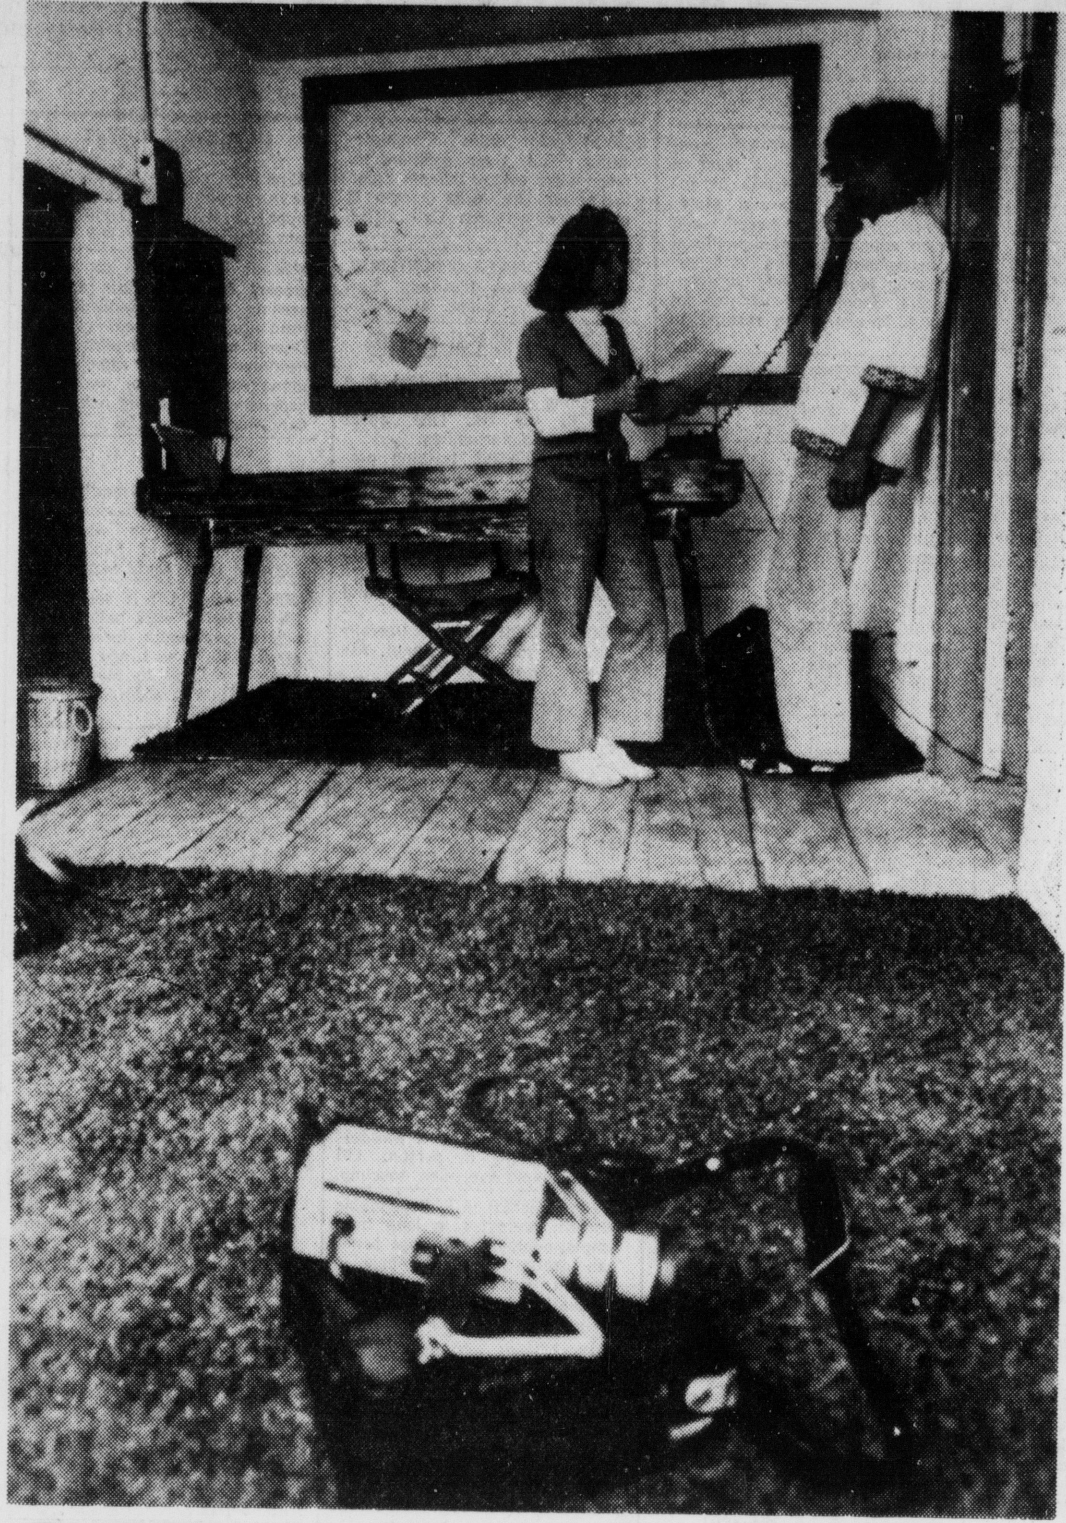
Once established, its members say, the association will produce education programs, community rap sessions, programs for the elderly, documentaries, news shows and programs that will be a showcase for local musicians, artists and craftsmen.

"For example," said Pearlman, "not everyone can play clubs like the Lion's Share. Consequently a lot of talent in this county withers on the vine and dies. When we get this thing going, people can come and play and sing or dance and do what they want to do."

Pearlman estimates that it will take more than $100,000 to get the association established and going on a full-time basis.

The object of it all, he says, is to bring the attention of citizens home by providing decent information about local issues that concern them. The association also will provide the medium for people to participate in their community and to get their views heard.

"That's what public access is, information. And information," according to Pearlman, "is energy."



TV CENTER — Writer Barbara Boxer and producer-director Gerald Pearlman occupy this tiny cublicle which is the home of a big idea: television coverage of the community, by the community, for the community. The Marin Community Video Association, of which Mrs. Boxer and Pearlman are part, plans local shows under a new Federal Communications Commission order opening channels to the people.

Attorneys For Nude Bathers Say Marin's Law In Conflict

By GEORGE NEVIN

California law gives citizens the right to get all-over tans if they want and Marin County has no right to bar skinnydippers from private beaches, a battery of attorneys argued Thursday.

Nonsense, countered a deputy district attorney: most people are offended by the sight of sun worshippers cavorting in the nude.

Those arguments and others were presented to Municipal Court Judge Robert A. Smallman in the latest legal skirmish over nude sunbathing on West Marin beaches.

Smallman said he will announce a decision Monday on a move by the four attorneys to free eight persons of charges of being nude in public.

The attorneys — Fred A. Hurvich and David Mayer of the American Civil Liberties Union, Peter J. Muzilo of the Marin Public Defenders office and Paul Kayfetz — attacked the arrests on three grounds:

1. Nude sunbathing is an expression of philosophy and is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees free speech.

2. State law already has preempted the field with laws against improper sexual behavior, and Marin has no right to pass an antinudity ordinance if the state Legislature has not.

3. The criminal complaint which charges the eight merely accuses them of "wilfully appearing nude in a public place," and is too vague for the attorneys to prepare an adequate defense.

The attorneys got nowhere with Judge Smallman on the constitution issue. Smallman held that freedom of speech does not protect exhibiting a nude body.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Girard R. Corteau challenged Hurvich's contention that state law already has preempted the field of nudity laws. "Nudity per se does not involve obscenity, lewdness or sexual activity," he said. Since nudity doesn't equal sex, there is room for both for state laws against improper sexual behavior and a county ordinance forbidding nudity, he said.

"If nudity isn't a sexual activity," asked Judge Smallman, "what is it? Why did the board of supervisors pass an ordinance against it? Why do pepple get uptight about it?"

"Because," Corteau replied, "People frown on it. They don't approve of it."

Failure to keep nudes away from public beaches means "you're telling people they can't use a certain beach if they don't want to be offended by people cavorting in the nude."

Hurvich took a different point of view: "Under Mr. Corteau's version, there is no place for the nudes. A large segment of the population is being deprived of equal protection of the law."

The state, he said, allows room for everyone to do what he wants. "Little Beach (near Muir Beach, where three of the eight were arrested) has traditionally been a place where nudes could go."

The five persons arrested on Bolinas Beach actually were on private property, which is not covered by the county ordinance, which mentions "public lands," the attorney contended.

They claimed this means land actually owned by a politicial entity, and not merely land used by the public, which is termed a public place. Such places can be either publicly or privately owned, they argued.

Little Beach, too, is private, although leased to the county.

The eight persons accused of nudity are Stephen Francis White, 22, and Susan Mehrings White, 23, both of Oakland, and Walter Voigt, 33, of Strawberry, all arrested on Muir Beach; and Roland Jacopetti, 37; Elizabeth Kreusler Ehmann, 39; Nancy Joan Denmark, 26, and Theodore Harvey Saladin, 36, all of Bolinas, and Peter Holmes Davidson, 30, of Colorado. They were arrested at Bolinas Beach.

Canon Village Appeal On Fairfax Agenda

The Fairfax Town Council will hear a citizens' appeal of planning commission approval of a precise plan for Canon Village and Tennis Club at 8 p.m. Monday in the Fairfax Women's Club.

The council will consider granting Survival Inc., the county recycling agency, a $1,000 subsidy and an animal control ordinance toughening current regulations

Ex-POW Sets Wedding Date

DALLAS (UPI) — Charles Stackhouse, a Navy lieutenant commander who spent six years in a Hanoi prison, will marry a Dallas airline hostess Aug. 21 at Lemoore, Calif.

Stackhouse, a Cincinnati native, met Alanna Whelan in May and proposed to her the night of a salute to Vietnam veterans at the Cotton Bowl.

Best man at the wedding will be Stackhouse's cellmate in Hanoi, Air Force Capt. Robert Lilly of Dallas.

Tight Zone Rules Eyed In Belvedere

A set of amendments designed to tighten up Belvedere zoning ordinances has been approved by the city planning commission and referred to the city council.

City Mgr. William L. Cavalli said the council will discuss the changes at a special meeting Aug. 28.

The changes adopted by the commission Wednesday incorporate suggestions by the consulting firm of Livingston and Blayney in their Belvedere planning study, completed in November 1971.

According to Cavalli, the major change is one which outlaws building on substandard lots belonging to home owners with adjacent land.

The revisions would also create two new zones, open space and cove multiple dwelling zones.The latter would differ from the regular multiple-family dwelling zone in that it would allow professional offices, churches, club buildings and apartment offices with a use permit.

Height limits for structures would be reduced from 42 to 36 in the multiple zone and from 32 to 28 feet in all other zones.

There are also changes limiting the amount of land covered by buildings, setting minimum lot sizes for various sized apartment houses, and changing the length of sideyard setbacks.

About 60 per cent of California's population lives in the state's eight southernmost counties.

Ross Council Set To Purchase Land

The Ross Town Council decided Thursday night that $66,250 is a fair price for a 1.7-acre parcel of land near the post office and agreed to purchase it for a park.

The property had been declared surplus by the Ross Valley Flood lood Control Zone.

Mayor Frederick S. Allen said an independent appraisal had shown "there was nothing wrong" with the price the county had put on the parcel.

The property has been discussed as a possible site for a tennis court, but Allen and other councilmen assured neighbors who objected that no decision had been made yet on the exact use of the property.

He also told them that the "alternative" to turning the land into a park is to see it used for 11 rental units on the Kentfield side of the property and one residence on the Ross side.

The council agreed to try to work out a deal with the county to pay for the property over a two-year period, using federal revenue sharing funds.

The council also took a brief look at the proposed $359,675 budget for 1973-74 and tentatively accepted it. Mayor Allen set another meeting for 8 p.m. next Thursday in the town hall to adopt the budget and set the tax rate.

The budget, while higher than last year's spending program of $330,542, is expected to allow the tax rate to drop from $1.83 per $100 assessed valuation to $1.75.

The Ross Town Council Also:

HILLSIDE — Granted Roger and Peggy Dillan permission to build a residence on a hillside lot at Southwood Avenue and Ivy Drive over the objections of some neighbors who feared water runoff.

HOUSE — Learned from attorney Blackie Burak that a house at 16 Glenwood Avenue, formerly used as a branch of the communal More House, now is empty and is to be rented to a single family.

DOGS — Tabled discussion of a tougher antidog ordinance after Councilman Roy Farrington Jones said "no one moved to Ross for that."

PERMIT — Granted Joseph Filipelli of 28 Southwood Avenue permission to enclose two porches, add a deck and carport to his house and to use a detached barn as a guest cottage or servant's quarters.

Two Killed As Planes Collide

CASTROVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Two military training planes trying to land at the same time bumped into each other Thursday, killing a Vietnamese trainee and his instructor.

One T41 trainer crashed and the other landed safely.

Neither of the victims was identified.

Strict Grooming

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — The Nevada State Prison has dropped its strict grooming standards for prisoners in favor of hair regulations more "in keeping with the times."

Sergeant Is Killed In Car Crash

T/Sgt. Donald Ellsworth Paugh, 38, of 1165 San Jose Boulevard, Novato, was pronounced dead on arrival at Sonoma Valley Hospital.

The California Highway Patrol said the accident occurred at 2:05 a.m. when his car drifted off the road and struck a tree. Officers said he may have fallen asleep at the wheel.

Doctor Suggests Recycled Bodies

LONDON (UPI) — A British doctor and conservationist said Thursday that bodies should not be buried or cremated, but instead should be reprocessed with sewage to make fertilizer and fuel.

"We do not burn sewage. Why burn the dead?" Dr. S.L. Henderson Smith said in a letter to the magazine World Medicine.

Most people, he said, have a Victorian attitude to death and are too squeamish to face the facts. But he said a new approach to the disposal of bodies could provide useful fertilizer and even help solve the world fuel crisis.

WILL THE REAL FRUSTRATED FARMER PLEASE STAND UP

Impeccable is a "dirty word" compared to the condition of this residence. The garden abounds with a wide variety of vegetables, the home has 2 oversized bdrms. The huge family room was a welcome addition, complete with used brick fireplace. There is a guest cottage on the premises. Oh yes! This home is on a level site & within walking distance to all modern conveniences. The price? I'll give you a hint - it's under $41,000. A brand new listing.

ALMANAC

BY U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Friday, August 10, the 222nd day of 1973, with 143 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

Herbert Clark Hoover, 31st President of the United States, was born August 10, 1874.

Also on this day in history:

In 1776, a committee of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson suggested that the United States adopt "E Pluribus Unum" as the motto of the Great Seal of the newly independent nation.

In 1833, Chicago was incorporated as a village. Population: 200.

In 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill met in Quebec for the sixth conference of World War II.

Bread Hike

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Town Talk Baking Co. and Weber Baking Co. have announced 2-cent-a-loaf bread price hikes to offset higher costs of ingredients.

Lowly Catfish Assuming Role In California Dining

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The ugly, whiskered catfish, introduced into California waters in 1874, has reached a new peak of popularity.

Beef shortages and threats of soaring prices have turned the consumer to possible new meat substitutes and leading the list, according to the state Department of Fish and Game, is the catfish.

Ralph "Catfish" Young, spokesman for the department who works out of Long Beach, attributes the new, surging interest in catfish to its easy catchability and wide availability across the state.

The state spent about $275,000 in catfish programs last year, stocking Southern California waters with half a million, yearling fish. Smaller ones also were planted throughout Northern and Central California.

"There is a tremendous interest in catfish," Young said. "We've had quite a few inquiries about where to catch them and requests for a free catfish recipe booklet are running about 300 a day."

Young advises that the catfish, distinguished from other fish by its smooth, scaleless body and eight long whiskers, can be taken on ordinary or even the crudest of tackle. He suggests such baits as mackerel, live bluegills, minnows, crayfish, clams, "in fact they seem to like something that smells a bit. They really go for odors."

The catfish, Young adds, is "very sensitive to vibrations and that type of thing. They seem to hear noises. You've got to be very, very quiet and very, very patient. Patience is the essence."

Young, who has tried most of the 21 recipes he helped compile in the booklet (available by writing the department at 350 Golden Shore, Long Beach, Calif. 90802), calls the catfish "one of the best tasting I've ever eaten. It has a chickenish texture and it's rather delicate. I think it's very delicious. I like fish and I think it's one of the best."

The ingredients for Mother Hubbard's Secret are: 3 pounds skinned catfish fillets, 1 gallon water, 1 cup salt, ½ cup beer or ale, ½ cup prepared mustard, 2 cloves finely minced garlic, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ¼ teaspoon liquid hot pepper sauce, ½ cup toasted sesame seeds and 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and paprika.

To put it all together add salt to water and stir until dissolved. Pour brine over fish and let stand for 30 minutes. Remove fish from brine and dry. Combine beer, mustard, garlic, Worcestershire sauce, liquid hot pepper sauce, ¼ cup sesame seeds and parsley. dip fish in mustard mixture and sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup sesame seeds and paprika. Place on well greased grill inside smoke oven. Cook in a very slow oven at 250 degrees for one hour or until fish flakes easly when tested with a fork. Serve with hot biscuits. Serves six or more.

The ingredients for the Colonel's Favorite are:

2 pounds catfish steaks, ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, 2 cups cooked rice, 2 tablespoons grated onion, ½ teaspoon curry powder, 5 thin lemon slices, ¼ cup butter or margarine and chopped parsley.

To put it all together cut the fish into serving size portions place in a well greased baking dish 13-by-9 by 2 inches. Sprinkle fish with salt and pepper. Combine rice, onion, and curry powder and spread over fish. Top with lemon slices and dot with butter. Cover. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for 25 to 35 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove cover the last few minutes of cooking to allow for slight browning. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves six.

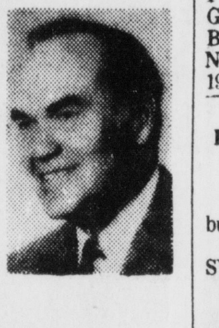
HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Mass Seafood Poisoning Can Be Frightening Aboard Ship



We know what happened recently when food poisoning broke out on a cruise ship. Before World War II, a similar outbreak occurred on one of our Navy cruisers. The ship was in the English Channel when more than half the crew developed nausea, vomiting, abdominal cramps, and severe diarrhea.

There were not enough heads or hospital facilities to handle the emergency. Since it was a nice, warm, sunny day, the victims were helped to the deck where they could lie down and receive medication as needed.

IT WAS A MESS, but there was nothing else to do. At the height of the emergency, the men were helpless due to severe prostration and dehydration. Had we been at war, the cruiser would have been at the mercy of the enemy.

The incidents were recalled when I read about an epidemic of ciguatera poisoning that developed in 24 or 25 crew members aboard a Brazilian cargo ship bound for Mobile, Ala.

This is one of the most common forms of fish poisoning in Caribbean waters. Oddly, it is caused by fish that are considered excellent foods elsewhere. The list includes sea bass, grouper, barracuda, and snapper. It is not known why these fish are toxic after living in certain waters.

ACCORDING TO the report, symptoms developed from 30 minutes to six hours after lunch. The victims developed severe prostration, vomiting, dizziness, muscle aching, and joint pains in the extremities. Tingling and burning of the tongue, dryness of the mouth, abdominal pain, and profuse watery diarrhea also ensued.

The toxic material in the fish also affected the nervous system, because some developed numbness around the eyes and seven had brief periods of transient blindness, or blurred vision. When the ship arrived in Mobile, 20 of the crew members were hospitalized. All recovered within four days.

The lunch consisted of barracuda stew with cocoa, beans, rice, soup, and bread and butter. The only person who did not get sick was a crewman who had not eaten the stew.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael 94902.

NOT SENILE

E.D.P. writes: I have always tried to be accurate in my spelling, but in the last few days I have noticed that I make mistakes which I keep correcting. I am 82. Is this due to incipient senility, which causes a certain amount of disorientation?

REPLY

Changes along this line may stem from tiny strokes, but this may go on for decades before senility sets in. Incidentally, if your spelling of incipient and disorientation is any indication of mental alertness, I don't think you have anything to worry about.

CANCER WEIGHT LOSS

G.S. writes: Why do cancer victims lose so much weight?

REPLY

Some lose weight because the tumor interferes with the absorption or digestion of food. Others, because the malignancy is painful or has a toxic effect on the body that interferes with appetite.

FIBROIDS, INFERTILITY

Mrs. H. writes: Could a fibroid tumor of the uterus prevent a woman from becoming pregnant?

REPLY

Yes, especially if the inward tumor protrudes into the cavity of the uterus.

PROTECTED GRAFTED SKIN

B. M. writes: Several years ago I burned my arms and had to have skin grafts. The doctor tells me I shouldn't get the area sunburned, as this might cause cancer. Is he correct?

REPLY

Yes. Skin that has been damaged, especially by burns, is more susceptible to cancer due to sunlight.

THE SMOG CRISIS

Expert Says Statesman Needed

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

PASADENA — Just a hint of that old Dutch accent creeps in as Arie Jan Haagen-Smit explains, cajoles, reminisces, and predicts.

As usual, he's talking smog, discussing the long, challenging, and frustrating battle he has waged against air pollution — and the gestures flow with the words.

Dr. Haagen-Smit, who recently amnounced his retirement as chairman of California's pioneering Air Resources Board, put it in these words:

"I never was lobbying for the job I had. So now I can go to the Governor (Ronald Reagan) and say the job needs a different kind of general — someone with different qualifications.

"Now we need a statesman, someone who can get all the important forces to do something they don't really want to do."

A professor emeritus of bio-organic chemistry, Dr. Haagen-Smit has been associated with California Institute of Technology since 1937. His background in research — in quest of plant substances called essential (odorous) oils — led him, fortuitously, into the struggle against smog.

The Netherlands-born chemist was the first to correctly point out the true nature and source for the Los Angeles area's notorious photo-chemical smog. His discovery took place immediately after World War II.

"I was on a scientific committee of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce," he said. "We discussed the problem of plant damage, as requested by the chamber's agriculture committee."

After months of discussion, Dr. Haagen-Smit says, "I finally wrote a little letter asking: 'If we want to know what's in the air, why don't we measure it?' Since nobody did it, and since I'd just finished a project on pineapple odor and had all this equipment stored, I did it.

"What I got was honest-to-goodness condensed smog. It turned out to be an abundant amount of hydrocarbon materials that could only have come from gasoline. So I drew the conclusion that this came from gasoline by oxidation in air.

"I also found high-oxidant, high-ozone content. At first, I didn't want to believe this, since the books say ozone is absent from cities."

However, an experiment prompted by a colleague, Dr. E. C. Bradley, retired vice-president for chemical research of the Union Rubber Co., clinched it.

"I showed him my work," Dr. Haagen-Smit said. "Then we put some experimental rubber out in the sunlight and his rubber went to pot.

"I had guessed right. It was a very satisfying thing, even though I didn't particularly want to publish it. I didn't want to be drawn into this (smog) thing. It wasn't my field, and I have a strong sense of who's competent and who isn't. I'd already marched a little out of my field by getting into photo-chemistry."

What Dr. Haagen-Smit had discovered was the intricate photo-chemical reaction among pollutants that takes place to build Los Angeles' particularly unpleasant type of smog. It's a reaction series that works best in what southern California is best known for — bright, sunny days.

Soon after making this discovery, however, he was persuaded by friends and colleagues to take a leave of absence from Caltech and work solely on smog.

The result, at least early on, was best described by Dr. James Bonner, a fellow faculty member:

"One little story. When Haagy showed that it was hydrocarbons that made smog, the oil companies got together to prove that this was not true.

"They — in the form of the Western Oil & Gas Association — hired the Stanford Research Institute to prove that he was wrong. They tried to hang smog on sulfur dioxide (SQ2). SO2 was abolished from the Los Angeles Basin. Smog got worse.

"Western Oil & Gas Association flunked. Haagen-Smit received an 'A.'"

Other studies, also aimed at disproving or at least testing his ideas, finally confirmed his work, "and this was a very important point for me," Dr. Haagen-Smit says. "I was vindicated."

His entry into chemistry seems almost natural, although he said he found very little interest in the field as a student.

"I was born in Utrecht, a small town in the center of the Netherlands, where my father was chief chemist at the Royal Mint. Watching the pouring of molten gold and silver was a common occurrence, and my two sisters and I used to play hide-and-seek between stacks of gold and silver bars."

"Even though my preference was in mathematics, the job opportunities in this field were too limited and the chemical education seemed more prudent," he adds. While inorganic chemistry "didn't appeal to me, organic chemistry showed an orderly structure which I liked."

This took him into studies of plant substances, including a peculiar fatty oil from a tree that grows in Indonesia. The compounds found are related to the active principle of poison ivy, poison oak, and Chinese lacquer.

Miller Sees Trouble Ahead For 2 PGA Leaders

CLEVELAND (UPI) — If Johnny Miller is to be believed, then co-leaders Don Iverson and Al Geiberger will hit trouble today in the second round of the Professional Golfers' Association Championship.

Iverson and Geiberger, making the most of the easy conditions which prevailed Thursday morning, had hot putting rounds and finished with four-under-par 67s over the rolling 6,852-yard, par 36-35–71 Canterbury Golf Club layout.

Miller, the 26-year-old U.S. Open champion, went out late and like most of the other big names who followed, had trouble matching par on the back nine. He shot a one-over 72 after making a trio of bogeys between the 14th and 16th.

Unhappy about the way the greens played during the afternoon on Thursday, Miller said: "You watch, those guys who shot under par will have trouble when they go out late Friday.

"Hitting on the greens is like hitting on a table," Miller said. "They watered the perimeter and the front edge of the greens and I think that's unfair. That's tricking the course up."

Miller, not one given to making excuses and bucking authority, continued: "It's not fair and I don't care if the PGA knows about it."

Course Superintendent Bill Burdick rejected Miller's charge.

"There was uniform watering of the greens. It's just the wind dried out the back and higher spots," he said.

Iverson's only victory to date was in a satellite event, while the 35-year-old Geiberger has gone winless since taking the PGA in 1966.

The starting order was reversed for today's round with the low 70 and ties suriviving until Saturday's third round.

Bob Dickson, only the third man to win the U.S. and British Amateur titles in the same year, was at 69 along with Mike Hill, the tempestuous Dave's younger brother, and veteran Mason Rudolph, who came out of a sick bed to fire five straight birdies on the back nine which he completed in a four-under 31.

Tournament favorite Tom Weiskopf, who admitted to "feeling pressure," was at 70 where he was joined by former British and U.S. Open champion Tony Jacklin; '69 PGA winner Ray Floyd, and outsiders Don Bies, Gibby Gilbert and Bobby Brue, a club pro.

Two Ryder Cup players and champions in other years, Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino, buried their chances with 76s.

Weiskopf, feeling unaccustomed pressure after winning five tournaments, including the British Open, in his last nine starts, said he could have used a little help from his putter.

But generally he was satisfied with his round.

"I played excellent golf, especially early in the round, but I found the greens surprisingly slow and left a lot of putts short," he said.

Nicklaus started in great style when he canned a 40-footer at the first hole "but after that I could not get the ball close to the hole," he said.

Big Jack, who has missed out on major honors since last year's British Open, was not too discouraged with his opening round. "I like the pattern I played if not the result. I'm swinging good, something I've not done recently."

Nicklaus said he suffered several bad lies. "I landed in the rough at the par 5s and had to use four and six irons to get out. That's got to be pretty bad."

Defending champion Gary Player was unable to keep a wayward driver under control and finished with a 73 where he was joined by several others.

The 148-man field had to contend with hot, humid weather with the temperature in the 90s. A wind got up late in the afternoon and there was a threat of rain in the air when the last threesome trooped into the clubhouse, which should make conditions slightly easier today.

'WE GOT SPOILED'

Manager Fox Assesses Giants' Batting Slump

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — When a club gets only 12 runs and 31 hits in six games it shouldn't come as any surprise when four of the six decisions wind up as losses.

That's what has happened to the San Francisco Giants since last Friday, and as of the moment Manager Charlie Fox is ready to pull out his hair.

"I guess we got spoiled around here by all that hitting earlier in the season," Fox said Thursday after his Giants dropped a 5-3 decision to the streaking Montreal Expos. "Maybe we aren't as good as we looked before but we should be able to hit better than we have in the last week.

"Frankly, I don't know what to do except ride it out and hope things get better."

"With the kind of pitching we been getting lately we should have a winning streak going," Fox said. "Instead, we are going the other way. Managing is not as easy as it looks but the toughest part is when the team doesn't hit, especially a team like ours with so many good hitters on it. There are times when I feel like grabbing a bat and going up there myself, and hell I never was that good a hitter."

Mike Torrez and Mike Marshall combined to hold the Giants to seven hits—their high in a week. What hurt, though, was a bounce to short by Gary Matthews with the bases loaded and two out in the first and a strikeout by Ed Goodson in the seventh with two on and two out.

"When we were going good," Fox reminisced, "in both those situations we would have gotten a hit. The shame of it now is that our pitching is sound and most of it is going down the drain."

Two-run homers by Jim Lyttle and Ken Singleton netted the Expos, now in second place in the N.L. East, four quick runs off Giants' starter Jim Barr (9-11) and it proved too big a margin to overcome, although Don Carrithers, Jim Willoughby and Don McMahon combined to hold Montreal to two hits and one run from the third on.

Bobby Bonds hit his 31st homer and a sacrifice fly to account for two San Francisco runs and Chris Speier's single drove in the other.

The Expos move on to San Diego for a weekend series with the Padres starting tonight while the Giants host the New York Mets. Tom Seaver (13-6) pitches for New York tonight while Juan Marichal (9-7) goes for the Giants.

Saturday will be Giants-Kodak Picture Day. From 10:45 to 11:30 a.m., fans with cameras will be allowed to rim the stands around the Candlestick Park playing field to photograph Giant players who will make a complete circle of the stadium. Game time is 12:15 p.m.

The Fox-Lasorda Fight: Good For Both Giants And Dodgers

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — You wouldn't call Charlie Fox and Tom Lasorda a couple of kids. They don't exactly qualify as members of the Pepsi Generation.

You'd be more likely to call them what they are: a pair of old bucks. Certainly too old to get out there and start fighting in front of everybody the way they did last Saturday in San Francisco's Candlestick Park.

The fight they had, if you'd call it that, turned out like some baseball trades — good for both sides. To understand why, you have to know some of the background.

On Friday night, the night before Fox and Lasorda tangled, the Dodgers whipped the Giants, 3-0, on a three-hitter by Andy Messersmith.

"He has a reputation for coming too close to our hitters," says the Dodgers' coach. "Not only up here, but also down in Santo Domingo where I had a lotta Dodger players last winter. I don't know where he gets this, from (Juan) Marichal or somebody else, but I remember him doing the same thing when he was pitching for the Escogido club and I was managing Licey. Anyway, he threw a couple pitches under Messersmith's chin Friday.

Now it's a day later, Saturday.

The Giants are taking batting practice. Charlie Fox is leaning on the batting cage watching his hitters when he happens to notice Tom Lasorda walking by.

"What are you getting on my pitchers for?" says Fox.

"Don't get on him again," snaps Fox.

"I'll get on him any time I want," snaps back Lasorda.

Meanwhile, Lasorda notices Mike Sadek, one of the Giants' catchers, standing on the other side of the batting cage. Sadek is a good friend of Lasorda's even though he works for the hated Giants.

"Where were you when both teams came charging out last night?" Lasorda asks Sadek. "I was looking for you."

"Because you're too old," says Lasorda.

"I'm still young enough to whip you real quick," Fox says.

"Then come on," says Lasorda.

Charlie Fox accepts the invitation, the two got at it for less than a minute before the whole thing is broken up and from there on the accounts of the "battle" differ.

Lasorda's version goes this way:

"I'd have to say it was a unanimous decision, three punches to none. I threw a left to the mid-section, a right cross to the head and another left to the mid-section. Charlie never touched me. Never laid a glove on me. All I was trying to do was protect my players, and I think Charlie was doing the same thing. You gotta admire him for that."

Says Fox:

"I don't agree with the way he (Lasorda) scores it. How could you judge who won or lost? It was too short a contest, all over in 30 seconds. Nothing serious."

Those last two words tell it all.

Charle Fox didn't do that badly either by taking on Lasorda. The Giants had been in a bit of a slump before the skirmish. They had dropped five on their last seven, and you'd be surprised how something like what Fox did can wake up a ball club. The Giants won Saturday's contest, 3-2, in 10 innings. Tito Fuentes' homer did it, and guess who was the winning pitcher? Elias Sosa.

If there's ever a next time though, there is something Tom Lasorda should know about Charlie Fox.

Charlie Fox went a little easy on him. He didn't show him everything he has. One of those things is a black belt.

BIG SERIES IN NEW YORK

Knowles Starts Again For A's

NEW YORK (AP) — The Oakland Athletics and New York Yankees will continue jockeying for position in their respective division races as a three-game series opens tonight.

Knowles, 4-4, will be making his third start since the thumb injury that sidelined Jim Hunter. The left-handed relief pitcher has gone 11 innings and allowed just three earned runs so far as a starter.

Hunter, 15-3, is expected to return to action next Tuesday night with a start at Boston. The A's announced earlier this week that Hunter had been placed on the disabled list retroactive to July 24, but learned Thursday such a move was prohibited.

Catcher Jose Morales, scheduled to join the A's, returned to Tucson of the Pacific Coast League when the A's learned Hunter could not be placed on the disabled list.

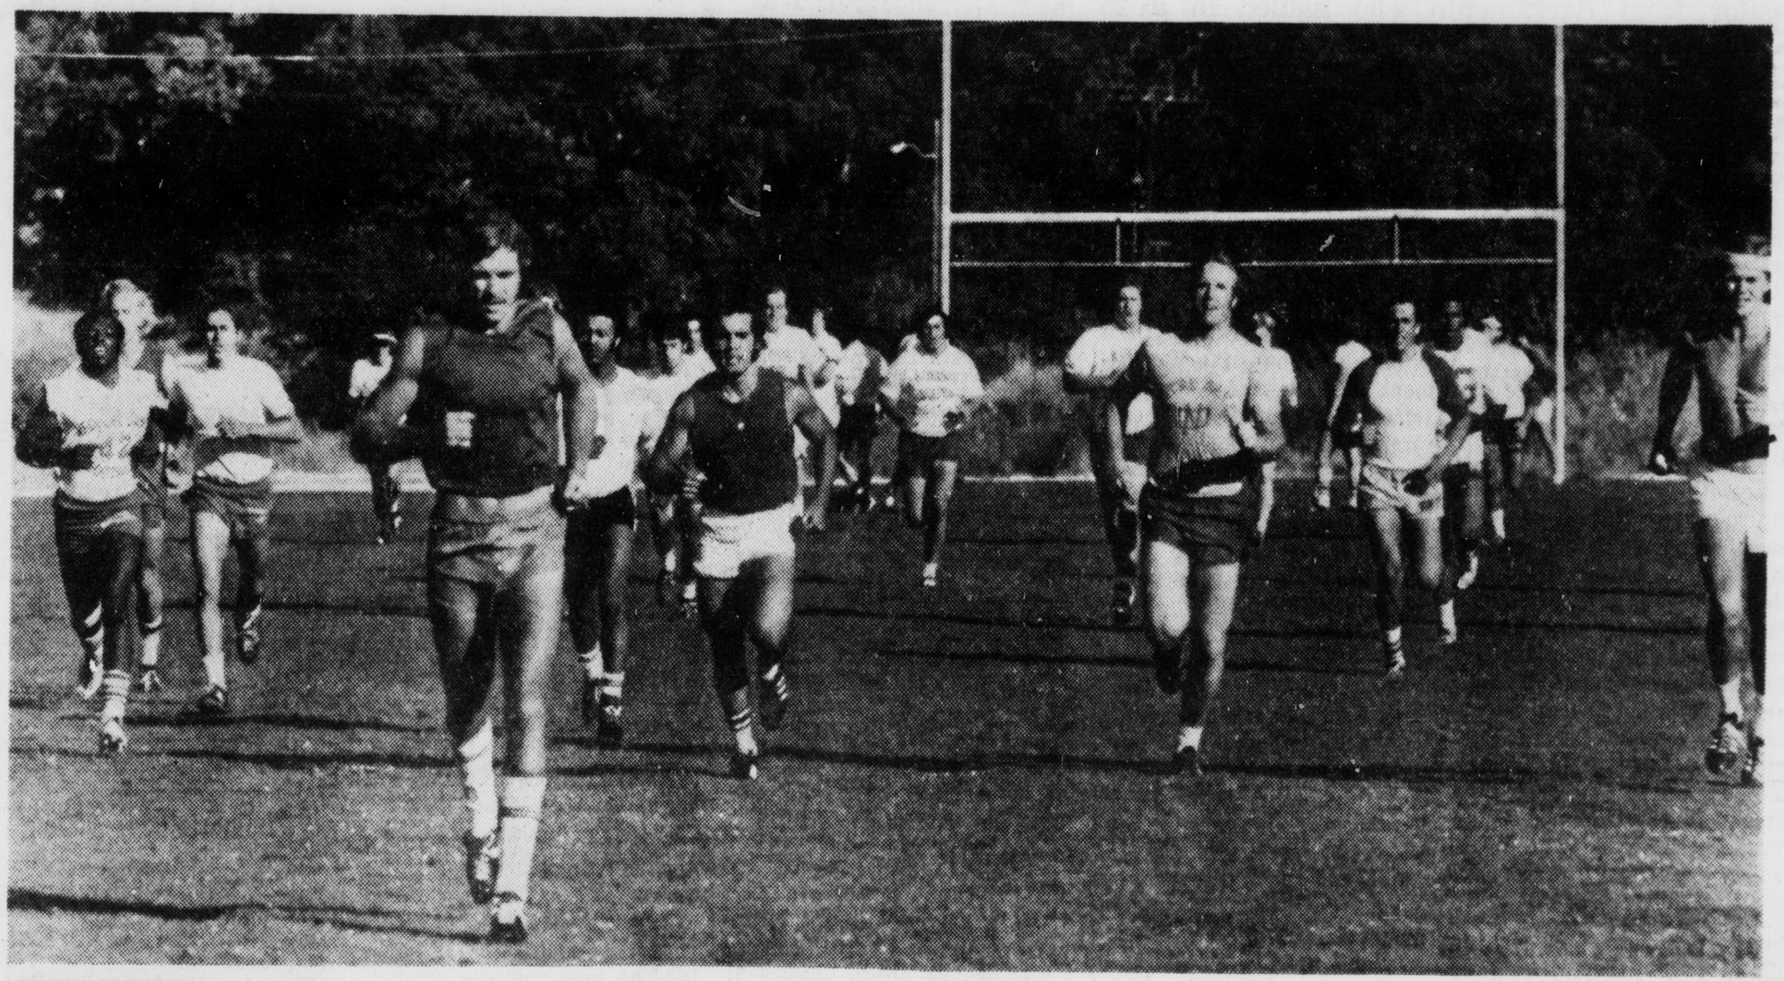
The Yankees are in third in the East, but follow division-leading Baltimore, who edged Minnesota 2-1, by only a game.



THUNDERING HERD — Members of the South all-star team ran in place to sweat off a few pounds and activate a few rusty muscles for next Saturday's Ross Valley Kiwanis Club North-South Football Game at San Rafael High School. The team, coached by Bruno Banducci of Marin Catholic and comprised of players from Marin Catholic, Drake, Redwood and Tamalpais, is working out daily at 6 p.m. at Marin Catholic.

South '11' Takes It Easy

If everything goes according to coach Bruno Banducci's newly-conceived plan, the South team will "take it easy" up to, but not including, next Saturday.

Banducci and his squad opened drills Monday for the eighth annual Ross Valley Kiwanis North-South All-Star football game, scheduled for next Saturday at 1 p.m. at San Rafael High School.

The team consists of 25 graduated seniors from four southern Marin high schools — Drake, Tamalpais, Redwood and Marin Catholic (which Banducci coaches).

It has explosive potential on offense, and Banducci has no intention of leaving its speed and shiftiness behind it on the practice field with a series of hard workouts.

"We'll let 'em conserve energy," he said. "They're all in pretty good shape anyway, so we won't make 'em pay on the practice field."

The team is working out five days a week from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at Marin Catholic, avoiding the midday heat and allowing several of the players to continue their summer jobs. The first scrimmage probably will be held Monday or Tuesday, Banducci said.

A confessed copycat, Banducci borrowed his relaxing idea from University of Southern California coach John McKay, whose well-rested College All-Stars gave the pro champion Miami Dolphins a tough battle in a 14-3 loss last month.

Since he is not facing the Dolphins, but rather a team of graduated seniors from Novato, San Marin, San Rafael and Terra Linda high schools, Banducci expects more than a close loss. (He got that much last year, as he coached the underdog South in a 28-15 defeat.)

The core of this year's South team consists of nine players from Redwood, which tied for the Marin County Athletic League title with Terra Linda at 5-1 and had an 8-1 overall slate.

Redwood contributes three all-league offensive linemen — center Bob Fulton, guard Scott Cochrane and tackle Ken Massucco — as well as its starting tight end, Matt Gondak.

If this fierce forward wall gives time, two all-league wide receivers blessed with speed — Ken Zepponi of Drake and Dennis Morini of Tamalpais — will be able to zip downfield.

Throwing to them will be Steve Gaddis or Tim Nowell of Tamalpais or Ben Partee of Marin Catholic. Banducci has expressed confidence in all three. Nowell also was an all-league defensive back, and Partee is considered of that caliber, though he did not make all-MCAL because Marin Catholic does not belong to the league for varsity football.

The running corps is headed by all-leaguer Alvin Price of Tam, 1971 all-leaguer Mike Connor of Redwood and 1972 leading scorer Daryl Edralin of Redwood.

Connor, also an all-league defensive back two straight years, was the only player on either squad to be selected for the prestigious statewide North-South game to be staged Sunday by the Shriners.

Massucco, Zepponi and Tamalpais end Craig Marshall are recent additions to the team. Declining to play, after originally being selected, were running back Mike Shimmin and center Gerald Russell of Tam; tackle Jim Schalich, linebacker Mark Ferrua and guard Tim Huber of Marin Catholic; and tackle Chuck Hildreth of Drake. Drake runner Phil Wilkinson is working out with the team and will join the squad if another player drops out, Banducci said.

"We have depth of quality players we didn't have last year," Banducci said. "We should be able to play everyone, and everyone should be able to make a contribution and feel he is part of the team."

Two Hamilton Boxers Beaten

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two Hamilton Air Force base boxers were beaten Thursday night, but the young United States national amateur team went on to defeat West Germany seven bouts to three.

As 6,125 fans at Nassau Coliseum watched, heavyweight Nick Wells of Fort Worth, Tex., was knocked out in the first round by Peter Hussing of Muehlheim, and light middleweight Jerome Bennett of Tacoma, Wash., lost a decision to Peter Spitzenberg of Essen.

The American team won four bouts by decision and three by knockout.

49ers' Pass Defense In Stern Test

KENT, Ohio (UPI) — The San Francisco pass defenders know they will get a good workout Saturday night when the 49ers meet the New York Jets at Tampa, Fla.

That's because Jets mentor Weeb Ewbank made it official Thursday that Joe Namath will start for the Jets to "get his timing down and work with the new keys we've installed."

San Francisco coach Dick Nolan has already announced that Steve Spurrier will go most of the way at quarterback for the 49ers. Spurrier has played briefly but impressively in the first two exhibition wins but admits he considers this game a key in his quest to become the top 49er signal-caller.

Wide receiver Terry Beasley, the number one draft choice of 1972 who has been hampered by injuries ever since, will make his first 1973 appearance although he will not start. He has been working out at about three-quarter speed.

The 49ers have too many running backs in camp and coach Nolan indicates he wants to look at them all in the Jets game. It is expected that 217-pound Odell Lawson will see plenty of action. Lawson was cut by New England last year, but could be a surprise and especially caught the coaches eyes when he burst for a long run during a 49er scrimmage. The prospector running attack produces very few long gallops.

PRO FOOTBALL

'Skins Test Punter Vs. Denver

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Coming off a defeat with a questionable quarterback, a running back with a troublesome reputation and the loss of the first string safety, a pro football team could hardly be described as set.

But that is in fact the case with the Washington Redskins, whose only misery seems to be getting a punter who can average more than 38 yards a kick.

The new punter, David Beverly, will get his big chance at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium before an expected sellout crowd of 53,000 tonight when the Redskins take on the Denver Broncos in a National Football League exhibition game.

The Redskins-Broncos contest kicks off the second big weekend of NFL pre-season activity with 10 more games slated for Saturday night and one each on Sunday and Monday nights.

The New England Patriots play host to the New York Giants Sunday night and Kansas City entertains Detroit Monday night.

Beverly, who boomed the football long and high for Auburn University, has a chance to be the only rookie that coach George Allen may keep on the Redskins' squad, which is deep in veterans and former all-pros.

When Rosey Taylor, the safety on last season's National Football Conference championship team, fractured his elbow in last week's 17-14 loss to the Detroit Lions, it could have been tragic.

But Allen had traded over the winter for Ken Houston, all-pro safety last season for the Houston Oilers. Houston had been playing on the second team, but will move into the lineup tonight.

And Duane Thomas, who had refused to play in 1972 for Dallas, New England and San Diego, is slated to start at running back for Washington. A change has come over Thomas who is shucking his loner image by clapping encouragement to his teammates of three weeks and is even beginning to chatter a bit.

Finally, quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, one of the NFL's all-time passing leaders, is recovering from an Achilles tendon injury that sidelined him for most of the previous season. Jurgensen will quarterback the Redskins in the second half after Billy Kilmer runs the club in the first half.

The Broncos, in their first start of the exhibition season will rely on the running of Floyd Little, two-time rushing leader of the American Football Conference, and the passing of Charley Johnson, who set a Denver completion record last year.

FISH AND GAME

By AL GIDDINGS

Weather Woes For Fish Derby

The Loch Lomond Live Bait Barge striper derby has been going for a week now, but the weather and the fish weren't too cooperative until Thursday morning.

Before that, it was windy and rough, but the weather broke Thursday and many anglers returned with limits, including Bob Armitage, a visitor from Sacramento who hauled in a 26 pound, two-ouncer to take the lead in the derby.

Larry Mah and Grant Howe, two of the local pros, while fishing together, took five bass casting jet-tailed jigs at The Brothers last Sunday. Larry had a 23½ pounder and Grant took one weighing 21½. Jim LeCzel of Corte Madera caught a 33 pounder drifting a shiner at The Brothers, but it was the day before the derby started. This feat, at least shows that there are some big fish out there. Trolling has been slow — almost nil, even by the champs.

Best fishing has been by drifting shiners or by plugging with lures. Before Thursday, according to Keith Fraser of the bait shop, 70 anglers have signed up, and there are just six fish logged with the smallest fish weighing just six pounds. There are 10 prizes, plus four weekly prizes, plus four trophies and all the prizes are first class. You'd better get out there quick; first prize is a 12-foot Trailerboat Special with a $229 value.

SALMON FISHING at California City has had a little flurry too. Tuesday, Tommie Miller and his dad of San Rafael took two, and saw six others landed. It's probably worth a go, and should improve through September.

THE NAME of Ray C. Albertson of Alturas was the first of 385 drawn as successful applicants for permits for the special buck antelope hunt, Aug. 27-Sept. 3, in Modoc, Lassen, Shasta and Siskiyou counties, the Department of Fish and Game announced.

Albertson was one of 11,262 applicants for the permits. The number of applicants set a new record for the 10 years the hunts have been held. The previous record was 8,271 applicants who filed in 1971. Notification to the other successful applicants is in the mail.

Persons whose names were drawn have only to Aug. 14 to claim their permits, said James Christopher, Department of Fish and Game license chief. Unclaimed permits will go to alternates.

Christopher said permits will be issued to the successful applicants after paying the $15 fee.

FOR THE SECOND time within a month, the Department of Fish and Game has removed a depredating mountain lion from the Maxwell Keith ranch in the Adelaide area west of Paso Robles, San Luis Obispo County.

The second lion, an adult male like the first one, was captured after killing eight sheep, five of them registered, on the ranch in Dover Canyon.

Fish and Game personnel tagged the lion and fitted it with a radio collar so that its movements could be followed and released it in a remote location on Los Padres National Forest.

Late last month trackers caught up with a depredating mountain lion that had killed five and possibly six sheep on the same ranch. This animal was moved to a Placer County location.

Biologists with the Fish and Game said the two animals were possibly litter mates, which would account for their presence in the same area. Adult lions generally roam individual areas.

The location of the kills is about 20 miles south of the area the Fish and Game Department has selected for an intensive two-year study of mountain lions that is only now getting under way. Objectives of the study are to refine lion population estimates and to gather information for a management program.

Incidentally, the mountain lion survey being conducted throughout the state has logged the number of lions in Marin County at approximately "one".

Tillie Seeks 1st Golf Tourney Win

(First in a series)

Tille Gondak will be playing on her home golf course in the sixth annual Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions next Friday at 9 a.m., but she believes this could be a disadvantage.

"This can be an adverse force, because I know where all the trouble is," she said referring to the Marin Country Club course in Novato. "And I've been in trouble there, too."

The eight-handicapper also sees the advantages of being on the home course, but "it could work against you because others expect you to do well there."

Mrs. Gondak, women's club champion of Marin Country Club five of the last seven years, believes Nancy Gapinski and Laura Cann will be the players to beat.

Mesdames Cann and Gapinski represent the Meadow Club near Fairfax and San Geronimo National Golf Club, respectively. Others in the field are: defending champion Cookie Baer of Peacock Gap, Virginia May of Indian Valley and Terry Nichols of Mill Valley. They will negotiate 18 holes of scratch medal play.

Mrs. Gondak, a long-ball hitter, has been playing on Tuesdays and Thursdays to tone up her game. She also tees off on Sundays with her husband, Charles, a Pacific Telephone employee in San Francisco. Mrs. Gondak has three children: Cris, 23, Ralph, 20, and Matt, 18.

Wells Falters In Raider Trial

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — Former Oakland wide receiver Warren Wells, cut from the club after personal and legal troubles, apparently was disappointing in a workout with the team recently.

"Considering all that Warren did for us, we'll take another look," said a Raider official, "but it's doubtful he'll be brought to camp.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Royals Have Wonderful Dreams

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Surprise contenders like the Kansas City Royals begin to dream wonderful dreams when they see fellows like Hal McRae win key games.

It was like that for the "Miracle Mets" of 1969 when a borderline major league like Ron Swoboda won many a game in the stretch run of the National League race and then played a brilliant world series against the Baltimore Orioles.

McRae and Swoboda are similar in that they have known weaknesses which may mean they will spend their entire careers as part-time players. Swoboda was farmed to the International League only Wednesday by the New York Yankees but will be recalled in September for the stretch run. Guys like McRae and Swoboda have a way of playing their best when everybody else is uptight.

McRae, acquired from the Cincinnati Reds last winter, drove in two runs with a triple and a homer and made a game-saving catch in the sixth inning Thursday night as the Royals beat the Boston Red Sox, 3-2. The victory gave the Royals a one-game lead over the idle Oakland A's in the American League's Western Division.

The Baltimore Orioles defeated the Minnesota Twins, 2-1, and took over first place in the east, the Chicago White Sox shaded the Detroit Tigers, 5-4, and the Milwaukee Brewers nipped the California Angels, 6-5, in other AL games.

National League scores were Montreal 5 San Francisco 3, Atlanta 8 St. Louis 6, Los Angeles 1 New York 0 and San Diego 10 Philadelphia 9 in 11 innings.

McRae is hitting .205 for the season but has 19 hits in his last 59 at bats for a .322 average and says he's hitting better "because I've changed my stance."

McRae and other guys on the bench have been contributing in the last three weeks," said manager Jack McKeon. "We're not really centering on one guy to do the work. When everybody gets involved and starts doing his thing, that's the sign of a championship team."

McRae tripled home a run and scored on Rick Reichardt's sacrifice fly in the second inning and opened the fourth inning with his fourth homer of the season. He saved the game in the sixth when he made a leaping stab against the right field wall of a drive by Orlando Cepeda with two out and two on. Steve Busby got credit for the win with Doug Bird pitching the last 1⅓ innings for his ninth save.

Bill Lee (12-7) took the loss. He pitched eight innings, surrendering three runs on seven hits while walking three and striking out one. The Terra Linda left-hander failed for the fifth time to win his 13th game.

Mike Cuellar pitched a six-hitter and struck out 10, raising his record to 9-12 for the Orioles, who dealt the Twins' Bert Blyleven his 11th loss against 14 wins.

Bill Sharp's third homer of the season came in the ninth inning and gave White Sox relief star Cy Acosta his seventh win while tagging 18-game winner Joe Coleman of the Tigers with his ninth defeat.

Dave May's two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth lifted the Brewers to their win over the Angels.

GOLF NOTES

Players Set For Champs Tourneys

Golf tournament action in Marin County was minimal last week as fairway followers and participants geared for the men's and women's Tournaments of Champions.

The highlight of the golfing week found Mrs. James Moore winning the Malcolm Brown Trophy last Friday at Mill Valley Municipal Golf Course. She carded an 86-24—62.

But the big news centers around preparations for the Tournament of Champions. The women play next Friday, 9 a.m. at Marin Country Club in Novato. The men compete Sunday, Aug. 19 at 8 a.m. at Indian Valley.

Both affairs promised to be hotly contested, particularly the women's. Defending champion Cookie Baer of Peacock Gap in San Rafael faces Tillie Gondak of Marin County Club in Novato, Nancy Gapinski of San Geronimo National, Laura Cann of Meadow Club near Fairfax, Virginia May of Indian Valley, and Terry Nichols of Mill Valley.

The gals, who were out practicing this week on Marin fairways, believe that Mrs. Baer played far better than her 14 handicap indicated. Her rivals are determined to crown a new champion. Likely candidates are Mesdames Gondak, Cann, May and Gapinski. And some say to watch out for Mrs. Nichols — an aggressive player with much determination.

The men's affair seems simpler to analyze. The majority of players tab Mat Palacio Jr. of Marin Country Club. He brings a two-handicap into play — and a tourney title in his only previous T of C participation in 1971.

Walton Nearly Dies From A Bee Sting

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES — All-American basketball center Bill Walton of UCLA suffered a near fatal bumblebee sting last week, the UCLA Daily Bruin reported Thursday.

Walton's older brother Bruce, rookie offensive tackle training with the Dallas Cowboys at Thousand Oaks, told the newspaper: "Bill was riding his bike and got stung by a bee. He didn't know he was allergic to bees. He rode home and collapsed. He went to the doctor who gave him an immediate shot.

"The doctor told him if he hadn't acted quickly it could have proven fatal.

Bruce also said Bill will have to carry a kit with an antidote in case of another bee sting, the newpaper said.

"If he gets stung by a bee, he knows he'll be able to take a pill or a shot," Bruce said.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Desperate Woman Gets Good News

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. You have suggested in your column that a person in my situation should seek the advice of an investment counselor. I have tried to find one to no avail. After my husband was killed 5 years ago, I invested the $80,000 in insurance money very unwisely I'm afraid. Because I desperately need additional income I took $10,000 of the capital recently. My Social Security amounts to less than $200 monthly and I need $500 per month to live. Would you please review my holdings and tell me how to increase my income? — F.S.

A. Of the $70,000 of your original capital you now have a portfolio worth $61,500 which returns about $2,700 annually or 4.5 per cent. With a few adjustments this rate of return could be increased to 7.8 per cent. In order to meet your living expenses your capital must return over 6 per cent. Since your bonds and certificates of deposit meet this requirement, I would recommend leaving these investments intact.

The highest rate of return on the common stock and mutual fund portion of your portfolio is from U.S. Fidelity & Guaranty at 5.8 per cent. Two of your holdings pay no dividend, the remaining six issues yield less than 4.0 per cent currently. Thus the common stocks and funds should be liquidated and the proceeds of approximately $37,000 reinvested for income. Approximately one-third of this capital should be placed in common stock, the remainder divided between two good quality bond issues.

The specific common stock issues are 100 Chemical New York Corp. (NYSE), 200 Larwin Mortgage Investors (NYSE) and 100 Southern Pacific (NYSE). 12M of Avco Financial Services 9¼s of 1989 and 11M of Pacific Telephone & Telegraph 9⅛s of 2004 round out your portfolio. These bonds, which are rated A and AA respectively, have adequate interest coverage. The $4,798 in interest and dividends on this adjusted portfolio will increase your monthly income by $400. Together with the $170 in Social Security this will provide $570 per month, more than enough to meet your living expenses.

Dividend Increase

TORRANCE — The board of directors of Standard Brands Paint Company have voted an increase in the quarterly cash dividend rate on the common stock. The directors announced a quarterly cash dividend of 6¼ cents per share, paid Aug. 6, 1973, to shareholders of record.

Prime Rate News Cuts Into Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the prime rate rising again to a new high level, investors retreated nervously to the sidelines and stock prices fell sharply in light trading today on the New York Stock Exchange.

First National City Bank, the second largest bank in the nation, raised its prime rate to 9 ¼ per cent from 9 per cent today and it was expected other banks would follow. Investors have been concerned recently by the climbing rates.

There was little else in the news background to influence the market which has been lethargic and lower most of the week.

World's best?

BMW Bavaria.

This may be the most desired, most sought after, most coveted car in America, and understandably so. Because the new Bavaria is not only elegant. It's superbly engineered. And it gives you a kind of driving "lift" like nothing you've ever known before. The car is prestigious. True. Luxurious. Absolutely. But above all, this car is built for driving pleasure on the open road. Its strong new 3-liter engine makes it the most nimble, responsive car you may ever have driven. So, if you're interested in a German luxury car, don't fail to give yourself a chance to test the one that's so much fun to drive. World's best? It may very well be.

Contradictory Actions By Transit District

Independent-Journal
SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY
44 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 10, 1973 EDITORIAL PAGE

Marin County Transit District directors (who double as county supervisors) decided this week to try to increase the district's tax rate to 25 cents per $100 accessed valuation next year — five times the present limit.

That levy, we understand, would product about $2 million per year to underwrite bus transit within Marin which supplements the commute service of the Golden Gate Bridge District. The bridge district runs the local Marin buses under contract with the transit district.

Two million dollars does not sound like an excessive amount to subsidize mass transit. Many millions have been spent in building roads which directly or indirectly subsidize bus and truck lines and private automobile owners.

BUT AT the same meeting, the directors took an opposite tack. While voting to up the tax rate to provide a better transit system, they also voted to meantime cut back on the existing system.

This will be done by eliminating some of the less-used bus schedules. No route will be eliminated entirely, but service will be less frequent on some and early morning and late evening runs will be cut off from others.

Cutting the service while proposing to increase the tax rate to enlarge service sounds rather self-contradictory.

The explanation given is that present bus patronage falls too far short of the cost of operating the in-county buses. The 5-cent tax rate fails to make up the loss. The district is using up a reserve fund it built up for several years while it was only a "paper district."

Even the reduced service, according to Ray W. Foreaker, transit district manager (who doubles as county director of public works), will require using some of the reserve fund. It will, he said, leave a reserve of just under $100,000 at the end of the fiscal year. He figures that amount of reserve is necessary.

THE FLAW in this arrangement is that, by reducing service, the transit district will drive people away from bus use — exactly the opposit of the its purpose.

The fact that a particular route at a particular time of day is not now drawing many riders may mean that it is not needed. On the other hand, it may mean simply that existence of the service is not understood widely enough.

The transit district has done little to promote bus use within the county, although the bridge district has done a good job of promoting commute bus use. The transit district has not even posted schedules at bus stops.

Maybe the trouble is that neither the supervisors (who double as transit directors) nor the public works director (who doubles as transit manager) know a great deal about mass transit operations.

Marin County Transit District should make every effort to promote more use of buses. Cutting the existing service is not likely to promote more use.

No Need For Puzzlement To Exist Over Responsibility For Watergate

WASHINGTON — In the play "Anna and the King of Siam," the King is always remarking, "It's a puzzlement!"

In the witness box before the Ervin committee, H.R. Haldeman ended his testimony by saying, as if brooding aloud, that as of that moment he couldn't see how Watergate came into being or where the responsibility for it must lie.

It really is not that puzzling. The evidence on the public record already seems sufficient to show where in four concrete instances the Watergate burglary, the psychiatrist's office break-in and, what is even worse, the White House coverup could have been stopped.

While it may not yet be possible to see where the collective crimes of Watergate started, it is possible to see where it could have been stopped — if those who had the knowledge and power to stop them had acted faithfully, fearlessly and honorably.

HERE ARE THE FOUR instances in which those with great power close to the President could have said "no" and the Watergate monster would almost certainly have been sidetracked — instead of saying "yes," in the wake of which so much evil and harm to the presidency flowed.

1. — When Atty. Gen. John Mitchell failed to instantly fire G. Gordon Liddy — an employee on the staff of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President — when Liddy unfolded his plan to burglarize and bug Democratic National Committee headquarters — even after, as Mitchell claimed, he had twice previously rejected Liddy's plan. If Mitchell testified truthfully, hadn't Liddy then and thereby proved to be unreliable and unwilling to follow the orders of the attorney general?

2. — When John D. Ehrlichman, after learning of the unauthorized Liddy-Hunt break-in of the Los Angeles office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, failed to bring about their dismissal. There was ample cause for it. These men were then employees at the White House. Ehrlichman testified that the break-in was not authorized. Dr. Fielding, the psychiatrist, was not charged with violating national security or any other crime. He had stolen no classified papers, but Liddy and Hunt broke into his office to steal his classified papers — papers professionally private between doctor and patient.

AFTER THESE TWO failures to act decisively, the Watergate monster was on the loose. These were two crucial turning points.

3. — But there was another crossing at which the worst consequences to the President and to the nation could have been halted. To me the coverup on the part of officials of the administration and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President was worse than the Watergate offenses themselves. John Mitchell concluded that it was better to cover up everything he knew about the Watergate offenses than to face them promptly, cleanly and openly because doing so might hurt Richard Nixon's presidential campaign. And in the end, the presidency and the nation and the quality of the democratic process were grievously wounded.

4. — The worst could have been averted at one more point. Mitchell testified that he kept President Nixon in the dark before the election for political reasons, and after the election for fear that Mr. Nixon would act too decisively; that is, as he said, for fear the President "would lower the boom." He left me with the impression that he thought that would be a mess. Mr. Mitchell's coverup led to a worse mess.

I am not suggesting that this is all there is to Watergate. But I am suggesting that there is an answer to Mr. Haldeman's puzzlement about the origins of Watergate and at least where much responsibility for it lies.

The Siege Of Mason's Neck, Habitat Of National Bird

WASHINGTON — Corregidor, Leningrad, Cassino and Khe Sanh have nothing on Mason's Neck. It has been under seige longer than any of them. It has been shaken, but never fallen. Now it is under assault again, and this could be the worst.

Mason's Neck is a peninsula that juts into the Potomac River barely 20 miles below Washington, within view of Mount Vernon. It is the last holdout anywhere near the nation's capital of the nation's endangered symbol, the American bald eagle. And that is the kind of information that provokes an eloquent shrug from Virginia authorities who want to build an airport nearby.

Repeatedly over the past decade, residents of the area have combined to stave off business interests pressuring the relatively undisturbed backwater. One developer wanted to convert the neck into a ready-made city of 20,000 persons.

The area's residents formed a committee and sought help. National organizations threw their influence and more importantly their assets behind the preservation effort. The Nature Conservancy produced $5.9 million to hold over 900 acres of marsh and forest until a series of connecting parks, historical sites and wildlife refuges could be linked together to keep the neck unviolated.

Then when the concerned groups sighed at what seemed victory, another attack came from the river side, where Maryland dredgers wanted to work close to the Virginia shore. That would have ruined the great marsh around which the eagles breed. The dredgers were turned back, too, after the alarm was sounded. The eagles seemed safe for awhile.

But such victories never last long. That was two-and-one-half years ago.

The other side is at it again, this time in the persons of Virginia state airport officials and the United States Army. The state officials would like to build a major airport for private and business planes on the property of Fort Belvoir, taking some of the load off Washington National Airport. A projected 400 jet and propeller flights a day would use the runway, plotted to run inland off a cover barely a quarter-mile from the eagle sanctuary.

Fort Belvoir, headquarters of the Army Engineers, already has one airport about a mile away, the other side of U.S. Route 1. Its approaches run over Army property, rather than the neck. But apparently there is no thought of using it for the private air traffic outlet.

In this case, as in so many, plans have tiptoed close to the execution stage before the public was let in on them.

Meanwhile the state has been negotiating with the Army for final permission to proceed — and, unfortunately, Gov. Linwood Holton is an old friend of Mr. Nixon who has diligently preserved that goodwill in hopes of a federal appointment when his term in Richmond expires. Thus the attackers are wielding a powerful new weapon this time.

The siege of Mason's Neck is of concern to the whole country, if only because it involves the national capital and the national bird. Further, if the sanctuary is breached by this attack, it will be ironic — and instructive to all — that it finally fell not to the feared private developers, but to a sneak attack from a combination of state and federal power that should have been arrayed in its protection.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Wheels For Marin Appreciates Support

The staff of Wheels for Marin would like to express our genuine appreciation for the excellent story Fred Strebeigh did on Whistlestop Wheels in the July 31 Independent-Journal.

It was another example of the great supportive help the I-J has given to the transportation programs: Whistlestop for Seniors, and Wheels for Marin serving the ill and the handicapped, now merged into Whistlestop Wheels.

Without this kind of support and the present participation of Red Cross, Easter Seal Society, Zonta International, as well as the many organizations and individuals who have contributed so much over the years, our programs could not have existed.

These programs are filling a great need in Marin, and are being looked to as models across the state.

We hope to see you and all your readers at the Whistlestop Wheels bike swap on Sept. 22, at College of Marin.

Chavez Supporter Disputes Editorial

I feel called upon to take issue with your Aug. 3 editorial on the farm workers' strike.

You claim that the Teamsters — United Farm Workers fight is "simply a jurisdictional dispute." But the California Supreme Court has recently ruled differently, saying that the Teamsters are working as allies of the growers.

You claim that the UFW organizing campaign "was and is to benefit union treasuries." But under UFW contracts wages have gone up, the farm workers have achieved job security, the use of pesticides has been strictly controlled, and some of the money from the union treasury has gone to finance construction of four medical clinics to aid a people whose life-expectancy is 30 years less than the average in America.

Finally, you claim that the UFW is opposed to secret-ballot elections for union representation, and cite their campaign against Proposition 22 last November. Proposition 22 would have done a lot of things, but it would not have provided for fair or effective union representation, because it would have prevented most workers from participating in elections and prohibited strikes during the harvest season.

Cesar Chavez is not afraid of honest elections; thousands of his supporters are willing to go to jail for the UFW. Nobody has risked jail for Frank Fitzsimmons' Teamsters.

New FDA Regulations Harmful To People

Along with a million other concerned people, I've written letters to congressmen, appealing for reason and updated thinking within the FDA, concerning nutritional needs. Despite the flood of letters, including many from leading scientists and physicians, pointing out that while we're not an underfed nation, we are undernourished, the plan to ban supplements is being carried out. Within 60 days, vitamins A and D will become prescription drugs and other supplements are to follow by the year's end.

Such non-responsiveness to the wishes and needs of the public indicates that the FDA considers us to be uninformed faddists, incapable of knowing what may be best for our individual needs, thus we're being protected from ourselves!

Which motivates me to invite FDA officials to come visit our store, for example, as objective observers. Listen to our customers as they talk with us and among themselves. You'll discover that they're reasonable, intelligent people, fully capable of making rational decisions, obviously. They're learned by experience and by studying the writings of new age scientists, that wholeness and balance can't be reached without good nutrition, which includes supplementation. As Prof. E. Cheraskin has said: We have to take "heroic counter measures" to cope with an artificial world.

Can you, FDA officials, ignore the right of these people to flourish? We in the health food industry can find other means of supporting ourselves. But we're concerned for our customers, if your plan prevails, who will be hard put to thrive if you impose those restrictions, based on outdated, disproven theories which haven't caught up with what the new breed of preventive scientists advocate.

Perhaps you could learn something about optimum health from these people who know where they're going, despite bureaucratic roadblocks along the way.

Objects To Courtroom And Divorce Stories

As an editor who would seem to be responsible for the quality of the Independent-Journal, I can't see how you can sit back and accept it as it is. I find some of your policies close to scandalous.

In your articles pertaining to those on trial for thefts, check forgery, etc., you often feature quotes and background information which is damaging. (One, for instance, stated information from a boy's probation officer's report used in court regarding the boy's family relationships and parents' "drinking problem" along with, of course, the family name and address.)

I know these people and if they will let this go by, fine. But I won't. No one deserves this kind of publicity.

Rather than report confidential facts as these, I suggest you can create a column for courthouse action just listing names, ages and charges, if you must. Can't you see the hurt and embarrassment you can cause by publishing private information?

I believe this to be true, also, with your divorce stories of any even slightly prominent couple, which often include the amount of alimony requested, etc., as well as the names and ages of children. (As if they're not going through enough!) Everyone interested in the divorces filed in the county may find them listed with all the others.

If you need these articles to fill up space I suggest you use the Guiness "Book of World Records." I'd rather see you helping people rather than hurting them.

Hobos discovered how to freeload down life's highway before the hippie was invented.

A hippie isn't sure where he's headed but he knows how to get there: In somebody else's car.

Hobos have been on the road for 73 long years, and where has it got them? To Britt, Iowa.

Marin Has Its Watergate: One Closed Against All Comers

First, a most grateful thanks for the stack of birthday cards, most of which had personal notes of best wishes and approval of the column. I wish there were some way I could put in words what I feel,

Next: A number of the cards asked how we landed at the top of Wolfe Grade, if we turned right at Kentfield Corners? The answer is: We didn't turn right. Somehow we worked our way over into what is now Del Mesa — search me!

A WORD ABOUT our local Watergate: It has the same name but different genes. The extremists on the Marin Municipal Water District board simply closed the gate. That district was brought into being as a service organization, not a legislative one.

They are playing water roulette, with the homes and lives of every one living in the district, by not going ahead with the hookup voted by the people they are elected to serve. One throne room is enough in this county of ours. Neither are they gods or royalty.

THERE IS ONE thing I have wanted to urge you to do for some time. It is this: Make it a habit to read the columns of short paragraphs (usually on Wednesday) relating the action of the board of supervisors at their Tuesday meetings. Many things of importance are listed there.

Here is something that has bothered me for years: During the first days of considering the purchase of the Net Depot Annex for a park site, a seismologist living in another county and who had been with the federal government for a number of years telephoned me one evening from his home. He urged me to try to stop the purchase for the following reason:

Off shore a short distance is a fault (I think he said it was a part of the San Andreas one). He said that the seismologists had worried about it for years as there was a constant movement each year — one side moving north and the other south. . .

There was so much in-fighting going on at the board level that I just didn't pass the word along.

I think I should take this up as soon as there seems to be a move to buy the depot now.

Accountability? Yes; Lockstep Control? No

By RUS WALTON

There is indeed a need for greater accountability in public education. Taxpayers and parents deserve a better stewardship of their school tax monies.

But increased accountability must not mean increased centralism. In fact, increased state control of local school districts is one of the factors weakening accountability. Greater centralism would only assure lock-step controls without accountability.

That is why many conservatives are upset about two items adopted at its July meeting by the state Board of Education. They frankly fear that the two items are two more planks in the lid for the coffin for local controls.

THE FIRST ITEM, "California School Accounting Manual," is a 140-page directive based on the concept of "Program Budgeting": meaning, a grouping of proposed expenditure items according to the series of "activities or programs they are intended to support."

That brings up the second item adopted by the board: "Statement of School District Development of Goals and Priorities." Hook that with the accounting manual and you come very close to something called PPBS (Planning, Programming and Budgeting System).

The advocates of PPBS hide behind the claim that it is simply designed to get the most out of each dollar spent, to make the teacher and the administrator accountable. In a sense, that is true. But the central question is: accountable to whom? For what?

Those who push for PPBS march under the flag of "efficiency and cost control." They fly a false banner.Their true standard is "centralize and conform." It's not just costs they would control — it's kids, as well.

Because, when you dig through the semantic garbage and the elitist camouflage, you get to the nub of PPBS as it relates to public education and our kids: the direction and control of student attitudes and behavior.

IF YOU THINK that summation too harsh, take a look at products coming off today's largely "programmed and budgeted" education assembly line. As Governor Reagan once said: "It's not that our young people don't know anything; it's just that they know so much that isn't true."

How much more control do those PPBS birds want? Right now not more than 10-15 per cent of the decisions affecting our local schools are made at the district level. The balance are mandated by federal and state masters, through the allocation of specific funds for specific programs, through fastening priorities to special grants, and by requiring pre-set evaluations.

THE BOARD of education, by embracing those two pre-PPBS items as it did, moved in the wrong direction. It should be working to restore and revitalize local autonomy. Accountability could be more properly achieved if the state and federal masters would get out of the temple and let the districts run their schools.

Kids, parents, teachers and administrators should not be forced to walk in lock step. Not if you're building a society of free individuals.

Novato Mayor Gives City's Horsey Set Lecture On Manners

At a recent Novato City Council meeting, Mayor Fred F. Ruegg had some not-too-kind words to say to horse riders, especially the younger ones.

It came after a request was made to include more horse trails on the city plan. Representatives of Marin Trails and Novato horse people asked for the addition of more designated horse trails.

Mayor Ruegg said he hoped they would give other people the same courtesy which they were asking. He said the adult horse riders ought to teach their children proper manners while riding horseback.

The mayor pointed out they should not ride horses on the sidewalks, and when the horse leaves its large calling card, it ought to be cleaned up.

Youngsters should not ride their horses up to the front doors of food establishments such as Baskin-Robbins ice cream store on Grant Avenue which not only creates a smelly condition but also keeps potential customers away, he said.

He told of one girl who rode her horse through the gate at Pioneer Memorial Park right past a sign reading "No Horses" and onto the turf of the park. He said he told her that she should not take her horse there, and she defied him.

It may not do any good, but at least the mayor made it clear that not everyone likes horses on sidewalks.

AMONG THE CITIZENS of Novato who are against City Mgr. Charles A. Brown is Betty Machado, former candidate for the city council and a member of the Novato Unified School District board.

Not long after Brown was appointed city manager, she was intrigued by his name and a slogan of the "Peanuts" comic strip. She engineered a "You're a Good Man Charley Brown Day."

Some people told her to wait and see if Charles Brown was a "good man," but she did not.

Now that she does not like him, we wonder how she feels about her "Good Man Charley Brown Day."

ONE NOVATO butcher shop will probably come out of the meat shortage with more business.

Grant Avenue Meats in the Tresch Triangle has adopted the policy of not selling meat to anyone except regular customers. When a woman the other day wanted a large number of T-bone steaks, she was told to get them from her regular meat market as she had not been in the store before. That was when the policy was adopted to serve regular customers.

If the store can supply its regular customers during the meat shortage, they will probably remember when the meat shortage ends.

Span Transit Fare Hikes Go On Shelf

A committee of Golden Gate Bridge District directors agreed Thursday to forget about bus and ferry fare hikes for at least six months.

The finance-auditing committee, which has pushed for months to raise both transit fares and bridge tolls, decided to press only for toll hikes.

An 18-month study on how such increases would affect bridge and transit use is now underway. Some conclusions may be ready early next year and the committee agreed to await those results.

The committee postponed reviving the plan to raise the toll to 75 cents until more data is available on the district's financial needs over the next five years. The hike had been turned down by the full bridge board because of opposition by San Francisco supervisors, but several of the supervisors now favor a higher toll charge.

Bank Is Robbed By Banker At Lunch

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — John Nicholas, an employe of a downtown bank, was charged Thursday with robbing a bank a few doors away.

Younger—Four Too Many In Top Race

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Republicans can't afford a four-way race for governor next year because President Nixon's fund raisers milked GOP contributors of so much money last year, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger said Thursday.

He said he personally plans money-raising dinners later this year in four California cities for his potential gubernatorial campaign. He is one of the four most frequently mentioned contenders for the GOP nomination next year.

Younger said the field of potential candidates would be narrowed if key GOP backers would publicly declare who they support. But Younger said he is not advocating any "king-making" effort to pick a single candidate.

Younger said he hopes that "100 or so" top GOP leaders in California will "choose up sides" so that prospective candidates know which are the two or three candidates with the most support.

"I expect if that process takes place, I will be beneficiary of a great deal of that support," Younger said.

Asked what was wrong with four major candidates running for the GOP nomination to succeed Gov. Ronald Reagan, Younger replied.

"We could, but we would lose the general election. There just aren't enough resources for four candidates."

He said the two major problems facing the California Republican party are: being outnumbered by a 60-40 ratio in voter registration, and being short of campaign money because GOP contributors were pressured to give so much to Nixon's 1972 campaign.

In addition to Younger, other frequently mentioned GOP candidates for governor are Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, Controller Houston Flournoy and Robert Finch, onetime lieutenant governor and former presidential adviser.

Asked about the possible candidacy of Caspar Weinberger, the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Younger said: "For a variety of reasons, I think nothing will come of it. I don't think he's interested."

Contradictory Actions By Transit District

Marin County Transit District directors (who double as county supervisors) decided this week to try to increase the district's tax rate to 25 cents per $100 accessed valuation next year — five times the present limit.

That levy, we understand, would product about $2 million per year to underwrite bus transit within Marin which supplements the commute service of the Golden Gate Bridge District. The bridge district runs the local Marin buses under contract with the transit district.

Two million dollars does not sound like an excessive amount to subsidize mass transit. Many millions have been spent in building roads which directly or indirectly subsidize bus and truck lines and private automobile owners.

BUT AT the same meeting, the directors took an opposite tack. While voting to up the tax rate to provide a better transit system, they also voted to meantime cut back on the existing system.

This will be done by eliminating some of the less-used bus schedules. No route will be eliminated entirely, but service will be less frequent on some and early morning and late evening runs will be cut off from others.

Cutting the service while proposing to increase the tax rate to enlarge service sounds rather self-contradictory.

The explanation given is that present bus patronage falls too far short of the cost of operating the in-county buses. The 5-cent tax rate fails to make up the loss. The district is using up a reserve fund it built up for several years while it was only a "paper district."

Even the reduced service, according to Ray W. Foreaker, transit district manager (who doubles as county director of public works), will require using some of the reserve fund. It will, he said, leave a reserve of just under $100,000 at the end of the fiscal year. He figures that amount of reserve is necessary.

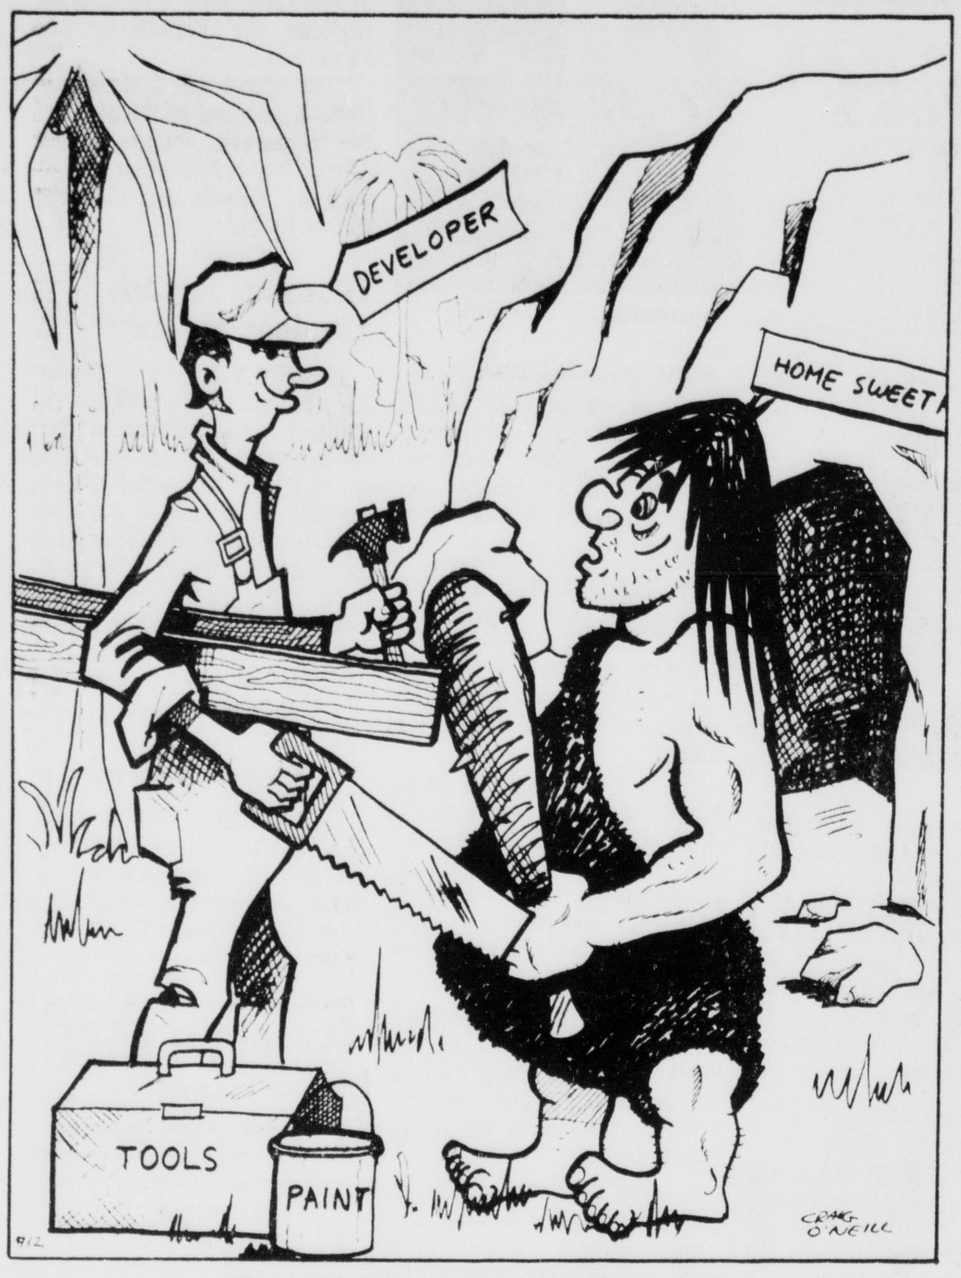
THE FLAW in this arrangement is that, by reducing service, the transit district will drive people away from bus use — exactly the opposit of the its purpose.

The fact that a particular route at a particular time of day is not now drawing many riders may mean that it is not needed. On the other hand, it may mean simply that existence of the service is not understood widely enough.

The transit district has done little to promote bus use within the county, although the bridge district has done a good job of promoting commute bus use. The transit district has not even posted schedules at bus stops.

Maybe the trouble is that neither the supervisors (who double as transit directors) nor the public works director (who doubles as transit manager) know a great deal about mass transit operations.

Marin County Transit District should make every effort to promote more use of buses. Cutting the existing service is not likely to promote more use.



"But I like things the way they are."

No Need For Puzzlement To Exist Over Responsibility For Watergate

WASHINGTON — In the play "Anna and the King of Siam," the King is always remarking, "It's a puzzlement!"

In the witness box before the Ervin committee, H.R. Haldeman ended his testimony by saying, as if brooding aloud, that as of that moment he couldn't see how Watergate came into being or where the responsibility for it must lie.

It really is not that puzzling. The evidence on the public record already seems sufficient to show where in four concrete instances the Watergate burglary, the psychiatrist's office break-in and, what is even worse, the White House coverup could have been stopped.

While it may not yet be possible to see where the collective crimes of Watergate started, it is possible to see where it could have been stopped — if those who had the knowledge and power to stop them had acted faithfully, fearlessly and honorably.

HERE ARE THE FOUR instances in which those with great power close to the President could have said "no" and the Watergate monster would almost certainly have been sidetracked — instead of saying "yes," in the wake of which so much evil and harm to the presidency flowed.

1. — When Atty. Gen. John Mitchell failed to instantly fire G. Gordon Liddy — an employee on the staff of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President — when Liddy unfolded his plan to burglarize and bug Democratic National Committee headquarters — even after, as Mitchell claimed, he had twice previously rejected Liddy's plan. If Mitchell testified truthfully, hadn't Liddy then and thereby proved to be unreliable and unwilling to follow the orders of the attorney general?

2. — When John D. Ehrlichman, after learning of the unauthorized Liddy-Hunt break-in of the Los Angeles office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, failed to bring about their dismissal. There was ample cause for it. These men were then employees at the White House. Ehrlichman testified that the break-in was not authorized. Dr. Fielding, the psychiatrist, was not charged with violating national security or any other crime. He had stolen no classified papers, but Liddy and Hunt broke into his office to steal his classified papers — papers professionally private between doctor and patient.

AFTER THESE TWO failures to act decisively, the Watergate monster was on the loose. These were two crucial turning points.

3. — But there was another crossing at which the worst consequences to the President and to the nation could have been halted. To me the coverup on the part of officials of the administration and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President was worse than the Watergate offenses themselves. John Mitchell concluded that it was better to cover up everything he knew about the Watergate offenses than to face them promptly, cleanly and openly because doing so might hurt Richard Nixon's presidential campaign. And in the end, the presidency and the nation and the quality of the democratic process were grievously wounded.

4. — The worst could have been averted at one more point. Mitchell testified that he kept President Nixon in the dark before the election for political reasons, and after the election for fear that Mr. Nixon would act too decisively; that is, as he said, for fear the President "would lower the boom." He left me with the impression that he thought that would be a mess. Mr. Mitchell's coverup led to a worse mess.

I am not suggesting that this is all there is to Watergate. But I am suggesting that there is an answer to Mr. Haldeman's puzzlement about the origins of Watergate and at least where much responsibility for it lies.

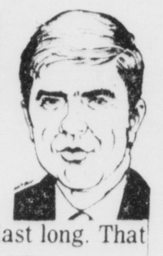
ERNEST B. FURGURSON



The Siege Of Mason's Neck, Habitat Of National Bird

WASHINGTON — Corregidor, Leningrad, Cassino and Khe Sanh have nothing on Mason's Neck. It has been under seige longer than any of them. It has been shaken, but never fallen. Now it is under assault again, and this could be the worst.

Mason's Neck is a peninsula that juts into the Potomac River barely 20 miles below Washington, within view of Mount Vernon. It is the last holdout anywhere near the nation's capital of the nation's endangered symbol, the American bald eagle. And that is the kind of information that provokes an eloquent shrug from Virginia authorities who want to build an airport nearby.

Repeatedly over the past decade, residents of the area have combined to stave off business interests pressuring the relatively undisturbed backwater. One developer wanted to convert the neck into a ready-made city of 20,000 persons.

The area's residents formed a committee and sought help. National organizations threw their influence and more importantly their assets behind the preservation effort. The Nature Conservancy produced $5.9 million to hold over 900 acres of marsh and forest until a series of connecting parks, historical sites and wildlife refuges could be linked together to keep the neck unviolated.

Then when the concerned groups sighed at what seemed victory, another attack came from the river side, where Maryland dredgers wanted to work close to the Virginia shore. That would have ruined the great marsh around which the eagles breed. The dredgers were turned back, too, after the alarm was sounded. The eagles seemed safe for awhile.

But such victories never last long. That was two-and-one-half years ago.

The other side is at it again, this time in the persons of Virginia state airport officials and the United States Army. The state officials would like to build a major airport for private and business planes on the property of Fort Belvoir, taking some of the load off Washington National Airport. A projected 400 jet and propeller flights a day would use the runway, plotted to run inland off a cover barely a quarter-mile from the eagle sanctuary.

Fort Belvoir, headquarters of the Army Engineers, already has one airport about a mile away, the other side of U.S. Route 1. Its approaches run over Army property, rather than the neck. But apparently there is no thought of using it for the private air traffic outlet.

In this case, as in so many, plans have tiptoed close to the execution stage before the public was let in on them.

Meanwhile the state has been negotiating with the Army for final permission to proceed — and, unfortunately, Gov. Linwood Holton is an old friend of Mr. Nixon who has diligently preserved that goodwill in hopes of a federal appointment when his term in Richmond expires. Thus the attackers are wielding a powerful new weapon this time.

The siege of Mason's Neck is of concern to the whole country, if only because it involves the national capital and the national bird. Further, if the sanctuary is breached by this attack, it will be ironic — and instructive to all — that it finally fell not to the feared private developers, but to a sneak attack from a combination of state and federal power that should have been arrayed in its protection.

Wheels For Marin Appreciates Support

The staff of Wheels for Marin would like to express our genuine appreciation for the excellent story Fred Strebeigh did on Whistlestop Wheels in the July 31 Independent-Journal.

It was another example of the great supportive help the I-J has given to the transportation programs: Whistlestop for Seniors, and Wheels for Marin serving the ill and the handicapped, now merged into Whistlestop Wheels.

Without this kind of support and the present participation of Red Cross, Easter Seal Society, Zonta International, as well as the many organizations and individuals who have contributed so much over the years, our programs could not have existed.

These programs are filling a great need in Marin, and are being looked to as models across the state.

We hope to see you and all your readers at the Whistlestop Wheels bike swap on Sept. 22, at College of Marin.

Chavez Supporter Disputes Editorial

I feel called upon to take issue with your Aug. 3 editorial on the farm workers' strike.

You claim that the Teamsters — United Farm Workers fight is "simply a jurisdictional dispute." But the California Supreme Court has recently ruled differently, saying that the Teamsters are working as allies of the growers.

You claim that the UFW organizing campaign "was and is to benefit union treasuries." But under UFW contracts wages have gone up, the farm workers have achieved job security, the use of pesticides has been strictly controlled, and some of the money from the union treasury has gone to finance construction of four medical clinics to aid a people whose life-expectancy is 30 years less than the average in America.

Finally, you claim that the UFW is opposed to secret-ballot elections for union representation, and cite their campaign against Proposition 22 last November. Proposition 22 would have done a lot of things, but it would not have provided for fair or effective union representation, because it would have prevented most workers from participating in elections and prohibited strikes during the harvest season.

Cesar Chavez is not afraid of honest elections; thousands of his supporters are willing to go to jail for the UFW. Nobody has risked jail for Frank Fitzsimmons' Teamsters.

New FDA Regulations Harmful To People

Along with a million other concerned people, I've written letters to congressmen, appealing for reason and updated thinking within the FDA, concerning nutritional needs. Despite the flood of letters, including many from leading scientists and physicians, pointing out that while we're not an underfed nation, we are undernourished, the plan to ban supplements is being carried out. Such non-responsiveness to the wishes and needs of the public indicates that the FDA considers us to be uninformed faddists, incapable of knowing what may be best for our individual needs, thus we're being protected from ourselves!

Which motivates me to invite FDA officials to come visit our store, for example, as objective observers. Listen to our customers as they talk with us and among themselves. You'll discover that they're reasonable, intelligent people, fully capable of making rational decisions, obviously. Can you, FDA officials, ignore the right of these people to flourish? We in the health food industry can find other means of supporting ourselves. But we're concerned for our customers, if your plan prevails, who will be hard put to thrive if you impose those restrictions, based on outdated, disproven theories which haven't caught up with what the new breed of preventive scientists advocate.

Perhaps you could learn something about optimum health from these people who know where they're going, despite bureaucratic roadblocks along the way.

Objects To Courtroom And Divorce Stories

As an editor who would seem to be responsible for the quality of the Independent-Journal, I can't see how you can sit back and accept it as it is. I find some of your policies close to scandalous.

In your articles pertaining to those on trial for thefts, check forgery, etc., you often feature quotes and background information which is damaging. (One, for instance, stated information from a boy's probation officer's report used in court regarding the boy's family relationships and parents' "drinking problem" along with, of course, the family name and address.)

I know these people and if they will let this go by, fine. But I won't. No one deserves this kind of publicity.

Rather than report confidential facts as these, I suggest you can create a column for courthouse action just listing names, ages and charges, if you must. Can't you see the hurt and embarrassment you can cause by publishing private information?

I believe this to be true, also, with your divorce stories of any even slightly prominent couple, which often include the amount of alimony requested, etc., as well as the names and ages of children. (As if they're not going through enough!) Everyone interested in the divorces filed in the county may find them listed with all the others.

If you need these articles to fill up space I suggest you use the Guiness "Book of World Records." I'd rather see you helping people rather than hurting them.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Saturday's 73rd annual Hobo Convention in Britt, Iowa, proves that hippies are nothing new under the sun.

Hobos discovered how to freeload down life's highway before the hippie was invented.

A hippie isn't sure where he's headed but he knows how to get there: In somebody else's car.

Hobos have been on the road for 73 long years, and where has it got them? To Britt, Iowa.

Marin Has Its Watergate: One Closed Against All Comers

First, a most grateful thanks for the stack of birthday cards, most of which had personal notes of best wishes and approval of the column. I wish there were some way I could put in words what I feel,

Next: A number of the cards asked how we landed at the top of Wolfe Grade, if we turned right at Kentfield Corners? The answer is: We didn't turn right. Somehow we worked our way over into what is now Del Mesa — search me!

A WORD ABOUT our local Watergate: It has the same name but different genes. The extremists on the Marin Municipal Water District board simply closed the gate. That district was brought into being as a service organization, not a legislative one.

They are playing water roulette, with the homes and lives of every one living in the district, by not going ahead with the hookup voted by the people they are elected to serve. One throne room is enough in this county of ours. Neither are they gods or royalty.

THERE IS ONE thing I have wanted to urge you to do for some time. It is this: Make it a habit to read the columns of short paragraphs (usually on Wednesday) relating the action of the board of supervisors at their Tuesday meetings. Many things of importance are listed there.

Here is something that has bothered me for years: During the first days of considering the purchase of the Net Depot Annex for a park site, a seismologist living in another county and who had been with the federal government for a number of years telephoned me one evening from his home. He urged me to try to stop the purchase for the following reason:

Off shore a short distance is a fault (I think he said it was a part of the San Andreas one). He said that the seismologists had worried about it for years as there was a constant movement each year — one side moving north and the other south. . .

There was so much in-fighting going on at the board level that I just didn't pass the word along.

I think I should take this up as soon as there seems to be a move to buy the depot now.

Accountability? Yes; Lockstep Control? No

By RUS WALTON

There is indeed a need for greater accountability in public education. Taxpayers and parents deserve a better stewardship of their school tax monies.

But increased accountability must not mean increased centralism. In fact, increased state control of local school districts is one of the factors weakening accountability. Greater centralism would only assure lock-step controls without accountability.

That is why many conservatives are upset about two items adopted at its July meeting by the state Board of Education. They frankly fear that the two items are two more planks in the lid for the coffin for local controls.

THE FIRST ITEM, "California School Accounting Manual," is a 140-page directive based on the concept of "Program Budgeting": meaning, a grouping of proposed expenditure items according to the series of "activities or programs they are intended to support."

That brings up the second item adopted by the board: "Statement of School District Development of Goals and Priorities." Hook that with the accounting manual and you come very close to something called PPBS (Planning, Programming and Budgeting System).

The advocates of PPBS hide behind the claim that it is simply designed to get the most out of each dollar spent, to make the teacher and the administrator accountable. In a sense, that is true. But the central question is: accountable to whom? For what?

Those who push for PPBS march under the flag of "efficiency and cost control." They fly a false banner.Their true standard is "centralize and conform." It's not just costs they would control — it's kids, as well.

Because, when you dig through the semantic garbage and the elitist camouflage, you get to the nub of PPBS as it relates to public education and our kids: the direction and control of student attitudes and behavior.

IF YOU THINK that summation too harsh, take a look at products coming off today's largely "programmed and budgeted" education assembly line. As Governor Reagan once said: "It's not that our young people don't know anything; it's just that they know so much that isn't true."

How much more control do those PPBS birds want? Right now not more than 10-15 per cent of the decisions affecting our local schools are made at the district level. The balance are mandated by federal and state masters, through the allocation of specific funds for specific programs, through fastening priorities to special grants, and by requiring pre-set evaluations.

THE BOARD of education, by embracing those two pre-PPBS items as it did, moved in the wrong direction. It should be working to restore and revitalize local autonomy. Accountability could be more properly achieved if the state and federal masters would get out of the temple and let the districts run their schools.

Kids, parents, teachers and administrators should not be forced to walk in lock step. Not if you're building a society of free individuals.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By THERON NEWELL

Novato Mayor Gives City's Horsey Set Lecture On Manners

At a recent Novato City Council meeting, Mayor Fred F. Ruegg had some not-too-kind words to say to horse riders, especially the younger ones.

It came after a request was made to include more horse trails on the city plan. Representatives of Marin Trails and Novato horse people asked for the addition of more designated horse trails.

Mayor Ruegg said he hoped they would give other people the same courtesy which they were asking. He said the adult horse riders ought to teach their children proper manners while riding horseback.

The mayor pointed out they should not ride horses on the sidewalks, and when the horse leaves its large calling card, it ought to be cleaned up.

Youngsters should not ride their horses up to the front doors of food establishments such as Baskin-Robbins ice cream store on Grant Avenue which not only creates a smelly condition but also keeps potential customers away, he said.

He told of one girl who rode her horse through the gate at Pioneer Memorial Park right past a sign reading "No Horses" and onto the turf of the park. He said he told her that she should not take her horse there, and she defied him.

It may not do any good, but at least the mayor made it clear that not everyone likes horses on sidewalks.

AMONG THE CITIZENS of Novato who are against City Mgr. Charles A. Brown is Betty Machado, former candidate for the city council and a member of the Novato Unified School District board.

Not long after Brown was appointed city manager, she was intrigued by his name and a slogan of the "Peanuts" comic strip. She engineered a "You're a Good Man Charley Brown Day."

Some people told her to wait and see if Charles Brown was a "good man," but she did not.

Now that she does not like him, we wonder how she feels about her "Good Man Charley Brown Day."

ONE NOVATO butcher shop will probably come out of the meat shortage with more business.

Grant Avenue Meats in the Tresch Triangle has adopted the policy of not selling meat to anyone except regular customers. When a woman the other day wanted a large number of T-bone steaks, she was told to get them from her regular meat market as she had not been in the store before. That was when the policy was adopted to serve regular customers.

If the store can supply its regular customers during the meat shortage, they will probably remember when the meat shortage ends.

Span Transit Fare Hikes Go On Shelf

A committee of Golden Gate Bridge District directors agreed Thursday to forget about bus and ferry fare hikes for at least six months.

The finance-auditing committee, which has pushed for months to raise both transit fares and bridge tolls, decided to press only for toll hikes.

An 18-month study on how such increases would affect bridge and transit use is now underway. Some conclusions may be ready early next year and the committee agreed to await those results.

The committee postponed reviving the plan to raise the toll to 75 cents until more data is available on the district's financial needs over the next five years. The hike had been turned down by the full bridge board because of opposition by San Francisco supervisors, but several of the supervisors now favor a higher toll charge.

Bank Is Robbed By Banker At Lunch

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — John Nicholas, an employe of a downtown bank, was charged Thursday with robbing a bank a few doors away.

Consumer Guide Now Available In Spanish

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Attorney General Evelle J. Younger Thursday announced his office has published a Spanish-language edition of a booklet giving persons tips on protecting themselves against bunco artists and confidence men.

The 28-page booklet, entitled "On Guard: A Guide to the Consumer," previously was made available in English to the public. It can be obtained in both Spanish or English by writing the Public Correspondence Unit, 5th and Capitol Mall, Sacramento.

Younger—Four Too Many In Top Race

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Republicans can't afford a four-way race for governor next year because President Nixon's fund raisers milked GOP contributors of so much money last year, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger said Thursday.

He said he personally plans money-raising dinners later this year in four California cities for his potential gubernatorial campaign. He is one of the four most frequently mentioned contenders for the GOP nomination next year.

Younger said the field of potential candidates would be narrowed if key GOP backers would publicly declare who they support. But Younger said he is not advocating any "king-making" effort to pick a single candidate.

Younger said he hopes that "100 or so" top GOP leaders in California will "choose up sides" so that prospective candidates know which are the two or three candidates with the most support.

"I expect if that process takes place, I will be beneficiary of a great deal of that support," Younger said.

Asked what was wrong with four major candidates running for the GOP nomination to succeed Gov. Ronald Reagan, Younger replied.

"We could, but we would lose the general election. There just aren't enough resources for four candidates."

He said the two major problems facing the California Republican party are: being outnumbered by a 60-40 ratio in voter registration, and being short of campaign money because GOP contributors were pressured to give so much to Nixon's 1972 campaign.

In addition to Younger, other frequently mentioned GOP candidates for governor are Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, Controller Houston Flournoy and Robert Finch, onetime lieutenant governor and former presidential adviser.

Asked about the possible candidacy of Caspar Weinberger, the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Younger said: "For a variety of reasons, I think nothing will come of it. I don't think he's interested."

Checks Suspect Pleads Innocent

A San Rafael man who allegedly cashed four bad checks at a San Anselmo poultry market between July 11 and 13 has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to two counts of forgery.

Preliminary hearing for Aldo Barberini, 40, of 321 Paloma Avenue, was set for Tuesday.

He is charged with cashing $450 in checks written in the name of Carol Agnost, at Marin Poultry, 34 Greenfield Avenue.

New Church Puts Women In Back Seat

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — The accent is not on youth in the formation of a conservative new Presbyterian denomination, and women's lib has made few converts.

Virtually all the delegates at a planning session that wound up here Thursday after three days of debate were middleaged or older, and they laid the groundwork for a church structure in which women will take a back seat.

The delegates represented more than 200 Southern Presbyterian churches that have severed their ties to the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., the million-member southern Presbyterian body.

They forged the groundwork for a new denomination that will spurn most of the more liberal policies of the present mother church, returning to what the delegates consider the denomination's basic tenets.

Four major operating committees of the new group will meet in Atlanta Sept. 7-8 to make final preparations for the Dec. 4 Birmingham, Ala., session at which the church will officially begin.

The delegates adopted a constitutional proposal providing that all church offices be held by men. Opposition to ordination of women was one of the reasons many of the churches dropped out of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

The group, which feels it is returning to what the Presbyterian church should be, rather than forming a new body, also provided that title and control of church property be left with local churches. The group adopted the Book of Church Order of 1933 of the Presbyterian church as its basic document, and the Westminister Confession as the foundation of its doctrine.

The leaders of the group, called the Continuing Presbyterian Church, have opposed what they consider a swing to liberalism in the church, particularly in stands on abortion, premarital sex, ordination of women and other social and religious matters.

Britain's Commonwealth Equality Pleases Heath

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON (UPI) — Britain has effectively relinquished its role as leader of the 33-nation British Commonwealth, and Prime Minister Edward Heath is happier for it.

The Statute of Westminster of 1931 creating the Commonwealth defined the status of member nations as "autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, but united by a common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Those were the days when Britain's empire spanned the globe. In the years since, 12 members became independent republics and the Empire shrank dramatically.

Far from being united "by a common allegiance to the Crown," in recent years Commonwealth conferences became forums for vehement criticism of Britain—"Brit-bashing" as Heath called it—especially by African and Asian leaders.

But at this year's Commonwealth conference, just concluded in Ottawa, Britain put the emphasis on the phrase, "in no way subordinate one to another," and made it clear Britain would no longer act as the undisputed leader of the Commonwealth.

"It has been a constructive conference—better than any other Commonwealth conference I have attended," Heath told newsmen before leaving Ottawa.

British officials said when Heath made this comment he was thinking of the Singapore prime minister's conference in 1971 when the Asians and black leaders slammed him unmercifully for his plans to resume arms sales to South Africa.

"We had the impression that in the last nine days he had grown to like the Commonwealth, to which earlier he appeared to attach little importance," a British correspondent wrote from Ottawa.

Another said: "Having endured sustained Brit-bashing and general abuse at the 1971 Singapore conference, he arrived an apprehensive man, very much on edge. But things have turned out very much better than he expected."

British officials say Heath was pleased that this year's Commonwealth conference dropped most of the set piece speeches of the past and did most of its business at small private meetings attended only by the leaders and one or two aides for each.

Aides say Heath believes such free exchanges are worthwhile and that he favors holding more such meetings.

Divorce Lawyer, Burtons Confer

ROME (UPI) — The lawyer handling divorce proceedings for Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton arrived to confer with the estranged couple today.

Lawyer Aaron Frosch and his wife were met at Leonardo da Vinci Airport by Miss Taylor's secretary and Burton's secretary and driven directly to the villa of producer Carlo Ponti, where Burton has been staying.

Frosch announced in New York July 31 that the couple had asked him to file for divorce in Switzerland, where they have their permanent residence in Gstaad. Since then Miss Taylor has been living in a suite at Rome's Grand Hotel but has spent most of her evenings with Burton and the Pontis.

Pakistan Has A New President

Fazal, 69, until recently was speaker of the National Assembly.

Opposition candidate Amirzada Khan, of the pro-Moscow National Awami Party, polled 45 votes in the secret ballot. One vote was declared invalid, and six of the 191 joint house members were absent.

Prime ministerial elections are scheduled for this coming Sunday, with President Zulfikhar Ali Bhutto running as the ruling party candidate, an all but certain winner.

Both are scheduled to be sworn in Tuesday.

"Speed is not the primary goal in racing. What good is it if you have the fastest car if it only lasts a few miles? We strive to see that the car stays together for the full distance of a race. . . . You have to finish all 500 miles [at Indianapolis] in order to win. And anything besides winning is a failure."

Bagley Pens State Office Pay Hike Bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The salary of the governor would be increased to $60,000 a year and California's six other statewide officials would get raises averaging $8,000 each under a proposal by a key legislator.

Bagley's bill already has the support of at least two candidates for governor and backers said it will probably be enacted by the legislature.

Three other states pay their governors more than California's: New York $85,000, Texas $58,500 and New Jersey $50,000. (Bagley said the hikes would be the first pay raises for top state officials since 1971 and would average only about 5 per cent a year. He said the raises are "only a matter of pay equity" and if the legislature doesn't act before 1975, the consitution prohibits raises until 1979.

Lieutenant governor, controller, secretary of state, treasurer, and superintendent of public instruction, from $35,000 to $42,500 a year.

Bagley says he probably will run for controller next year.

He said he introduced the bill on the request of the staff of Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger, a potential gubernatorial candidate, to raise the attorney general's pay to $51,155, the same as the chief justice of the State Supreme Court.

He said traditionally those two posts have had the same pay, but that judges' salary raises have not been matched in recent years.

Then "a concensus was reached" this week, Bagley said, to use his bill to raise the salaries of all constitutional officers.

"Look at the superintendent of public instruction. More than 1,000 local superintendents are making more than the state superintendent. Throughout the state, top local officials are making more than $40,000. Local government is replete with examples," he said.

Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, another likely gubernatorial candidates, said the Bagley plan sounded "reasonable" and would probably be enacted this year.

The bill is AB 2149.

Lagunitas Adds Schoolteachers

The Lagunitas School District board on Wednesday hired two more teachers for its open classroom program, bringing the staff to six.

Supt. Harry F. Roche said trustees employed Sue Thomas at $11,000 a year and Leif Glomset at $9,500.

The program's enrollment is 157, about the same as last year, Roche said.

The board also transferred a full-time teacher to its advanced basic capabilities program, to open the program to additional students.

Trustees adjourned to Sept. 5 at 7:30 p.m.

Cattlemen Tell Their Side Of Costs

By JAMES WILSON

MISSION, S.D. (AP) — Howard Lamoureaux is one of the high-rollers of the Great Plains.

He has survived blizzards and droughts for half a century while building a 17,000-acre cattle ranch. But he's not sure how he survived the high cost of raising beef, and says ranchers have much more to lose than consumers from today's soaring market prices.

"We can lose everything we have," he says.

Lamoureaux and his grandson, Bill Potter, operate the 27-square mile spread between Mission, S.D., and Valentine, Neb., in the heart of the cattle country of the Upper Midwest. They raise about 500 head of their own cattle and graze another 2,500 head for cowmen who have the money to buy calves but don't have the grass to fatten them.

The ranchers buy 400-pound calves in the fall, feed them to about 800 pounds during the next 12 months and then sell to feeders who fatten the animals for commercial slaughter.

Last fall Lamoureaux and Potter sold 350 head of yearlings for $42.50 a hundredweight. Last week they rejected an offer of $50 a hundredweight.

"I asked $55 and was turned down," said Potter, 25. "Two days later I heard feeders were paying $65 a hundred for yearlings. The market is so wild nobody knows what they're worth."

Potter said his yearlings will go to sales barns after the Sept. 12 beef freeze ends. "We don't know what they're worth but an auction should get us a fair price," he said.

Lamoureaux, in his 70s and Potter, an Air Force veteran who has worked with his grandfather most of his life, said the prices sound good but there's another side of the coin. They said overhead costs have tightened the profit margin to the point where only the high prices at the market are saving the business.

"Last year we paid $220 a ton for the high-protein feed that supplements the wild hay we feed the cattle," Potter said. "Today it costs $350 a ton.

"That was a $25,000 tractor you saw being hauled away for repairs," the rancher said. "We've got two more rigs for cutting hay that cost $15,000 apiece. You can't buy a tractor for less than $10,000."

Potter said the next problem may be the accelerating cost of purchasing calves for the next crop. "Last year we paid $52.50 a hundredweight for the calves. The price could go out of sight this year."

His grandfather added: "The only bigger gambler than a cattle rancher is a farmer."

"Sometimes I really get angry," Potter said. "I wished the meat boycotters could come out here some week in the winter when we're working 10 or 11 hours a day in below-zero weather feeding the animals. We work Sunday mornings, and last winter I worked all day on Christmas and New Year's.

"Starting Monday we'll have to work 14 straight days getting the hay up. Then we'll have to sort cattle and get them ready to sell. After we buy our new crop of calves, we vaccinate them, dehorn and brand them and check for illnesses."

Ten miles to the northwest toward the community of Mission, there is another Lamoureaux operation, smaller in land but larger in the number of livestock.

Howard's brother, Claude, owned and operated the ranch for more than a quarter of a century until his death two months ago. Bob Lamoureaux, Claude's son, is looking after it today while continuing his job for the Caterpillar Tractor Co. in Peoria, Ill.

The ranch covers 13,000 acres and is considered by cattlemen in South Dakota and northern Nebraska as perhaps the best balanced operation in the region. Its lush pastures provide feed for more than 1,000 cattle and calves.

"Ranchers are taking a bum rap for the high cost of beef," said Bob Lamoureaux, a middle-aged civil engineer. "In 1948, my dad sold 400 head of yearlings for 30 cents a pound. Today they may be worth 60 cents a pound. But the cost of machinery, feed supplements and labor has increased sevenfold."

Howard and Bob Lamoureaux own about 50 square miles of South Dakota prairie worth more than $2 million. They acknowledge that between them they have about $200,000 worth of machinery. The auction price of their combined cow and cattle herds would bring them more than $1 million.

Howard Lamoureaux says a rancher is fortunate to make 2 per cent on his investment.

"But," said Bob Lamoureaux, "we could make more money if we had the money we have invested in ranching in government bonds instead. But we have two things going for us: the continuing appreciation of the value of the land and the fact that we are doing something we enjoy."

System Planned To Stop Thefts

An electronic security system to eliminate book theft will be installed at the Sir Francis Drake High School library when the school opens Sept. 11.

The $10,800 system is expected to pay for itself within two years, according to Edward J. Neumeier, Tamalpais High School District information officer.

The device was installed in the Tamalpais High School library in 1972 and within 18 months had cut the book losses from 34 per cent to four per cent of total collection, Neumeier said.

The system is also planned for Redwood High School. San Rafael and Terra Linda school libraries installed similar systems last year, he said.

INFLATION VICTIM — John T. Dunlop, director of the federal Cost of Living Council, seems to be feeling the fiscal pinch as much as anyone else. A United Press photographer spotted the holes in Dunlop's shoe soles today in Washington as the price czar announced changes in the timetable for Phase Four.

Fuels Freeze Extended, Other Lids Off Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Cost of Living Council Friday extended the price freeze on gasoline and petroleum products until Aug. 19, but said service stations victimized in price wars would get a break once the freeze is lifted.

For the rest of the economy, except beef, the price freeze expires Monday. Merchants and wholesalers will be able to boost selling prices in line with regulations under the administration's Phase IV stabilization program.

Council Director John T. Dunlop said it would take extra time to draft the complex rules that will govern the oil industry under Phase IV and that was the reason for the one-week extension of the freeze on prices of all petroleum products.

The Phase IV oil industry rules in brief:

Gasoline and home heating oil will be subject to a ceiling price that includes the markup for profit being charged last Jan. 10. But the council said soon it would have to charge a smaller markup than 7 cents a gallon. This provision was to avoid hardship to retailers who were involved in price wars at that time.

Service station owners will have to paste a sticker on every gasoline and diesel oil pump stating the ceiling price and octane rating of the fuel. This is supposed to prevent such price gouging techniques as selling a lower-octane gasoline for the same price.

Home heating oil retailers can raise their ceiling prices at the start of each month to reflect higher costs, but also must reduce prices if costs decline. The automatic price adjustment is designed to encourage more heating oil imports, the council said, and to avoid the sort of shortages that left some parts of the nation with cold furnaces last winter.

Oil drillers will be able to sell "new oil", that is, oil above the amount the company produced last year, at free market prices. This, too, is designed to encourage additional production.

Dunlop said the rules were designed to "strike a delicate balance between constraining prices while at the same time encouraging the necessary increase in supplies which a country must have."

"The council is aware that energy prices must be allowed to rise in order to stimulate development of new energy reserves and make possible the purchase of higher cost foreign oil," Dunlop said. "At the same time, we must prevent unnecessary price increases."

The council also announced new Phase IV rules for the insurance industry that will require big insurance companies to notify the council 30 days in advance of significant hikes in premium charges.

Health insurers with $50 million or more of earned premium and property-liability insurers above $150 million will have to notify both the council and state insurance regulatory agencies in advance of proposed rate increases of more than 5 per cent which affect $1 million or more in annual premiums.

Dunlop said the rules, similar to those that governed the insurance industry during the Phase II stabilization program, "will have a restraining effect on the amount of premium increases implemented by insurers during Phase IV."

Food Tab 15 Per Cent Higher Than 1972's

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Agriculture Department today said the cost of food in the United States during the second quarter of this year was 15 per cent higher than it was in 1972.

The department also said the production of wheat, corn and soybean crops will set new records this year, but experts said prices probably will not come down because the big crops are less than had been expected.

In other developments:

Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and House Minority Leader Gerald Ford, R-Mich., called for lifting the price freeze on beef before Sept. 12.

President Nixon accepted a compromise with Congress on a new farm bill that administration officials say will be the kick-off for a full-scale drive to increase food supplies. Higher

New York Bank Hikes Prime Rate—New High

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank today raised its interest rate on prime business loans to 9-¼ per cent, a new all-time high, and promptly got a pat on the back from Treasury Secretary George Shultz.

Shultz told a news conference in Detroit that Citibank's move is "desirable in the short run" because it should put a damper on "unsustainable economic growth."

But Shultz quickly added that such a high prime rate is most undesirable in the long run.

Nevertheless, he said soaring interest rates could help "cool down" the country's economic growth rate from a current 8 per cent to a much more sustainable level of around 4 per cent.

He pointed out that in spite of a dozen increases in the prime rate so far this year—the 9-¼ rate will be the 13th if it becomes general—the entire level of interest rates in the United

Panel Hits Commune Ban Plan

By KAREN PETERSON

Calling it an "infringement upon a citizen's rights," the Marin County Human Rights Commission Thursday night recommended defeat of San Rafael's proposed anticommune ordinance.

The ordinance, unanimously approved by the San Rafael Planning Commission, would prohibit more than five unrelated people from living in a single-family residence, if passed by the city council at its Sept. 4 meeting.

The human rights commission also urged rescinding of any similar ordinances in other Marin cities.

Protest against the ordinance was brought before the commission by Kenneth R. Frankel, co-owner of the 25-room mansion at 16 Culloden Park Road, now an Ashram for about 25 men and women and 10 children. J. Stanley Ott, assistant city planner, represented the City of San Rafael at the sparsely attended public hearing.

Commissioner Joaquin P. Gallardo's move to adopt the recommendation, after nearly two hours of hearings, was challenged by San Rafael City Mgr. William Bielser, who arrived shortly before the commission's vote.

Bielser claimed that Gallardo's vote would be influenced by his involvement litigation against the city of San Rafael over the city's redevelopment plans.

Gallardo, withdrawing his motion, said he felt "quite strongly about what Mr. Bielser said. But I still want to vote and will not stand for a denial of my vote."

The motion was then made by Commissioner Dee Fratus and passed 4 to 1 with Lily Whittle opposed. "Every game has its rules and regulations," said Mrs. Whittle, "without them society could not function."

Ott, in his statement to the commission, said that although some neighbors have complained about parking problems caused by the ashram, the ordinance is not aimed at any specific residence.

"Over the past four years," he said, "Our office has received and attempted to do something about complaints in regard to excessive occupancy by large numbers of people in single family residences in several sectors of San Rafael."

The major purpose of the ordinance, he continued, is to bring into conformity both the building code and zoning ordinance definitions of the word "family." The building code, he said, now defines a family as related by blood or marriage while the zoning definition is "so worded that almost any combination of people in any numerical amount could live in a place or residence. "We have to have regulations and lines drawn somewhere."

Ott also told the commission that if it is adopted, the zoning ordinance would permit applications for variances and adjustments if the house were "excessively large and had a large number of bedrooms."

Ott said, "San Rafael is not establishing any precedent with the ordinance ... in Marin now, we are the exception rather than the rule."

Frankel said he opposed the ordinance because the distinction between related and unrelated persons is discriminatory. Complaints about communes,

Shopping Center Faces New Tangle

Hahn Must Prepare An Impact Report

By MARY LEYDECKER

Even though a federal environmental agency has withdrawn objections to a fill permit for the proposed Ernest W. Hahn regional shopping center in Corte Madera, the project apparently faces a new tangle of governmental red tape.

A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers, which must issue the permit needed to fill 45 acres of marshland in east Corte Madera, said today that the Hahn firm still must go through lengthy procedures before a decision will be made.

In a letter received by Corte Madera Town officials Thursday, the regional office of the federal Environmental Protection Agency withdrew objections made earlier to issuance of the permit by the corps.

Some Corte Madera officials, unaware of further legal complications, said they believed this would lead soon to the granting of the permit.

Today, however, Col. James L. Lammie, district engineer for the corps in San Francisco, said that the project now must go before the Council on Environmental Quality in Washington, D.C.

In order to be considered by this agency, an "environmental impact study" must be prepared under new federal guidelines he said, and recent court rulings have held that an environmental impact report, such as already prepared in the Hahn case for state authorities, will not suffice.

"We have all the information and needed background," he said, indicating that a contracting firm could probably prepare the study within three or four weeks.

The study then will remain on file with the council for 90 days, he said, and persons wishing to comment may do so within the first 45 days. Finally, any comments will be incorporated in the study and it will be on file for another 30 days before being handed over to the Corps of Engineers.

It is expected then that the final decision on the permit will come out of Washington, not San Francisco.

In the meantime, the corps will seek public reaction to the proposed shopping center from the Marin County Board of Supervisors, as representatives of the county as a whole.

"After all, we're not in the business of telling Marin residents where they ought to put their shopping centers," a corps spokesman said.

A further complication for the Hahn firm is an election scheduled Sept. 18 in Corte Madera, in which three councilmen face recall. Some of their critics also have opposed the shopping center proposed for empty land east of Highway 101.

After objections on environmental grounds, Hahn redrew his plans for the center and currently is asking to fill only about 45 acres as compared to 75 in the original proposal. He also has agreed to leave two ponds in the north portion natural with surrounding open space.

The latest news from the corps about the need for sending a new report to Washington "means the whole project is several more months down the tubes," Councilman Edward W. Colthurst, one of the men facing recall, said today.

Meanwhile in Marin Superior Court, the Town of Corte Madera has lost a bid to dismiss two lawsuits challenging the shopping center.

Visiting Judge Harry Roberts of Mono County has denied the town's motion for a summary judgment in favor of the town in suits brought by Joel Shawn and by J. Patrick and Peter J. Hunt.

In the preliminary skirmish, the town contended there wasn't enough substance to the suits to warrant taking the cases to trial. Roberts disagreed.

The suits ask that work on the proposed multimillion dollar regional center be halted until a more thorough state environmental impact report is prepared and considered.

CHAMPION IS INVITED FOR DINNER

As auctioneer Bill Lefty called for bids Thursday, Ashcraft's fellow 4-H clubbers shouted "higher."

The steer was bought by Bill Deane, a family friend, who said he plans to use about 600 pounds of 15-year-old Mark's former pet for his family's table.

Bedayan Defense Pushes Insanity Angle At Trial

By BILL ROBERTS

William Brent Bedayan was floridly psychotic, experienced in an acute schizophrenic reaction and loss of thought process when he killed three people in Mill Valley in March.

So testified Dr. Alla Soufi, a clinical psychologist from San Francisco, at Bedayan's trial Thursday as the defense attempted to prove Bedayan insane at the time of the killings.

Dr. Soufi said Bedayan had a severe abnormality of the mind which completely distorted reality and he did not fully realize what he was doing or whom he was killing.

Defense attorney Frank J. Cox had admitted that Bedayan killed Melvin and Ruth Schallock and their 19-year-old son, Daniel, and set fire to their home.

Dr. Soufi said Bedayan experienced extreme depression near the time of the killings.

The doctor said the depression built up for quite some time and was based on guilt feelings of Bedayan who was troubled over his own concept of manhood and virility.

Bedayan was concerned over homosexuality, Dr. Soufi said. Although he did not think the defendant was practicing homosexuality he may have had homosexual feelings. These feelings caused the youth to question his own manhood and caused much of the depression, the doctor said.

On cross-examination today, in the 12th day of the trial, Dr. Soufi admitted that a person pleading innocent of triple murder by reason of insanity probably would give self-serving answers to psychological tests.

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales pointed out Bedayan's background in psychology classes at the College of Marin, work at the state hospital in Napa, and additional reading on psychological subjects. The doctor said an individual with such a background could tailor answers to fit a sanity defense.

Bales also noted what he thought were inconsistencies in some of Bedayan's answers to psychological test questions. But Dr. Soufi said most were

Music Festival Leads Activities

The cultural center of Marin County shifts sharply to the north and west this weekend as the ninth annual Inverness Music Festival debuts in its pastoral setting by the shores of Tomales Bay.

The festival features conductor Sandor Salgo, who has been director and conductor of the Carmel Bach Festival since 1965. He is also music director of the Stanford Opera Theater and Symphony, the Marin Symphony, and the "Music at the Vineyards" series in Saratoga.

The festival opens with a Mozart concert at 2:30 p.m.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The new San Francisco Bay Area rapid transit system sent one of its sleek, no-driver aluminium trains through the tube under the bay for the first time today.

The three-car train zipped through the tube 120 feet under the surface of the bay in a time of just over five minutes for the six-mile trip from Oakland's West station to the Montgomery Street Station underground in the San Francisco financial district.

The run was the first test of a train going all the way through the bay tube. It carried officials and newsmen.

BART has been operating for nearly a year in parts of the system in the East Bay. Service on the San Francisco side, between the City and Daly City is expected to start before mid-November.

Completion of the $1.5 billion 75-mile system has been stalled by problems in the automated train-control system. The state has ordered extensive further testing before it will allow regular passenger service through the underwater tube.

The hangup in that key section is that the trains must operate at 80 miles an hour at 90-second intervals, and state officials feel the automated controls are not adequately tested for that.

Bill Stokes, general manager of BART, was aboard the test train today and said he would not make "any projections" about when regular transbay service could start.

The bay tube was built in sections which were floated out in the bay and sunk in a trench. Then rocks were piled over the tube. The builders say it is earthquake proof.

Hamilton Housing Use Aids Novato Schools

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — More than 500 Army, Navy and Coast Guard families are expected to begin moving into vacant housing at Hamilton Air Force Base in early September.

The Air Force has ordered preparations for the relocations to begin immediately even though Congressional approval of the move will not come until Congress reconvenes after Labor Day.

Most of the 525 families will come from Bay Area bases and military installations where on-base housing is not available. Some families may be moved to the base from Forts Barry, Baker and Cronkhite to open up the picturesque Marin headlands for public recreation.

The announcement of the impending relocation came today from Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District. He said the decision to start planning for the moves so the families can move in by the first part of next month was prompted by the budgetary crisis facing the Novato School District caused by plans to close Hamilton.

The Defense Department's April decision to close the base by the end of the year caught the school district by surprise and came after the deadline for notifying teachers if they were not to be rehired for the next school year.

Consequently, the district was faced with the loss of approxi-

Shortages Hurt Food For Peace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rising U.S. food prices and short supplies have begun to cut into this country's role as a provider of food to the underdeveloped world.

Officials said Thursday that U.S. government purchases from American farmers of food for needy people abroad under the Food for Peace program have been halted temporarily while officials review available domestic supplies and prices.

Ironically, the disclosure came on a day when the Agriculture Department predicted the biggest U.S. food crop in history this year.

It said this year's crop—on the basis of Aug. 1 conditions—would up 5 per cent from last year's record and 18 per cent above 1967. It said this would include record crops of wheat, corn, grain sorghums and soybeans.

But the Agriculture Department said that, with the exception of sorghums, each of these individual crops is below the levels predicted a month ago. This, in relation to the demand for the crops at home and overseas, is causing the high prices.

Against this background, officials said food for delivery under the overseas aid program from July through September has already been purchased from U.S. farmers and is being shipped. This includes grain for victims of the African drought.

But they said contracting for deliveries beginning in October, which normally would have begun last month, has been put off pending review of the government's crop report and the U. S. food situation.

The National Farmers Union (NFU) called the suspension "a tragic result of mismanagement and policy blundering."

The U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) said that if a decision is made quickly to resume contracting the holdup in food shipments may be brief.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Embassy Hunt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States expects to send a team of State Department experts to East Germany in August to find a site for a future American embassy in East Berlin, department officials said today.

The team will hold the first official talks with East German representatives in East Berlin since that Communist government was established in 1949.

Skylab Chores

HOUSTON (UPI) — While ground controllers consider feeding Skylab spiders Arabella and Anita a drop of astronaut blood to keep them healthy, the Space Station crew takes today off to relax, clean house and shower.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma were given a "shopping list" of scientific and housekeeping chores to do if they wish, but Mission Control recommended they take it easy for the day.

The crewmen each had 90 minutes set aside for a shower and could do some sun observation through their powerful telescopes if they wished.

The astronauts gave a fly-size bite of rare filet mignon to their space pets Thursday to keep them alive for the rest of the record two-month flight in the hope the spiders will continue spinning webs in weightlessness.

Pressure Eases

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Pressure by insurgents on Phnom Penh's southern defense perimeter eased today, enabling government troops to recapture one highway and secure another.

U.S. warplanes again blasted insurgent holdouts around the city in raids so fierce that concussions from the bombs crakced some window panes in the city and shook building foundations.

The air raids today came with only five days to go before the American air campaign in Cambodia ends.

Aerial Battle

CAIRO (UPI) — An Egyptian army spokesman said today an aerial battle with Israeli jets 20 miles west of the Suez Canal proves that Israel is creating tensions in the Middle East.

In Tl Aviv, Israeli authorities said only that Israeli planes were on a reconnaisance mission in the area of the Suez Canal when clash reportedly occurred Thursday.

An Israeli spokesman said all the Israeli planes returned safely.

Call For Summit

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has renewed its call for a high level meeting with President Nixon's participation before the end of the year to underwrite a new security system for the whole of Europe.

Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, said diplomatic sources today, raised the issue with his East European party chiefs at the Crimea meeting 10 days ago.

Communist diplomats, the sources said, are now spreading the word in Western capitals that such a high level meeting could take place this year.

Toll Is Heavy

SAIGON (UPI) — A Saigon military spokesman today reported more bloody Central Highlands fighting that has killed nearly 200 Vietnamese this week, and a field commander said he can spare troops for Cambodia if ordered to go there.

A south Vietnamese military command spokesman said 40 Communists were killed at a cost of one government troop dead and 29 wounded in two battles Thursday six miles west of Kontum, 260 miles north of Saigon.

Military sources said the action consisted of two Communist ground attacks on an infantry division's headquarters, defended by two battalions totaling about 1,000 men.

It is not a big fish, but . . . Mrs. Don Griffith, mother of three from Sylmar, had hoped to "catch a mess of them" Thursday at a pier in Santa Monica to feed her family. Increased meat prices and shortages have caused many to turn their hobby into a necessity.

Laird Ordered Secret Cambodian Bomb Raids

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird ordered secret bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 with simultaneous air strikes in South Vietnam to provide a cover story for the press, the Senate Armed Services Committee has learned.

The committee also has been given information that secret bombing raids were ordered in Laos by the Johnson administration in 1967 with simultaneous raids in South Vietnam as a press cover.

Laird's order, a copy of which was given to the committee Thursday by Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements, appeared—to a degree, at least—to contradict Laird's assertion July 18 that he never directed or authorized "fabrication of official records."

The order, signed by Laird when he was secretary of defense, dealt with secret strikes, code-named "Operation Menu," to be carried out in Cambodia during the week of Nov. 23, 1969.

"The concept of the operation," the order said, "is to employ 41 B52s against Menu targets on each of two nights during the week of 23 November. The remaining available aircraft will be employed to strike cover targets as well as targets elsewhere in the country (South Vietnam) and in Laos.

"Strikes on these latter targets will provide a resemblance to normal operations, thereby providing a creditable story for replies to press inquiries."

The order was also signed by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. It was classified "top secret — sensitive — noforn (no distribution to other governments) — eyes only—absolutely for the eyes of the addressee only."

"This is the first solid evidence that I have had that there was an order to misrepresent targets," said Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, who has been the main force in the committee's probe of the Cambodia bombing.

Laird, now President Nixon's chief domestic counselor, said July 18 that he had ordered secret raids in Cambodia. But he added, "I did not at any time direct or authorize falsification of official records."

Bar Action Helps Push Pot Reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The vote of the American Bar Association (ABA) in favor of removing criminal penalties for marijuana possession has given new impetus to a lobbying effort in state legislatures.

Representative of the National Organization for the Reform of Marjuana Laws (NORML) were busy at the ABA's convention here this week buttonholing members of the House of Delegates who would be considering the subject.

On the motion of Cecil F. Poole of San Francisco, the House voted 122-70 to recommend wiping off the criminal statute books simple possession of marijuana by users. The action has particular significance at this time because in July the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws adopted an act having the same purpose and presented as a pattern for legislatures to follow.

The specific language in the ABA resolution was proposed by attorney Whitney North Seymour Sr. of New York, a past president of the association. The action was a long step from the one taken by the House a year ago, when only a reduction of penalties was recommended.

Frank Fioramonti of New York, one of the organizers of NORML, said he expects many state bar associations will follow ABA's lead with a resulting impact on state legislatures. He said his group will soon map strategy on how to take advantage of what he regards as two great steps forward by comparatively conservative groups.

Oregon is the first state to decriminalize marijuana possession. Gov. Tom McCall in July signed legislation reclassifying possession of up to one ounce as a "violation" with the maximum penalty a $100 fine. The new law, effective Oct. 15, provides that the offender not receive a criminal record.

Nixon Reportedly Cool Over Agnew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon "hit the ceiling" when he learned Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was under investigation in an alleged Maryland kickback scheme and tried to talk Agnew out of holding a news conference, White House sources said today.

An "angry" Nixon, the sources said, told Agnew at a meeting they held Tuesday that silence was a better posture than holding a news conference.

Agnew, however, told Nixon he felt he should go ahead with the news conference, the sources said. The vice president held the conference Wednesday, describing the allegations of bribery, extortion, conspiracy and tax evasion as "damned lies."

One source said of Nixon's reaction when he learned of Agnew's troubles that he "hit the ceiling."

The White House sources said Nixon plans to let Agnew "stand alone" in his defense against the allegations. Agnew indicated at the news conference he is prepared to do this.

"I think the vice president of the United States should stand on his own feet," Agnew said.

"So I am not spending my time looking around to see who is supporting me. I am defending myself."

Agnew said he met with Nixon for an hour and 45 minutes Tuesday evening. He described their discussion as "far reaching" but declined to amplify the remark.

Thursday, the Washington Star-News reported that Agnew's attorneys in New York and Washington were exploring the possibility of a claim of constitutional immunity for Agnew. Should Agnew make such a claim and should federal prosecutors go ahead with their case, the courts probably would have to resolve any conflicts.

Since the news broke, White House statements with regard to Agnew have been decidedly cool, with the President's spokesman shying away from expressing Nixon's full confidence in Agnew.

Some observers felt that Agnew's performance in his news conference had added to his stature, in the eyes of the public and the press.

Nixon today was at his Camp David, Md., retreat with his closest advisers preparing his public response to Watergate charges that have damaged his second administration.

Some of his aides believe that Nixon will take a "tough" stance in a televised address to the nation which may be delivered on prime time Tuesday or Wednesday evening.

Mexican grocers along the border with California were preparing for another weekend rush of U.S. shoppers eager to buy beef at prices ranging from 60 cents a pound for ground chuck to $1.15 a pound for steak.

All 55 kosher butchers in Pittsburgh said they would close for a week starting Monday because of the high cost of beef and poultry.

The Ideal Bakery Company of Jacksonville, Ill., said it will close this weekend because the cost of ingredients has gone up as much as 50 per cent and there is no lard to be had because meat packers are also closing.

Humphrey, speaking in Chicago, said the government's refusal to relax the ban on price raises before that date is "a political decision, and I think it's a very stupid one."

Also in Chicago, but at a separate news conference, Ford said, "I believe the current beef situation is so chaotic that it is essential the ceiling be lifted before Sept. 12."

The retail cost of a family food market basket from April to June of this year rose to an annual rate of $1,497, up 6 per cent from the first quarter and 15 per cent from a year earlier, the Agriculture Department's economists said in a report.

While the market basket cost does not represent the grocery bill for any actual or average real family, it does show how grocery bills for real families are rising. It covers the cost of farm-produced foods for a statistically average household of 3.2 persons.

The government economists also said consumers can expect more price boosts this fall because of higher raw farm product prices and increased middlemen's charges.

Adding all those factors ttlethegm 1973 retail food prices are expected to average 18 to 22 per cent above 1972, the department said.

Jury Declares Robber Guilty

One of two Marin City men charged with taking $177 from a Mill Valley takeout restaurant in a May 31 armed robbery was found guilty Thursday by a jury in Marin Superior Court.

Zack George Gaines Jr., 20, will be sentenced Aug. 30. The jury deliberated five hours before returning the verdict to Judge Charles Read Best. The trial lasted three days.

Gaines and James Edward Morgan, 18, were charged with holding up the Taco Boat restaurant with a toy pistol and making off with $177 from a floor safe after overcoming two teen-age girls working there.

Morgan pleaded guilty Aug. 2 to the armed robbery charge in a plea bargain in which Best promised he will not send Morgan to prison. Morgan will be sentenced Aug. 27.

Steel And Cement Shortages Reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Associated General Contractors (AGC) said today more than 30 states are experiencing shortages of steel and cement ranging from "slight" to "severe."

Lawrence F. Rooney of Muskogee, Okla., a spokesman for the group, said the shortages were reported in a survey of its members around the country.

Cotati Narrows City Manager Field To Six

The field of 35 applicants for the job of Cotati city manager, was narrowed to six candidates by the city council Thursday night.

The council will begin interviews Monday at 7:30 p.m. in its search for a replacement for City Mgr. Paul W. Salfen, who resigned effective Aug. 31.

Applications were received from all over the nation, but the council reduced the list to California residents since the new city manager must be hired quickly and should have knowledge of California laws.

Of the six candidates, five are now working in city management positions in other cities. The sixth candidate is reportedly a Cotati resident now working as a laborer.

he said, could be based solely on someone's emotional reaction to different lifestyles. "It violates the rights of unrelated people who have the same rights as related people."

He also said the ordinance doesn't differentiate between sizes of lots and houses, and that it was too drastic and too general.

"The problems could be solved by specific ordinances," he said, "we wouldn't complain about a law dealing with the cars and parking. The city feels, 'Let's pass a law and if people deserve a favor, they can get a variance.' The people don't 'deserve a favor,' they should have the right."

Frankel also said that even though other cities have similar ordinances, "it doesn't mean it's a good law."

"An overly general law," said Douglas H. Bosco, director of the county human relations department, "is more like cutting off your head to get rid of the headache. It solves the problem but it solves it in such a way that it denies the right of association."

In other action, the commission accepted the resignation of human relations counselor Robert L. Hollis effective Aug. 15. Hollis has been with the commission for more than two years and will leave for a job in Daly City.

Boy, 3, Fair From Accident

A 3-year-old Larkspur boy was seriously injured Thursday when he shot out of his driveway on a tricycle, colliding with a slow moving car.

Michael Collins of 167 Elm Avenue was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with multiple scrapes and possible internal injuries.

Larkspur police said the accident happened at 10:25 a.m. when Michael collided with a car driven by Maria Cochran, 69, of 369 Elm Avenue. They said Mrs. Cochran, who was driving slowly, was unable to avoid the crash.

Infection Kills Board Chairman

Dr. Cutter was struck by a respiratory infection while on a trip in the High Sierra 10 days ago. He died Thursday.

The firm was established by his father in Fresno in 1897 and moved to Berkeley a few years later.

RATE

New York banking circles, meanwhile, predicted another early increase in the discount rate of the Federal Reserve banks. That is what commercial banks have to pay to borrow money from the Fed. Under current conditions, however, banks are paying higher interest rates to get money, as much as 10-½ per cent on $100,000 time deposits.

Banking circles said even the high interest rates on time deposits are not attracting any great inflow of funds because investors feel that interest rates will go still higher and are reluctant to tie up their money in time deposits until they feel the peak is reached.

If the 9-¼ per cent rate becomes general, and some banking leaders say it "likely will in view of Shultz's comment, its first effect will be felt only by the largest business companies. Under the two-tier prime rate system adopted early this year the prime rate for smaller businesses is one to two full per centage points lower than the prime rate for large companies.

In the long run most interest rates are affected by the prime rate but their movements up or down lag behind it. Some types of consumer interest rates such as small personal loans, automobile loans and other installment loans are the last to follow a prime rate rise because these businesses generate a substantial part of their own funds through monthly installment collections and are not highly dependent on general banking funds.

Commission Wants Limit On Heights

The Tiburon Planning Commission Thursday night recommended stricter control of building heights in the city, according to Richard G. Arjo, director of community development.

Commissioners agreed that buildings should not be allowed to exceed 30 feet measured from any point along the structure's grade. The present zoning law allows for buildings to exceed the height limit if the average height, measured at various points along the grade, does not exceed 30 feet.

Commissioners also approved plans by Charles McDevitt to subdivide and sell as condominiums 10 units in his Golden View Heights development on Linda Vista Avenue. The units are considered attached duplexes and do not fall under the city's ban on converting apartments to condominiums, according to Arjo.

The commission changed its regular meeting day to the first Wednesday of the month. It will also meet at 8 p.m. Aug. 27 to discuss the traffic and circulation elements of the general plan. The next regular meeting will be at 8 p.m. Sept. 5 in city offices.

mately 900 children from the base which last year sent 1,460 youngsters to Novato schools. Under the Air Force's gradual departure plans, 710 military children were expected to remain at Hamilton by September. But the end of December, less than 600 were residing there.

Mailliard said the new families should make up a significant part of the loss.

"I certainly shall urge a prompt approval of the plan when Congress reconvenes after Labor Day," the Congressman said.

Outlook Is Poor On Crash Victim

A Mill Valley man was reported in poor condition at Marin General Hospital today with injuries suffered Thursday night in an auto accident on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Fairfax.

Robert R. Murray, 51, of 25 Thomas Drive, received a broken leg and chest injuries when his car ran off the road and struck the Shafter Creek Bridge at 11:20 p.m.

California Highway Patrolmen said Murray told them another car ran him off the road.

Fairfax Sign Ordinance Eased

The Fairfax Design Review board last night moved to ease the town's sign ordinance.

The board recommended that the planning commission give merchants more time to meet requirements of the ordinance, reduce the cost of a nonconforming sign permit from $10 to $5, and set at eight feet the clearance required for signs overhanging sidewalks, rather than the present 10 foot requirement.

The town administration recently mailed about 50 letters to various merchants, calling attention to nonconforming signs and ordering complicance with the sign ordinance.

Town councilman Frank J. Egger had recommended easing the law after a barrage of complaints from businessmen.

only defensive reactions and did not constitute deception.

The doctor said Bedayan did not discuss the day of the murders, his plans before the murders, or his avoidance of police after the killings. The psychologist said such information was not important to test results.

Dr. Soufi, under direct examination Thursday, gave a detailed explanation of thought processes, told of the testing methods he used on Bedayan in April while he was in jail and gave conclusions concerning his mental state at the time of the killings.

Bedayan elected to destroy a source of menace to himself when he had to decide between killing himself or those he thought threatened his existence, Dr. Soufi said.

Bedayan thought he was destroying a menacing, vicious, supernatural force which was threatening him and the entire community, the psychologist said.

Dr. Soufi called Bedayan a paranoid schizophrenic, citing a high degree of delusion in that he attributed to physical objects qualities that exist only in his mind. Under Cox's guidance, the psychologist said, for example, that Bedayan could look at a 60-year-old man but see, instead, a 17-year-old girl.

That testimony was intended to bolster previous testimony by Bedayan's mother, Marcea, who said her son told her to be on watch for a 17-year-old girl in Mill Valley whom he "saw" at the Schallock home on the night of the murders.

She said her son told her that he did not kill Melvin Schallock, that there was someone else involved in the murders and that she should watch for the mysterious girl.

Mrs. Bedayan said her son also told her of a Mafia plot in Mill Valley and said several black Cadillacs had been cruising near his home.

Cox presented reports from the Marin Community Mental Health Clinic which said four days before the killings that Bedayan had "suicidal and homicidal potential". The document was part of what Mrs. Bedayan thought were involuntary committal proceedings for her son.

Although commitment the week of the killings was not certain, she had arranged an appointment at the mental health clinic for her son on March 15, the afternoon preceeding the murders.

She said she was told later by authorities at the clinic that her son had postponed the appointment until Friday.

Mrs. Bedayan said on cross examination by Bales Thursday, her son never showed remorse over the killings and did not discuss the Mafia activity with her prior to the murders.

She said he showed no symptoms of mental problems while a student at Alto-Edna Maguire School or Tamalpais High School but she noticed the change in his behavior after he began taking psychology classes at the College of Marin.

Mrs. Bedayan testified that her son had become convinced as a result of his psychology classes that he was full of hostilities which he must vent rather than suppress. For example, she said he hung a tire from the chimney and would beat it with a hose as an outlet for hostility.

But she expressed more concern about his withdrawal from family and friends.

Another Bar Music Issue On Agenda

Whether the Sweetwater bar in Mill Valley may continue to feature live rock music will be discussed Monday at a planning commission meeting at 8 p.m. at city hall.

Last week, the Mill Valley City Council denied a use permit for such music to the Old Mill bar. Residents in the downtown area have complained that both bars cause traffic and noise and attract many young patrons from outside the city.

According to Robert J. Hanna, associate planner, the commission will discuss whether the Sweetwater's permit should be modified or revoked.

Also Monday, the commission will review Safeway Stores' proposal to remodel their Miller Avenue store and add a carwash and expand a medical office complex on the same lot.

Originally, the commission had rejected the carwash plans. But their decision was overturned by the city council and returned to the commission for more study.

California Cattle Rustlers Busier

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A 77 per cent increase in rustling of California cattle the past six months may force ranchers to hire armed guards to protect their herds, a top state agriculture official says.

"Cattle producers of the state are hopping mad about the big losses and are taking steps to bring these losses to a halt as quickly as possible," Hans Van Nes, chief of the state's Bureau of Livestock Identification, reported Thursday.

Most ranchers are working "closely with their local sheriffs and the state to obtain increased patrols in the affected areas," he said. "Vehicles will be checked more often and some cattlemen may hire persons with professional peace officer qualifications to guard their herds."

In the first six months of this year there have been 124 "roadside slaughters," in which an animal is slaughtered on the spot it is killed. "They are considered 'crimes of opportunity,' but we know they are often performed by experienced rustler," Van Nes said.

He said the 124 figure was up 77 per cent from the 70 recorded in the same period last year.

The total number of lost, strayed or stolen cattle in California the first six months of this year was 2,701, a 10 per cent jump over 1972.

Van Nes also said that during the first six months of this year there have been 62 arrests for "grand theft, rustling," compared to 63 for the whole of 1972 and 45 for all of 1971.

Beef is a $1 billion a year industry in California, and Van Nes said to protect it against losses, cattlemen should improve their security.

Merger Talks

CAIRO (UPI) — Talks on a merger by Egypt and Libya have ended in Tripoli, but political sources say they will resume next week when Prime Minister Abdel Salam Jalloud of Libya visits Cairo.

Wife's Golf Mishap Case Tossed Out

DETROIT (UPI) — In a rare case, a jury of five women and one man has thrown out a woman's $100,000 damage suit against her husband.

The jury returned a verdict of no cause for action. The $100,000 in damages Mrs. Hunt sought would have come from the couple's insurance policy.

Mrs. Hunt took advantage of an 18-month-old Michigan law allowing husbands and wives to sue each other for the first time in civil cases.

She said she sued her husband because "as an individual I have a right to sue anyone."

Hunt's attorney, David Cooper, said the verdict probably meant the jury thought both parties were negligent in the golfing incident. The couple had told the jury different versions of how the accident happened.

Although she is unhappy with the verdict, Mrs. Hunt said she and her husband are still "harmoniously married." They have been married 22 years and have two children.

Hunt had no comment on the case, but his attorney said "he felt she was entitled to her day in court."

Oakland Fire

OAKLAND (UPI) — A two-alarm fire caused $30,000 damage to the Fox Oakland movie theater early today. Investigators said that it was purposely set.

Gate Spans' Traffic No Longer Soaring

A miniscule growth of traffic last fiscal year on the Golden Gate Bridge, the smallest since World War II, was reported today.

While a record-breaking 34,620,920 vehicles crossed the span during the year ending June 30, the figure was up only about one half of one per cent over the prior year, or 185,378 vehicles.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring also reported the first six months of this calendar year showed traffic down .24 per cent compared to the same period last year. He noted that the bridge's figures contrasted with the 2.35 per cent traffic increase this past fiscal year on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

Luehring also said a grand total of almost 585 million vehicles have crossed the bridge since it opened on May 28, 1937.

The annual traffic increase in the past decade on the bridge has ranged from 2.36 to 6.87 per cent.

Luehring said he was uncertain why traffic was falling, but suggested the reasons included increased use of transit and the gasoline shortage.

Operation Aimed At GI Dissidents Off

HEIDELBERG, Germany (UPI) — The U.S. Army today dismantled a brand new intelligence operation designed to keep watch over GI dissidents, calling it "inappropriate".

At the same time, an official Army statement slapped back at critics who have been accusing it of illegally tapping civilian phones in West Germany and denied the Army was persecuting dissident soldiers.

"An 8th Infantry Division document entitled Military Intelligence Counter-Dissidence Program has been rescinded by the 8th Infantry Division," the Army said in a statement issued Thursday from its Heidelberg headquarters.

"The document was determined to be inappropriate, as guidance on dissent contained in Army regulations is considered sufficient and soldier dissent within the command is presently at a very low level."

The cancellation came two days after The New York Times disclosed the existence of the 8th Infantry Division directive and quoted portions of it in a dispatch. The Times said a copy of the unclassified document had been leaked by a military clerk.

Defending its position in the matter of GI dissents, the Army statement said, "This headquarters is not directing an intensified military counterintelligence program against underground activities within the United States Army, Europe."

But the statement said the Army was obliged to protect its position as a combat-ready bulwark of North Atlantic Treaty (NATO) defenses, adding:

"We cannot ignore any possible threat to the safety of the command. However, it is misleading to characterize our legal and legitimate military intelligence and counterintelligence activities, conducted for many years, as aimed at soldiers who participate in lawful dissent.

"The major concern of commanders is with unlawful acts, such as espionage and sabotage to include bombing, arson and damage to equipment," it said.

In 1972, bomb attacks upon two U.S. Army posts in West Germany killed four U.S. servicemen and injured 30. A Communist revolutionary group claimed responsibility for the attacks and, police say, all leading members of that group have since been jailed pending trial or under court sentence.

Unidentified vandals did thousands of dollars worth of damage to military vehicles in an Army truck park earlier this year.

Military and civilian dissidents, however, say the Army has broadened the scope of its counter-intelligence surveillance efforts to go beyond defense against acts of sabotage and include surveillance of all shades of troublemakers.

Several GIs and civilians have accused the Army of illegally tappng German civilian telephones for this purpose. The Bonn government has denied that charge but confirmed its own agents have tapped phones legally at American request.

Rio Grande State in Brazil is often called the "Texas of Brazil" because of its cattle industry and "gaucho" cowboys.

Watergate Panel Sues For Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time in history, the President of the United States has to answer a lawsuit filed by a committee of Congress. The Senate Watergate panel wants the constitutional batttle over executive privilege to begin sooner than the usual procedure calls for.

The committee filed suit in U.S. District Court Thursday demanding that President Nixon turn over five tape recordings of Watergate related conversations made in his office and documents concerning the activities of 25 current or former aides.

It asked that Nixon respond within 20 days, the normal time limit for a private citizen, but one-third the time allowed for a government agency. The committee suit named Nixon as both President and as an individual.

The committee action followed by two days a White House response to a similar suit filed by Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, contending that releasing the tapes and papers would irreparably dmage needed presidential secrecy and that neither Congress nor the courts have the power to force the President to release documents.

Committee lawyers followed Cox's lead and argued that whatever claim of privilege Nixon made for the tapes was invalidated by his having let H.R. Haldeman, his former chief of staff, listen to two of them after he no longer worked for the government.

The committee subpoenaed the tapes and documents July 23 after testimony from former White House aide Alexander P. Butterfield that Nixon's conversations in the Oval Office and the Executive Office Building were taped.

Nixon wrote committee chairman Sen. Sam J. Ervin, DN.C., that he would not surrender the tapes but would consider "specific requests" for documents.

The suit said Nixon's refusal was "unlawful, unwarranted, and in breach of his legal duty to respond to and to comply with such subpoenas."

Haldeman told the committee he heard two tapes of conversations between Nixon and his former counsel, John W. Dean III.

The committee asked the court for a declaratory judgment stating that Nixon had no right to refuse, a writ of mandamus requiring him to carry out his official duties and release the subpoenaed material and a mandatory injunction forcing him to release the tapes and documents from his personal possession.

A response to the 20-day time limit is expected next week.

In another Watergate development, sources in Cox's office say that several corporate officials have admitted donating company money to Nixon's re-election campaign in violation of federal law.

The sources did not name the executives or the firms, but said they volunteered the information following recent disclosures that the board chairmen of American Airlines and Ashland Oil, Inc. donated company funds to the finance commitee of the Committee to Re-elect the President.

The sources said the newly disclosed donations amounted to about $100,000.

First Loot From Liner

FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (UPI) — Two former Navy aquanauts braved swift ocean currents and sharks Thursday to enter the cabins of the sunken Italian liner Andrea Doria, where they removed the first of the ship's treasure.

The divers did not reveal the contents of their first find, but they said most of the items sought, including $1 million in cash, were still in the inside of the 700-foot ship.

The first success in the attempt to salvage $2 million in cash and valuables was disclosed from the support ship Narragansett. Spokesman John Clark refused to tell what was taken from the cabins, although he confirmed articles were being brought up with surface cables and lines.

Body Count Could Reach 30 In Texas Sex Killings

HOUSTON (UPI) — Police found two more bodies today buried in three-foot-deep graves in an East Texas pine forest, raising to 21 the number of murder victims — all believed young boys who were tortured, sexually abused and killed by a bachelor electrician and two teen-aged "assistants."

The first two bodies found today were dug up near Broaddus, Tex., on the shores of Lake Sam Rayburn 125 miles north of Houston.

Sheriff John Hoyt of San Augustine County said the two bodies found at the lake had been buried for "about six weeks." They were wrapped in clear, plastic bags and covered with lime — like most of the other victims discovered over the past three days.

One of the two teen-agers accused in the killings told police Thursday they will find about 30 bodies. If so, it would be the worst mass murder in U.S. history.

Police unearthed 17 bodies under a boat shed in southwest Houston. Two more were found Thursday night near those found today. "They are all within about a 600-yard radius," Hoyt said. The search went on for more bodies.

Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, was charged today at San Augustine, Tex., with four counts of murder. Justice of the Peace C. A. Renfro set bond at $100,000 on each count.

Police said they intend to take Henley to High Island near Galveston, Tex., where he said more bodies were buried in the series of sex murders over the past three years.

Another youth, David Brooks, 18, has confessed to police that he was involved in the slayings. He was questioned by Houston police today.

Henley, dressed in a gray jump suit and hiding his face in his hands, told a bizarre tale as he leaned against a patrol car at the lake today.

The story involved two teenagers—Henley and Brooks—who came from broken homes and hung around with Dean Corll, 33, an older man who they thought of as a substitute father. Henley said Corll was a homosexual.

"Dean decided he wanted to have sex with them, kill them and then he brought them out here," Henley said of the lake victims. "Corrll's parents have a place out here. He said the boat shed was getting full (of bodies)."

Henley said Corll told him he had killed "about 24" youths. And the youth said the older man offered to pay him money to bring him young boys.

"He offered to pay me $200 as a beginning price. He paid me some of that," Henley said, talking frantically, his speech coming in short bursts.

"I met Dean through David Brooks. I feel pretty grotesque. I almost cracked several times," he said of the three-year ordeal of murder and sadism. "I didn't feel I was going to be able to hold my sanity much longer."

And of the mothers, fathers and other relatives of the victims, Henley said:

Police learned of the killings early Wednesday when Henley killed Corll at a paint-sniffing sex party. Henley called police after he killed his friend.

SEX SLAUGHTER — Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, accused as having taken part in a bizarre Houston sex slaughter, sits in a police cruiser after explaining how he killed Dean Allen Corll, 34, at a paint-sniffing sex party. Corll is alleged to be the mastermind of the sex murders, which may turn out as the worst mass slaying in U.S. history. (UPI Telephoto)

"He had a lust for blood," the youth said of Corll. "I was tired of him doing things like that, and it was either him or me right then."

The youngest of the victims was believed to be a 13-year-old boy missing since 1971. His parents spent thousands of dollars in a search for him.

Henley said Corll had previously told him about the burial ground at the boat shed. Henley also implicated the other teenager involved, David Brooks, 18.

Brooks was apprehended and said he took part in some of the killings. He told police they could find as many as 30 bodies buried in three different parts of the state.

"He has admitted to several of the murders, along with Henley and Corll," Police Lt. Breck Porter said of Brooks. "He admitted taking part in practically all of the killings over a three-year period."

In 1969 Corll rented the boat stall where the 17 bodies were found.

All the victims found buried in stall No. 11 were believed to be teen-age boys. Porter said Corll "never messed with anything but boys."

Some of the victims were buried in bathing suits. Some were naked. One youngster was dressed in a gold shirt. Another wore blue trousers. The 10th victim unearthed had a cord pulled tight around his neck.

"This guy must have spent half his time digging graves," Homicide Detective Larry Earls said. "This whole floor is covered with bones."

Henley said he and Corll were very close friends, and Henley's mother said, "Dean treated Wayne like a son and Wayne loved him like a father. He ate Easter dinner with us. He worked on my car.

"He loved to play with the kids."

Alton Brooks, David's father, said he hardly knew his son.

"I had no idea the boy had a problem of any kind," he said. "The boy and I have not been around each other in a number of years. I really don't know how you would describe him. He seemed a quiet boy, not aggressive in any way."

The most murders by one person in modern U.S. history involved the bodies of 25 farm hands found buried in a California farm along the Feather River in 1971. Juan Corona was convicted of the killings earlier this year and sentenced to life in prison.

LONDON (UPI) — The U.S. dollar gained in value on most European exchanges today and the price of gold sank again.

SAFE, FOR A WHILE

In these days of rising crime statistics many people fear that they're sitting ducks for muggers in parks, so it's good to know a policeman's around. Apparently, that's how these St. Louis ducks and pigeons felt yesterday when they noticed Patrolman Fred Dobson and his horse taking a break from park patrol duty.

'Fort Wayne Story' To Courts?

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI — The issue of whether or not Sen. George McGovern's name appears, or ever did appear, on the birth certificate of an illegitimate child born in Fort Wayne during the 1940s may be headed again to court.

The Indiana State Board of Health refused to honor an Allen Circuit Court order Thursday which authorized the records be opened to provide a "full, true and exact copy" of the certificate alleged to list McGovern as the father of an illegitimate child.

The Washington Post said last week that a brief mention of a "Fort Wayne story" in the Watergate hearings referred to a birth certificate listing McGovern as father of an illegitimate child born in the 1940s. McGovern denied having fathered the child. The mother was quoted as saying she had known McGovern, but said he was not the father.

Efforts by the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel to clear up the matter revealed that a father's name had been eradicated from a birth certificate in the Fort Wayne Board of Health's records.

State officials have turned to the attorney general's office for advice before complying with the order.

"We are now awaiting advice from the attorney general's office, but to my knowledge nothing has been done to attempt to force us to comply," said Kingston G. Ely, state registrar of vital statistics.

Officials with the Fort Wayne Board of Health, who were ordered earlier to open their records for the search of the purported certificate, said they are now considering court action to prevent examination of state records also.

The state health board was ordered Wednesday by Judge Pro Tem John Rogers to open its records when representatives of the News-Sentinel earlier in the day were denied access to them.

It would be "utterly impossible" for the state records to have been altered, Ely said, so if McGovern's name was originally listed, it would still be there.

On the other hand, it could not have been added subsequently.

The original records and two separate microfilm copies are on file here for all birth certificates, Ely said. He said the certificate in the Fort Wayne health office had been made from material abstracted from the original at the time of birth.

Park Plans To Change In Novato

The Novato Parks and Recreation Commission is planning to revise the city's recreation plan because the city's newly adopted general plan now envisages less growth than previously anticipated.

According to Recreation Director Edward W. Adams, the recreation plan was based on an ultimate population of 180,000 in the Novato area, while the new general plan has a limit of 90,000.

Commissioners recommended Wednesday night outlining seven districts in the city and determining what park and recreation facilities were needed within each district.

The district boundaries will be along natural boundaries such as hillsides and creeks and along thoroughfares, he said.

With the makeup of the population differing in various districts, the parks and recreation department plans to survey residents to determine what they want in recreation, he said.

Commissioners also agreed to sponsor activities of the 40-member Novato Horseshoe Club which is seeking installation of horseshoe pits at a city park, Adams reported.

The commission's next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Aug. 22 at the parks and recreation building, 917 Sherman Avenue.

Allende's Choices

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — President Salvador Allende failed to appease rightwing opponents Thursday with appointment of three military men. The National party said it was "stunned" that the officers accepted posts in the government.

A FUTILE GESTURE?

Police Ordered To Discourage Girl-Watchers' Wolf Whistles

But the ogles and catcalls at female passersby continued.

The worker said fewer men ate out on the street since the police detail arrived — "But only because they're married and don't want to get involved with all the publicity."

"The police think it's ridiculous too. Just yesterday one of the policemen saw an oriental girl. He said she was really nice," he added.

Some women are sticking up for their oglers. One seven-woman office on Asylum Street bore a sign on its fourth floor window proclaiming, "Hard hats, we're for you."

"These guys love their work," said the office spokeswoman. "They come out here in any weather, and now they can't even go where the girls are."

About two-dozen casually dressed hardhats who had congregated on one of the street corners roared with laughter as a helmeted young policeman fell off his motorcycle. The policeman grinned back.

Two policemen stood directing traffic at one intersection while two others, who looked very uncomfortable, stood nearby.

"We're not allowed to talk to the press," one said straight-faced . . . So the woman reporter returned to the office—followed by whistles and calls.

Brown Hits Charges Of His Mishandling

Novato City Mgr. Charles A. Brown, under fire for his handling of the resignation of Police Chief Allen V. Klemme, today rejected charges that he did not act decisively in the case.

In a three-page statement, Brown also blamed "imprecise reporting" in the press for the barrage of criticism leveled against him over the Klemme affair.

Brown also revealed in the statement that Klemme was not his first choice for chief when he was hired in March 1970.

The city manager said he had favored a Southern California candidate "who presented a more firm and more technical approach to law enforcement." But since the council obviously favored Klemme, Brown said he went along and recommended his appointment since he "considered the two candidates equal."

Chief Klemme left the department July 21 amid allegations by police officers of misconduct. A citizens group has charged Brown with mismanaging the case and called for his ouster.

"The uproar that ensued, in my opinion, need not have occurred," the city manager said. "Very little of it would have occurred had it not been for impatience on the part of some" and "imprecise reporting by the press which caused frustration, distrust and bitterness within the police department."

Brown also charged that local newspapers were determined to "make a Watergate out of an administrative problem which had been resolved."

In answer to accusations that the city manager waited too long to ask the chief to leave and so intensified turmoil in the department, Brown contended that he had acted properly.

He admitted being "unaware of the developing problem which existed between the men of the department and the chief." Yet, once the matter was brought to his attention in late November, Brown said, he investigated the situation thoroughly in December and January and discussed the problems with Klemme in February.

"I totally reject the charge that I did not act decisively during those three months," he said, adding that he thought he was justified "in attempting to salvage (Klemme's) career that spanned 20 years without blemish."

Brown also said he had done the right thing by "not yielding to demands that he (Klemme) should be terminated forthwith. He said many of the allegations of the chief's misconduct could not be "resolved conclusively inasmuch as they boil down to one word against another."

During the three months, Brown reported the chief was aware of his precarious position and knew "that I had developed serious questions about his leadership ability and that his future with the department was in jeopardy."

He said he made many efforts to understand the chief's position and determine whether he could regain his authority over his dissatisfied men.

When it became clear that Klemme could no longer be an effective chief, Brown said he and the chief "mutually agreed that he (Klemme) should seek employment elsewhere and prepare to submit his resignation."

Brown explained his reluctance to rush into dismissal proceedings by saying the chief had done a good job for two years and made many improvements within the department.

The city manager did not reply to the earlier complaints about his handling of the matter, he said, because he did not consider it ethical to debate his performance since "I am responsible to the council and it was fully informed on the situation."

But with Klemme gone and a new chief — John C. Coleman —appointed, Brown thought it was time to speak up on the matter "so the general public can make up its own mind, free from the emotionalism which has been fanned so heatedly during the past four months."

All-Evert Net Final Looms; Sharon Beaten

CINCINNATI (UPI) — There may be an all-Evert final round in the $75,000 Western Tennis Championships as Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, who might have prevented it, fell by the wayside.

Miss Walsh was defeated in women's singles Thursday afternoon with surprising ease by 15-year-old Jeanne Evert, 7-6, 6-2, and Miss Evert went on to drub Pat Pretorius of South Africa Thursday night, 6-0, 6-0, and move into today's semifinals against Evonne Goolagong of Australia.

Jeanne's more famous sister Chris, also of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., walloped Isabel Fernandez of Colombia, 6-2, 6-1, to move into the semis opposite unseeded Ilana Kloss of South Africa.

Defending men's champion Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., joined seven others in the quarter-finals with a 6-2, 6-1 triumph Thursday night over Australia's Dick Crealy.

Extra Jail Days Given For Pot

Two county jail inmates will spend 15 more days in custody after they pleaded guilty to charges of possessing marijuana in jail.

Edward John Bonadeo, 25, of Greenbrae, and Eric Ansley Van Horn, 22, of Mill Valley, drew the sentence Tuesday from Municipal Judge Robert A. Smallman, who declared the offenses misdemeanors.

The two were seen smoking marijuana in a hand-made pipe in the jail's trusty room May 25.

The 15-day terms will be added to terms the two already are serving. Bonadeo is serving six months for burglary, and Van Horn three months for driving without a license and violating probation.

Auto Maker Is Seeking Hikes

DETROIT (UPI) — American Motors, the smallest of the "Big Four" automakers, has become the first auto company to ask the federal government for an increase on its 1974 models to cover costs of new safety and emission equipment.

The price hikes, which are not expected to be granted by Sept. 5, the debut of new model vehicles, will range from $24 on the Hornet Sportabout four-door station wagon to $99 on the top-of-the-line Ambassador four-door station wagon.

Developers Cite Old Sewage Pact

A San Rafael development firm that has proposed a major development on the northeast tip of the city is turning to a longstanding agreement in order to assure itself of sewer connections, the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board learned Thursday night.

District managing engineer Edward Tibbetts said that Smith-Gonzalez Associates, which has proposed commercial development of portions of the Smith Ranch north of Northgate Industrial Park, is apparently seeking connections on the basis of an 18-year-old agreement.

When the district bought its plant site parcel from the Smith family in 1955, it agreed that surrounding property — or lands now proposed for development — would be annexed to the district, and served with connections upon payment of connection charges, Tibbetts said. The lands have since been annexed.

The board last night said that Smith-Gonzales has arranged to have former board members Arthur B. Carpenter, and other surviving members of the 1955 district board, give depositions on what their intent was when the old agreement was inked.

Carpenter will give his deposition in Marin Superior Court next Tuesday, Tibbetts said.

"We have never been approached for connections for this development at all," Tibbetts said, adding however the matter is apparently linked to plans for commercial development of Smith Ranch.

The board said it will study the matter on a continuing basis, and said it will consult legal counsel, according to Tibbetts.

The San Rafael planning commission last June approved a use permit under the city's building moratorium for a $8 million commercial project proposed by the firm for 40 acres along Higway 101.

The firm had dropped previous plans for a $40 million project on 190 acres because of opposition since the city's general plan is not completed.

The city council refused the firm's plea to refer the more massive project to city general plan consultants for immediate review to determine if it would mesh with the general plan, but has taken no action on the scaled-down version.

The Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board also:

SANITARY — Adopted a resolution extending until 1984 a contract for garbage pickup with the Marin Sanitary Service.

ORDER — Said the district will be able to meet an order by the Regional Water Quality Control board to expand plant capacity from 2.25 million to 2.40 million gallons daily, by an interim ponding treatment process.

FAIRGROUNDS — Said fees for connections for the county fairgrounds will be determined by area covered by buildings and by routine fixture unit charges.

BAY PARK — Said the district will meet with the county parks and recreation commission to discuss a proposal for a water reclamation project in the North Bay Front Park, but set no date.

NORTHGATE EAST — Signed a connection agreement for Northgate East, a project that will place an office and restaurant on a graded hillside north of the Civic Center.

CONNECTION — Extended for six months a connection permit for a single family home on Elivia Court in Marinwood.

ADJOURNAMENT — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m. Aug. 23 in the Civic Center.

Wins Order

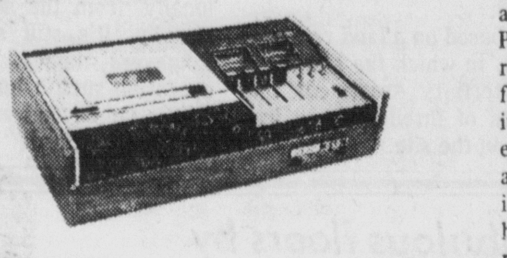
The Outstanding TEAC 355.



TEAC's 355 cassette deck would be a fine addition to just about any stereo system; a new Permaflux head, a Dolby noise reduction system and provision for chromium dioxide tapes give it the potential for making excellent recordings of just about anything. And that includes live recordings; the 355 has an excellent microphone preamp built in. A very convenient control layout, large VU meters and a recording peak indicator light complete the picture, and the fair trade price is $329.50.

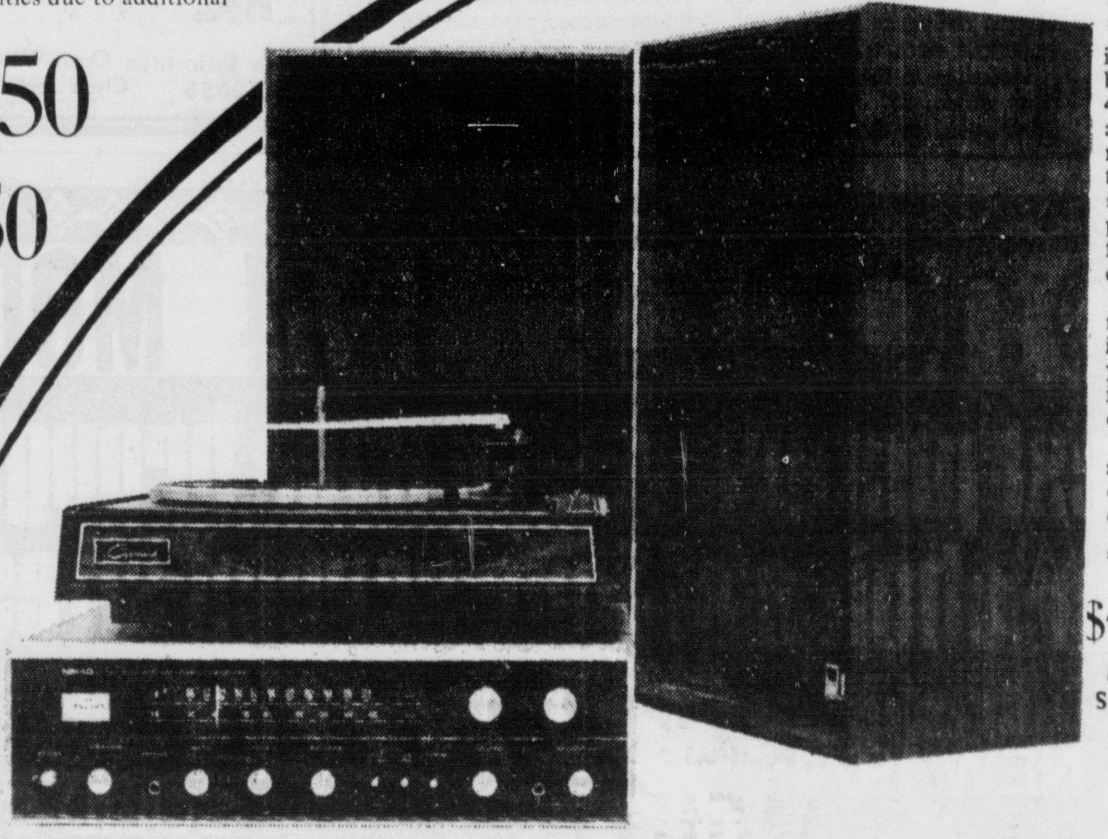
Big bass and a $113 saving too



Whenever we offer the Nikko 4010 receiver in a system around $250, it becomes a runaway best seller, and you can easily see why. The 4010 has an ample 24 watts (RMS) of power and an AM/FM tuner section that brings in the music loud and clear. There's a loudness contour switch to boost the bass that otherwise drops out at low listening levels, and microphone and guitar inputs give the 4010 unusual flexibility for a $189.95 receiver. The walnut case is included in the price.

The Garrard 40B is a totally reliable automatic record player with a gentle record changing action and damped cueing to help you keep your discs in mint condition. Our $60.90 price includes a base and an Empire 999XE/X elliptical diamond cartridge.

The Audio Design 1206's have a very big sound for their $119.90 a pair price; a good bit of the credit goes to the 12" bass speaker in each cabinet.

New Speakers From Fisher and a $140 Saving

The Fisher 205A AM/FM stereo receiver has 60 watts (RMS) of power, ample for anything but a mansion, and the tuner section outperformed those of many $500 receivers in our own lab tests. The 205A's convenience features include a midrange tone control in addition to the usual bass and treble controls, and the receiver is fully adaptable to four-channel whenever you're ready to convert. The price, without the walnut case, is $329.95.

Garrard's SL72B automatic record player has a sophisticated tonearm that has no trouble tracking even severely warped records, and the Synchro-Lab motor guarantees a rock-steady speed. The $116.90 price includes a base and an Empire 999XE/X elliptical cartridge.

Fisher's new XP-79 is a three-way, 10" acoustic suspension system that can turn out substantial low notes, and it has an exceptionally natural sound over its whole frequency range. The XP-79's 79's usually sell for $279.90 a pair.

Even the AM tuner is pretty good, and you'll find all the convenience features you'd want. The walnut case is included in the price.

A low-friction tonearm, steady-speed synchronous motor and adjustable anti-skating control are among the features that help make the BSR 510A automatic record player an excellent value at $69.45. A base and a Shure M75ECS elliptical cartridge are included in the price.

Quadraflex Model 44's sound super good from the bass man's low E on up. They're two-way, ten-inch inch systems that are an outstanding value at their regular $159.90 a pair price.

Approval Given For Construction Grading

The Fairfax Planning Commission Thursday night approved the grading plan required for construction of the Canon Village and Tennis Club project.

Commissioners said the project met the seven conditions in the town grading ordinance and asked only that developers Robert D. Marshall and Denkmann and Co. provide written assurance they will be able to gain access to correct slide areas through the land of adjacent property owners, according to commission secretary Ernestine Healy.

Envisioned are 109 units on 88 acres along Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. Commission approval of the project's precise plans has sparked an appeal by eight citizens, who will appear before the city council at 8 p.m. Monday in the Fairfax Women's Club.

The commission will again meet at 8 p.m. Aug. 30.

The President has asked for a 5% decrease in energy consumption.

Turn your water heater to "pilot" before you go on vacation. Heating water when you aren't around is a waste of energy and money. If you have a gas water heater, turn your control to "pilot" before you leave. Then turn it back to "on" when you return. You'll have hot water in an hour or so.

Ventilate your attic. An attic fan can lower the temperature in an attic by as much as 50° and help ease the load on your cooling system. You'll have a cooler house for less energy.

Improve your insulation. Proper insulation and weatherstripping can help reduce the energy needed to heat and cool your house by as much as 45%.

Repair leaky faucets. One leaky hot water faucet dripping 90 drops of water a minute can waste over one hundred gallons of hot water in a week's time.

By following these few suggestions this summer you'll help conserve energy and also save money on your PG&E bill. For additional tips, ask any PG&E office for a copy of "The Meter-Minders Guidebook".

Revolt Against Bolinas Sewage Disposal System

A revolt against the cost of a $1.6 million sewage disposal system planned for Bolinas surfaced Thursday with the circulation of petitions which could force a referendum on the purchase of a 95-acre property slated to be the site of the sewage treatment ponds.

Author of the petitions is C. L. Feusier, a Bolinas resident since 1947, and retired accountant. He said chief aim is to persuade or force directors of the Bolinas Community Public Utilities District to cut acreage for the sewer site back to 52 acres, and thus eliminate park or open space features, which he claims add unnecessary cost to the project.

In addition, the petitions ask that any state or federal grants received as reimbursement for district funds already spent on planning the sewage facilities be used for "expansion and improvement of our water supply and distribution system" instead of on land payments.

The utility board authorized a $250,000 contract for purchase of the 95-acre Sharon property adjoining Mesa and Overlook roads on July 2. It approved a $1,684,000 estimate for the entire system Aug. 1, in application for the state grant.

The petitions ask the district board to "fund only a minimum-cost sewer disposal plant installation" and not to purchase "extra land for other purposes which would increase materially our yearly maintenance and operation costs."

Under provisions of the state Public Utilities District Act, Feusier said, the utility board must either reduce the sewer site to 52 acres, or put the question to voters in a referendum, providing the petitions are witnessed by at least 10 per cent of the number of voters casting ballots in the last gubernatorial election.

According to the county elections office, 367 Bolinas residents voted in the 1970 governor's race. Feusier said he thus needs only 37 signatures to force board action or an election, but added that at least six property owners are circulating the petitions with the intent of getting a sizable number of supporters.

Recalling the 1971 revolt against an $8.1 million sewage project for both Bolinas and Stinson Beach, Feusier charged that the present board is repeating a history of runaway costs.

Feusier, who was appointed by the utility board as a citizen member of this year's budget committee, said he favored a return to the 1972 plan which ranged up to $724,500 in costs that were predicated on a 52-acre site.

Annual costs of operating the $1.6 million facility, including maintenance, gardening in the park area and amortization of debt, would be in the neighborhood of $60,000 to $70,000 per year, he asserted.

"This would require a $20 per month sewer charge, plus a 50-cent raise in the district's tax rate," he said.

He noted that three-fourths of the district property owners are in nonsewered areas, served by septic tanks.

It is based on a land retention system, in which the sewage is given tertiary treatment and disposed of through spray irrigation on the site.

Director Orville Schell has praised the system as one which recycles both water and sewage and provides several uses of the land for the community.

Board chairman William E. Niman has repeatedly stated that federal and state grants will cover 87 per cent of the project cost.

Feusier, however, responded "whether you get the money locally, from the state, or nationally, it's still squandering taxpayers' money. The cost of operating such a huge installation is far beyond what Bolinas people can afford."

Stopgap Reprieve On Home Loans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed legislation Friday extending authority for the Federal Housing Administration to grant low-interest loans at least until Oct. 1 to ease the current squeeze on home mortgage money.

Simultaneous with White House announcement of Nixon's action, the FHA issued a statement saying its maximum interest rate on single and multiple-family dwellings was being raised from 7 per cent to 7.75 per cent.

FHA authority to grant low interest loans to would-be homebuyers expired June 30.

The interim measure signed by Nixon and cleared by Congress a week ago is designed to provide more time for the White House to reach agreement with the House and Senate on a bill to extend the FHA's authority to make such loans until next June 30.

The boost in the FHA's maximum interest rate had been expected. Housing Secretary James T. Lynn, whose department includes the FHA, said July 5 that he intended to raise the rate as soon as the FHA's lending authority was restored.

Under the new bill, FHA also gets renewal of its authority to insure loans for home improvements and mobile homes.

The bill that would extend FHA's authority for a full year has been stalled in Congress because of two amendments which House and Senate negotiators believe would precipitate a presidential veto.

One amendment, sponsored by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., would force the administration to spend money for subsidized housing programs which Nixon suspended to hold down government spending.

The other, by Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., would require the government to finance repairs on homes which passed FHA appraisal.

The Stevenson amendment was modified by congressional conferees to require the funds to be paid directly on the repair so that a recipient could not spend it for something else.

DINING OUT AND INNS

By HARRY CRAFT

Meat Scarcity, High Prices A Test Of Chef's Abilities

Conditions that have given cause to the saying that "Americans are the most overfed people in the world" may be in for a change.

They could be accompanied by increased pain in the pocketbook if not in the stomach.

But many restaurant owners, while voicing concern over high prices and food shortages, are still hoping for the best. Next week should begin to tell the story, which may vary from eating place to eating place. Some restaurateurs have managed to order and stock ahead, but it's an advantage that is likely to be short lived.

The real test as to whether they are able to survive or go out of business will rest in their adaptability to new conditions and in their kitchens. Those that have specialized heavily in beef dishes, for example, will be hit hard if they cannot substitute. And chefs who have been trained in working with a variety of dishes and making them attractive to customers will be in their glory.

That menus are in for a change is certain. But it will be on the left side as well as in the price column. In fact, there may be so many changes on a day-to-day basis it may be impractical to keep marking off items and adding others. Specialties, as particular foods become more available than others, will be the thing. The average restaurant goer will have to adjust his eating out habits.

It could happen. If it does, tag along with the experienced chefs. Among them, good bets will be those trained in Europe and those who have had to go through this before — who had to practice their profession during World War II, for example.

There are several of the latter in Marin. One who comes to mind at the moment is Bernard Epstein at Le Tonneau in Corte Madera. Born in Germany and trained in France, he is adept at making the most of what is at hand as well as producing those dishes of long tradition.

In fact, he has already started. His Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night $3.95 complete dinners are much in demand. There is no real telling ahead of time what these specials will be. Bernard is a "food opportunist" and decisions are often made at the last moment. It's one way to put out a complete dinner these days at that figure. May it last.

BERNARD EPSTEIN
Not overalarmed

He is not inclined to be overalarmed about what lies ahead. "If there is no beef," he said, "I'll use veal or lamb or chicken or sweetbreads. If there are none of these and nothing else comes along I can still turn out some pretty good omelets." (I'll testify to that and you'll find them on his lunch menu). He's bound that Le Tonneau will continue to serve good food.

ONE OF THE MOST undisturbed restaurateurs on this subject is Lou Sabella, whose family's seafood restaurant in Southern Marin is filling up its tables nightly and he is talking about having still another place in Sonoma County.

"You have to remember," says Lou, "that the price rise on seafoods started four years ago and the increase has been more than anything you've seen recently. If there is any doubt, just take lobster tails, abalone and crabmeat. Higher prices are nothing new to us. While we may have to raise them again on items in short supply, there are many that should continue with little if any change."

The $3.95 complete family dinner is nothing new to Sabella's, of course, and this has long been a favorite of its customers. There are plans now to increase the number of entree choices to about 10, probably including red snapper and sole and whatever can be purchased reasonably.

In seafoods, the fresh catches off the coast are the best buys.

Lou reports that wholesalers have informed him beef will will be available (at a price) but may not necessarily carry the same quality guarantee as before. "If it doesn't measure up, we simply won't offer it," he said.

He sees the present food situation as a challenge to restaurants — a time when they must find new ways to provide appetizing dishes at reasonable prices until those priced out of sight subside.

"For some time now we've been doing it," he commented, "and we expect to continue."

UP IN NOVATO, Pete and Doris Lind have just returned from a Hawaiian holiday, so it is apparent that they have not been gravely concerned about the weeks ahead and will take all problems in their stride.

Meanwhile, substitutions have already been made here — some at lunchtime, in order to save certain scarce foods for dinner. Plans are to serve more pork (if it doesn't go too high), lamb and of course seafoods, which are a regular thing at Shipwreck Pete's. And if you see such things mentioned as corned beef hash, stuffed peppers and lasagne, consider them seriously. Pete is a food man from way back and I have always found his table offerings excellent.

No doubt about it — Shipwreck Pete's will continue in business. It's already survived the highway problems.

JOE MORIN at the Medallion in San Rafael is looking at the situation optimisticly, in spite of the fact that "medallion" steaks are the specialty of the house.

But the Medallion menu has also been a varied one and the restaurant bills itself as "The House of Cannelloni." That offering should certainly continue as a favorite.

Fortunately, Joe says he has been able to hold to his price schedule. He'd like to continue doing so, but don't expect him to do the impossible.

THERE'S A NEW ENTERTAINER — Nancy Valencia — playing the organ and singing at New Joe's in Corte Madera. She has appeared in the county before and I recall that she is quite talented. Her schedule is Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights from 8 p.m. in the lounge.

New Joe's manager Rich Azzolino says he has been holding down prices but the point has been reached where he'll have to make some increases. And he believes he'll have plenty of company.

Anyone that buys food in the market will agree — he could be right.

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Energy Plan Clears Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A major measure designed to ease projected energy shortages in California narrowly has cleared the Assembly amid predictions of brownouts and blackouts in the state within a few years.

The controversial bill by Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, would establish a new five-member state commission and conduct experiments ot increase the efficiency of electrical products.

A new state tax on electricity would be imposed on state taxpayers, generating about $31 million annually for the commission's activities. The tax, .2 mil per kilowatt-hour, would cost the average homeowner about $3 and industries would pay proportionately more.

The bill (AB1575) was sent to the Senate Thursday on a 41-31 vote, the minimum margin necessary.

Stiff opposition to the bill is coming from several large utility companies and General Electric Co., one of the largest builders of nuclear power plants. The companies contend the bill would make construction of new power plants even more difficult than it is now.

The bill is based on the recent Rand Corp. report which recommended that the state should spend more time trying to conserve energy by increasing efficiency and less on building new power plants to meet ever-increasing energy demands.

The measure attempts to consolidate planning of development of energy sources in one agency and encourage new methods to reduce electrical use through increased efficiency of products ranging from electric toothbrushes to washing machines.

The proposed Energy Resources Conservation and Development Commission would spend most of the $31 million for research and development.

The commission would be composed of an economist, a lawyer, an ecologist, a member of the public and a scientist. None of the members could be connected with utility companies.

It would be the only agency in the state to decide the siting of nuclear power plants. Currently, a maze of local and state agencies must approve the plants in addition to the Atomic Energy Commission.

However, citizens still could block proposed projects by filing lawsuits, which could take years to settle.

DRINKING

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A bill designed to curtail the practice of courts to treat motorists previously convicted of drunken driving as first-time offenders has been overwhelmingly approved by the Senate.

The bill (SB1268) by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, was sent to the Assembly Thursday on a 24-3 vote.

During debate, Deukmejian noted California courts in the past year have invalidated the prior convictions of more than 25,000 drunken drivers so they could be sentenced as first-timers.

A key section of the bill reduces the jail term for a second drunken driving conviction to a mandatory 48 hours in jail rather than five days.

CONFLICT

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation requiring elected and appointed officials at every level of government in California to disclose their income and investments each year has advanced to the Senate floor.

The conflict of interest bill (SB716) by Sen. George Moscone of San Francisco, a Democratic gubernatorial contender, was approved Thursday by the Senate Finance Committee on a 10-0 vote.

PROPERTY

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A constitutional amendment to halt property tax assessment increases on homeowners was proposed Thursday by Assemblyman Joe A. Gonsalves, D-La Mirada.

The proposed amendment would provide that no owner-occupied homes may be valued at any higher value than their assessed value on March 1, 1973.

STATUS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A bill abolishing the requirement that women must disclose whether they were single or married when they register to vote has won unanimous passage from the Assembly.

Without debate, the bill (AB654) by Assemblyman Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico, was sent to the Senate Thursday on a 63-0 vote.

CAMPUSES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate, heeding warnings of rekindling campus unrest, Thursday defeated a bill requiring trustees of the state colleges to hear student recommendations on faculty hiring and firing.

The author, Sen. Walter Stiern, D-Bakersfield, said the legislation would merely give students a procedure to have their recommendations considered but not adopted.

The measure (SB118) failed on a 19 to 16 vote. It needed at least 21 for passage.

PROTECTION

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation permitting prophylactics to be sold in vending machines and virtually anywhere else has gained narrow passage from the Senate.

Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, said his bill (SB1179) would help prevent "unwanted conceptions and unwanted venereal disease, particularly in sexually active teen-agers."

The measure was sent to the Assembly Thursday on a 21-7 vote, the bare minimum necessary. A similar bill died in the Assembly Ways and Means Committee last year.

CAPITOL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Architect John Worsley has developed a plan to rebuild the century-old state Capitol and construct an addition around three sides of the Capitol's newer east wing, it was reported today.

The Sacramento Union said the plan, which would cost $57 million, was presented to Senate Republicans and Assembly Rules Committee aides earlier this week as a possible alternative to building a new legislative office complex.

Gas Chamber Revival Seen By Moretti

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A death penalty bill will be enacted before the Legislature adjourns next week, but it won't be the broad bill passed by the Senate, Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti predicted Thursday.

However, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger, a leading backer of death penalty legislation, warned that amendments restricting the death penalty could antagonize both foes and supporters of capitol punishment.

Younger said he is worried that the Assembly Criminal Justice Committee, which is scheduled to vote next Tuesday on the death penalty, might eliminate the killing of a police officer from crimes which would be subject to a mandatory death penalty.

If that happens, Younger said, the bill "will satisfy no one" and will force death penalty foes to circulate another initiative to enact the penalty.

Moretti predicted in a Capitol news conference that "the chances are better than even at this point" that a death penalty bill will be approved by the Criminal Justice Committee and then anacted by the full Assembly.

Moretti, a foe of the death penalty, is the Democratic chief of the Assembly. He predicted there "will be some amendments" to the Senate-passed measure by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach. But he said he didn't know what those amendments might be.

Currently the death penalty is all-but-totally abolished in California because only four rare crimes are punishable by death: treason to the state, perjury leading to the death of another, murder by a life-term convict and train wrecking that causes serious injury.

The major offences the Deukmejian bill would add to the mandatory death penalty list are murder of a peace officer and murder by hired killers.

A 1972 U.S. Supreme Court ruling permits the death penalty only in conditions where mandatory penalties are for specific crimes.

Younger, who followed Moretti's appearance with his own news conference, said of Moretti: "I think he probably can determine if a bill gets out" and what amendments will be made.

Younger said he had heard that the committee was considering striking the provisions of the Deukmejian bill which require mandatory death penalties for persons who kill a police officer.

Younger also disagreed with Moretti's statement that the Deukmejian bill could be made more restrictive.

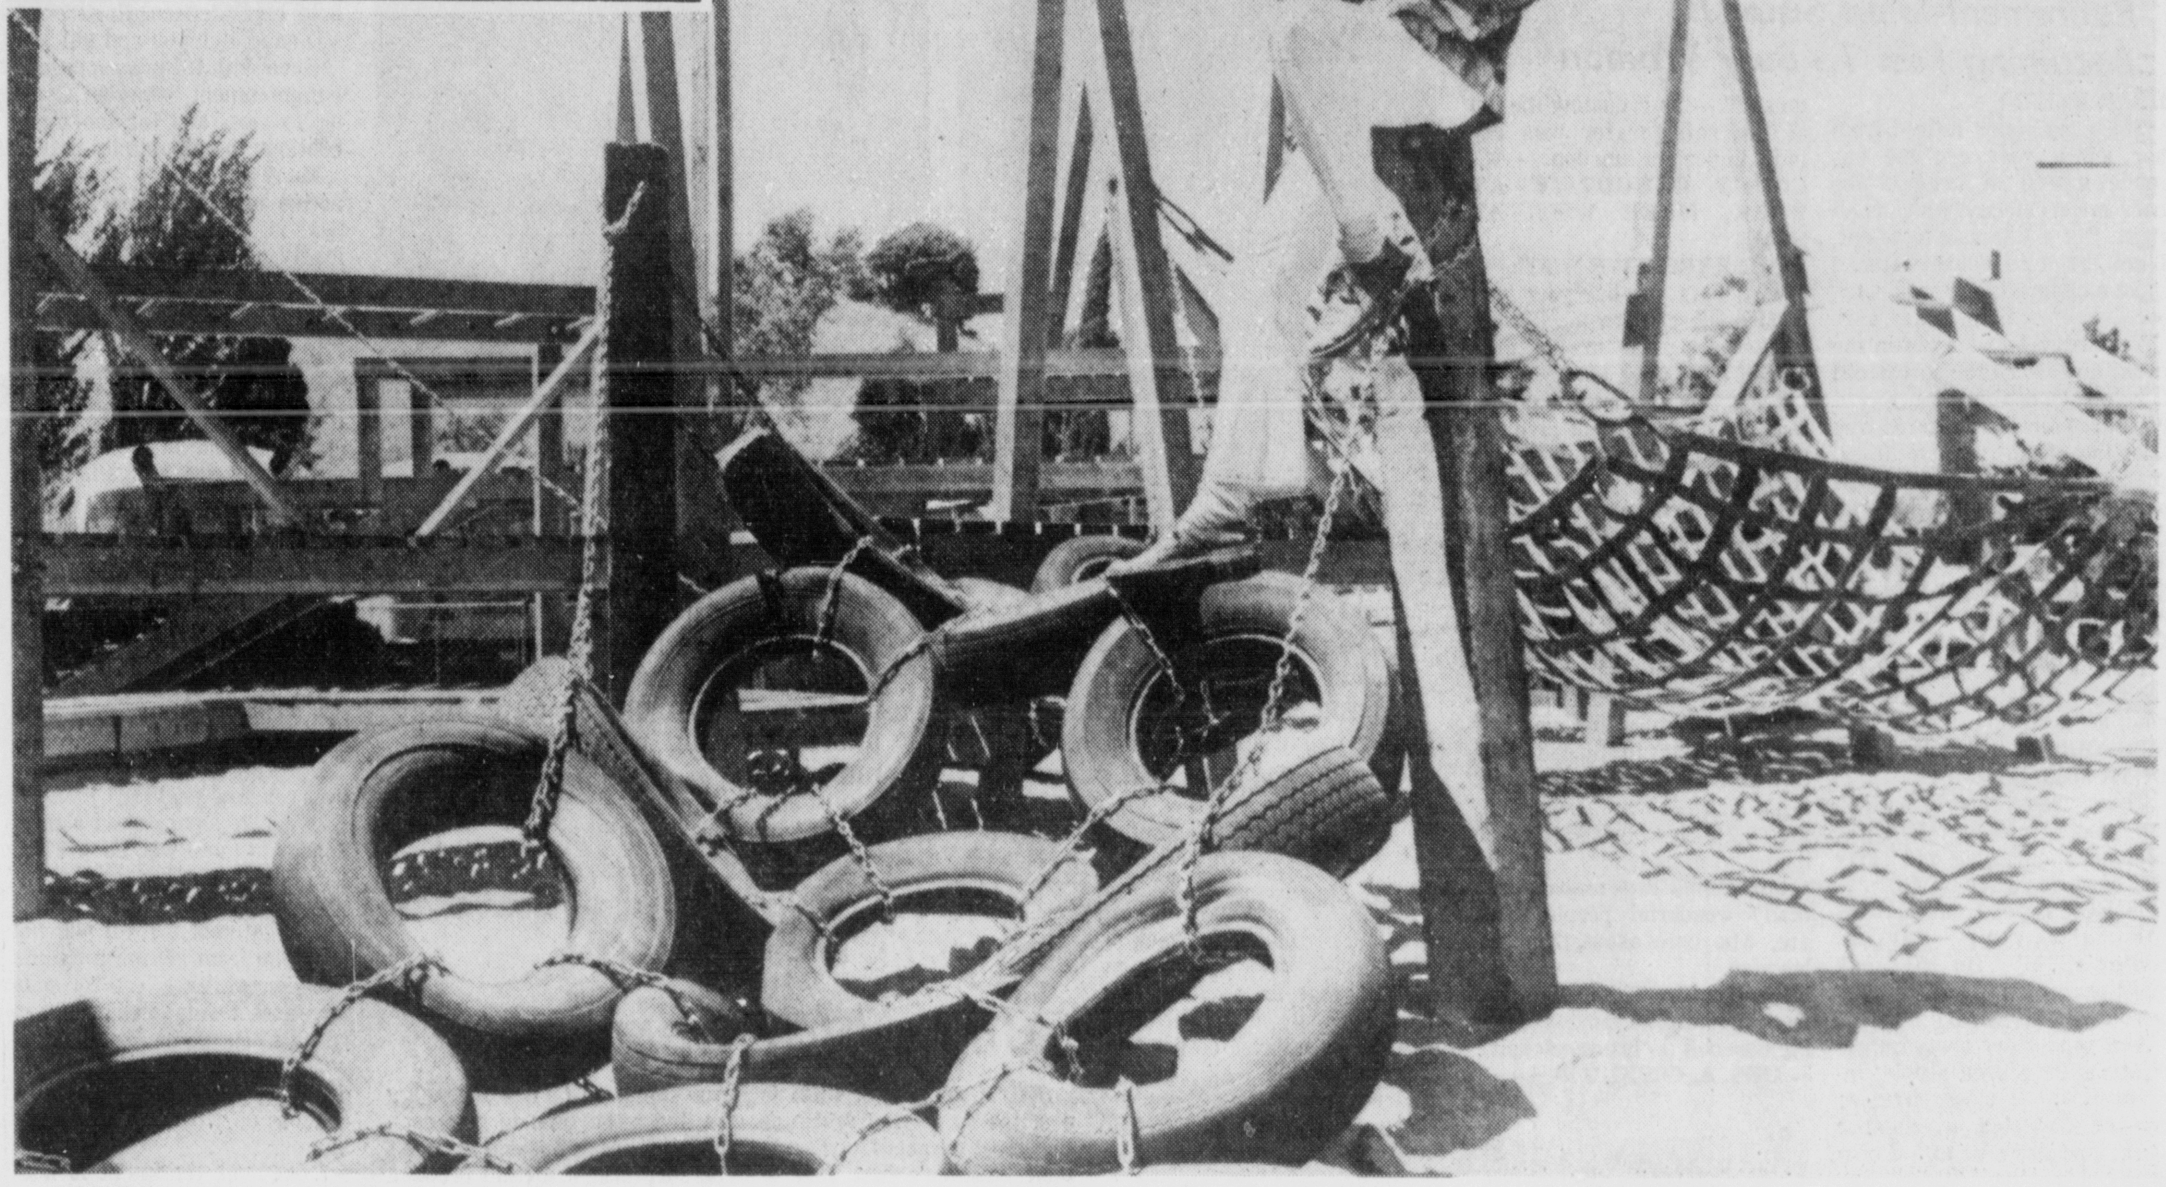
GUIDES VOLUNTEERS

Creates Marin Play Areas

By PAT BALMES



PERCHED ON a post of his all-in-one-piece portable play equipment at Marin Country Day School in Corte Madera, designer Jay Beckwith says with humor that he charges by the hour so community volunteers will hurry up and get the work done on their playground to get rid of him.

(Photo by Bob Hax)

"All my projects are with the community, with people who volunteer to work weekends," said playground designer Jay Beckwith of Sausalito.

The artist designs play complexes, procures materials and supervises volunteer unskilled labor. He builds his typical playground with volunteers in four weekends for about $1,000. His fee is one-third to one-fourth of the cost, he said.

His compensation has kept him "at poverty level," he said, until recently when he received $96,000 in revenue sharing funds to use to build 17 playgrounds in San Francisco with volunteer laborers from each community.

Strolling around his new play equipment at Marin Country Day School in Corte Madera, Beckwith said he is suspicious of buildings whose frames are underground. His bolted-timber structure, set on a bed of sand, is portable.

"I do not think that children play on equipment as much as they play with each other," Beckwith explained.

"Playgrounds that look safe are not. It is the dangerous looking ones that kids look out for," Beckwith remarked.

"If you give the kid more options, that is the last trouble you have," he said. A variety of equipment will give children more options so they will not play king of the mountain, struggling over one slide, he believes.

Last spring Beckwith spoke to the MCDS board members and "got them making drawings, all kinds of stuff." He integrated those ideas in a sketch, not an architectural drawing, he said.

"We ordered the lumber and we winged it, creating it at the site," he said.

More women than men volunteered and half the men did not know anything about building, he said.

"The reason I teach people to make playgrounds is so they would not need me anymore. I have been trying to teach women to build," Beckwith said.

HE DIVIDES women from men workers; generally they do not work well together, he has found. The women end up standing around because the men say, "Step aside. I'll show you how," said the artist.

While boys are building tree houses, girls are playing with dolls, he pointed out. Women do not know how to ask how to use a hammer. Men do not communicate the skill; they have a low patience level for specific instructions, he said.

"When I work with somebody, I teach them. I don't say, 'Come on. Hit the nail.' I say, 'Hold the hammer back a little. The reason the nails bend is that you are not holding the hammer face at right angles to the nail."

The hammer is the end of a whip which begins in the back. Any woman in reasonable health could use any of the tools of carpentry. They only have to learn to use them right, he said.

Books are in the library on how to use tools; get as much out of the book as you can, he advises. Find somebody who is willing to teach you about specific skills. Start out watching them work; do not ask any questions until you have gone quite a way studying, he advised.

IN MARIN, Beckwith built playgrounds at Beginning School in Marin City, Park and Alto-Edna Maguire schools and Children's Cultural Center of Marin in Mill Valley.

He has playgrounds in the making in Pacifica and South San Francisco, and is in the planning stages with five different groups including Belveron residents in Tiburon.

"It was absolutely predictable there would be a high population of young children without day care. The builders have been the longest time not putting the new play space in," he commented wryly.

"The women are having a little breakfast to ask the men's permission," he said, adding that if he were a woman he would not like to ask men for anything.

"A woman can come out to an all-in-one playground like this and watch 10 kinds; if she were out on a large blacktop area she could not do it. There are improvements which help take care of kids and free women to take care of other things," he said.

AN INSIDE-OUTSIDE show of Beckwith's playgrounds will be held at the DeYoung Museum in San Francisco beginning Sept. 22. A multi-media slide show of his playgrounds and a map of where to go to see them will occupy one room. Another will be a classroom where 60 children from the revenue sharing schools in San Francisco will daily come to design their own playgrounds.

Outdoors, Beckwith will supervise construction of a portable playground. If people come before 11 a.m., they can participate in his training sessions, he said.

Beckwith has built playgrounds for six years, the last two with community involvement.

Now that he is well known, people get in touch with Beckwith by word of mouth. He is booked up until next June.

He studied art and nursery school education at San Francisco State College and Pacific Oaks in Los Angeles. He used to paint and do ceramics and life drawing.

"THERE IS really nothing new in playgrounds; we came down from the trees," he said. What is new is that he is making a design solution that should not exist for a playground built by adults, he said.

"Adults say, 'Play should be segregated. We are going to give you this thing; you must play in it.' "

He prefers what is standard procedure in Europe, the adventure playground where generation after generation of children add on to it. It is in fenced-in areas in cities. The children put a tag on the wall to show that they are there and borrow tools to work on it, he explained. A council decides when it should be taken down.

"There is a place in Europe for planners of that kind. It will take me five years for a shot at one of those."

Money Troubles Hurt Shoe Sales

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — The world monetary mess has claimed a victim in France—deluxe high fashion shoes.

The French Footwear Federation said this week that some makers of the costly shoes gracing luxury shops on Fifth Avenue and other fashion centers are in trouble.

One reason, shoe industry officials said, is that the once-rich U.S. market can no longer can afford to buy many high-priced French imports with devalued dollars.

The Italian lira is as shaky as the dollar, which means Italian exports cost no more to Americans, and Italian production costs much less than French.

IN THE TOWN of Romans, for centuries the center of deluxe French shoe-making, the Arnoux Salamander factory announced it is closing.

Another factory in the town, Seducta-Charles Jourdan, which is 75 per cent owned by the American firm Genesco, laid off 78 of its 1,300 workers. Other Jourdan employees went on strike, prompting national headlines of the crisis.

"The deluxe market mainly is in the dollar zone and it is troubled because of the dollar devaluation and the floating Italian lira," said Bernard Calaque, director of the economics department of the French Footwear Federation.

"The prices of French deluxe shoes now are very high for U.S. importers," he said. "There has been at least a 25 per cent drop in deluxe shoe orders in France."

CALAQUE SAID medium and law priced shoe exports were not affected.

The deluxe shoe industry, about 20 factories, is only one per cent of France's entire shoe industry but it is the cornerstone and pace setter.

A third headache for the French elegant shoe market—and all shoe makers—is the price of leather. Officials said the price soared 100 per cent in 1972.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Retirement-Idled Sister Is Becoming Pest To Busy Woman

DEAR HELEN:

Since my sister retired from her job a year ago she has made a pest of herself. She calls me every day, which is all right. But if I happen to be out, I get the third degree later. I must explain where I was, why, etc.

Yesterday I had a pie in the oven, and took time to remove it before I answered the phone. She sarcastically wondered why I let the phone ring five times. If the line is busy she demands who the H— I was talking to. After all I DO have other friends, but she makes me feel guilty if I'm not at her beck and call, including her in everything.

I don't want a fight, and I realize she is at loose ends, but how to keep my temper? — MRS. QUESTIONED BLUE

DEAR MRS. Q.B.:

Those "loose ends" need a few "nots." Like: "Do NOT become a querulous old party just because you're retired. . . "Do NOT depend on relatives for all your outside contacts. . ." "Do NOT ask questions you'd resent if they were asked of you."

Aim your sister toward organizations for retired people; introduce her to single friends; get her interested in volunteer work; and don't be afraid of a little constructive criticism. She needs it! — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Ever since the minister pronounced us "man and wife" (not "HUSBAND and wife"), I've been the little also-ran in the family. No matter what I accomplish, it isn't nearly as great as HIS accomplishments. I must make sure he wins most of the time (whenever we compete), or he sulks.

I mustn't talk about my job, but only listen to accounts of HIS work. Yet he expects me to work, as he likes the extra money.

I'm used to signing my name second on credit statements and stock proxies (even though it was MY earnings which bought the stock).

But it's the last straw when, after a tough week at the office, I spend all Saturday cleaning — only to have my well-rested husband greet guests at the door with "Please excuse the house. My wife isn't very domestic" — as if dusting the top of the refrigerator was my most important function. — ACCOUNT EXECUTIVE AT WORK, MERE WIFE AT HOME

DEAR EXECUTIVE-WIFE:

Why don't you buy your husband a subscription to MS. and stop playing up to his misplaced ego! Only a very "low-consciousness" man would insist his wife work, but give her no rights as his equal. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

This is the mother of Timothy Copeland, who can't walk yet, but has thousands of new friends, thanks to your column. The response to the letter about his accident and long rehabilitation has been tremendous. He has six large cartons of mail!

Our problem is that we can't answer all of it, though we'd like to. So could you please put a big "Thank You!" from Timmy in Helen Help Us? He's so happy with his letters.

Our family now realizes how many wonderful people there are, who care about their fellowman.

Incidentally, Timmy is home from the hospital, and out playing baseball (in his wheelchair). — MRS. A. COPELAND

FIRST YEAR

Aftereffects Of Birth Not Serious

(EDITORS NOTE: Fifth in a series on solving problems that most parents face during their children's first year of life, developed by the Office of Child Development, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.)

When he comes home from the hospital, the baby's eyes may have some white or yellow discharge caused by irritation from the medicine that was put in at birth. This should clear up within five or six days and should not get much worse at any time. If it does get worse or lasts more than a week, get medical advice promptly.

In passing through the birth canal, his head may become molded into a peculiar shape. It will become more normal in the first several weeks of life.

Body fluid may accumulate under part of the skin of the scalp causing a firm, spongy lump or "caput." This will disappear in a few weeks. Blood may accumulate on the surface of one of the bones of the skull, causing a soft squashy "cephalohematoma." This kind of lump may take several months to disappear completely. A child who always lies on one side of his head may show flattening and loss of hair on that part of his head. This, too, will disappear as he grows older. None of these "abnormalities" will cause any problems later in the child's life.

The stump of the umbilical cord, which is cut at birth, usually falls off by the fifth to ninth day. The naval then often shows a slight oozing or bleeding for a few days. If it does, clean it once or twice a day with soap and water or with alcohol. Bleeding or oozing that lasts more than two or three days after the cord falls off should be brought to the attention of a doctor.

Older brothers and sisters are often jealous of the time that you spend with a new baby. Try to find some time to give each of them special attention. Don't be surprised if a child between age 2 and 5 starts sucking his thumb, wetting his pants or asking for bottles or diapers in imitation of a new baby. He is simply seeking attention. Give him as much as you can of the attention he wants, but don't encourage him to return to baby-like habits. A child older than 3½ or 4 years can usually understand the arrival of a new baby and can help you take care of him.

Children between the ages of 1 and 3½ years should never be left alone with the baby. They are too young to understand the baby. They may pick him up, drop him, squeeze him too hard, sit on him, put dangerous things in his mouth or crib or hurt him with tools, utensils or furniture. This is not because they are "bad" but because they are naturally jealous of the new arrival. Give them the individual attention they need, let them help you and the baby in whatever way they can when you are with the baby, and never leave them alone with the baby.

ON BEING BLACK

People Are Still Naive About VD

BY SANDRA HAGGERTY
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

OAKLAND — "If you're black you can't catch VD" states the cover of the pamphlet in bold black letters. Page two continues, "But VD can catch you and kill you."

Even with today's supposed status of sexual enlightenment, venereal disease rates continue to rise, and far too many young people continue to be painfully naive about VD.

Many of today's youngsters are sexually active at a much earlier age. Sex is openly discussed and loudly heralded as the greatest contemporary invention. These youngsters say they are not hung up with the senseless inhibitions of their parents.

Still, "scoring" is one thing — it's chic to be sexually experienced. A case of the "clap" is something else altogether. Nobody wants to admit to having VD to his peers and certainly not to his parents.

Venereal disease services and awareness programs are greatly needed. Young people must become aware of the facts.

The knowledgeable may find them simplistic, but they bear repeating:

1. Sexual contact is the only way you can get VD.
2. Visible signs do not always appear in those who have VD.
3. Both gonorrhea and syphilis can be cured.
4. Treatment for VD will not keep you from getting it again.
5. Use of birth control pills increases a woman's chances of getting VD.
6. Using a condom will reduce (not eliminate) a man's chances of getting or spreading VD.
7. Medical treatment is necessary; VD is not a home remedy disease.

In the inner cities where black youngsters relate to such concepts as "Power to the People," it should be understood that "knowledge about health is power to the people." Young people must accept an adult responsibility for their own health if they are going to engage in adult sexual practices. They must demonstrate the degree of value they place on their friends and peers by being actively aware of venereal disease.

Black teen-agers are tremendously concerned about black genocide (primarily at the hands of the white man), but if they don't know the facts about VD they may be guilty of committing black genocide. VD can cause insanity, sterility, paralysis, blindness, heart disease and ultimately death. And it can be passed on to our children. Syphilis is no legacy.

Information about VD, confidential examinations and treatment are available through many county health agencies as well as private free clinics. Addresses of these clinics should be posted in every school, recreation facility, anywhere young people frequent.

The Correct Ingredients For Pickles

Three ingredients were dropped from a recipe for Zucchini Pickles in Wednesday's I-J Food Section through typographical error.

The recipe:

Cut four pounds of unpeeled zucchini into very thin slices, half or quarter the zucchini if large. Peel one pound of onions and slice thinly. Cover the zucchini and onions with water and add one-half cup of salt. Let stand one hour and then drain.

Combine with one quart vinegar, two cups sugar, two teaspoons celery seed, one teaspoon dry mustard, two teaspoons mustard seed and two teaspoons turmeric.

Bring to boil and cook three minutes.

Cotati Increases Employees' Pay

Salary increases of 5 per cent for employees were approved by the Cotati City Council Thursday night.

The council approved the increases in a budget session and also agreed to additional benefits requested by the police department.

The newly formed Cotati Police Officers Association received approval of its request for time and a half pay for overtime work plus increased life insurance benefits and an annual uniform allowance hike from $120 to $150. Officers may now also claim their birthdays as a new paid holiday.

The council heard that the salary increases should add approximately $3,000 to the proposed budget of $453,775.

Councilmen told other employees that they may return later in the year to request overtime pay and the additional holiday given to the police officers.

City Mgr. Paul W. Salfen also told the council that the annual audit of city financial records will begin the first week of September.

Budget review will continue at a meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Intertie Is Supported By County Chamber

The Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau has called upon the Marin Municipal Water District to proceed immediately with construction of the North Marin intertie.

In a letter to Marin County superviosrs, president Edward B. MacGuire said there is no logical reason to hold up the pipeline which would bring 4,000 acre-feet of water into the district annually.

The intertie was approved by voters in November 1970 and preliminary work was proceeding when the district board called a halt to the project. Directors have said the pipeline will not go forward until after the district presents a water supply bond iseue to voters in November.

MacGuire said water from the intertie is obviously needed since Marin Municipal has declared a threatened water shortage and banned new connections.

He said the small amount of water the intertie will produce will not thwart the countywide plan's proposal to limit the county's growth. Instead, the pipeline would provide the water neeced to permit the controlled growth which the plan calls for, he added.

"The county chamber is also deeply concerned about the depressing economic effects throughout Marin of a prolonged water connection moratorium," MacGuire said, even though the economic impact will not be felt for several months since most local contractors have a backlog of projects.

Some Marin Municipal board members opposed the intertie, saying that the public's overwhelming rejection of the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct in 1971 indicated district residents do not want Russian River water.

MacGuire disagrees. "There is no hard evidence that a majority of the citizens of Marin now feel that Russian River water is undesirable."

Two supervisors, Robert A. Roumiguiere and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., have criticized the district board for stalling the northern pipeline and urged that it be built immediately.

Injured Officer Is Recovering

Turner, 25, suffered a compound fracture of the left leg and back injuries.

He and two other officers were investigating at an apartment house at 32 Lakeville Street at 9:30 p.m. when Turner scaled a fire escape to see if windows were secure. When he turned to climb down, a step gave way and Turner feil to the ground.

No sign of a prowler was found.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

AQUARIUS — Did Jack Benny's birth on Feb. 14 make him stingy and want to drive an antique auto? PISCES — Robert Young, born on Feb. 22, is no doctor. But good ratings on "Marcus Welby, M.D." make his future secure as an actor. ARIES — Shirley Jones smiled when she was born March 31. She still does as mother on "The Partridge Family."

TAURUS — Glen Campbell was born June 22, the seventh son of a seventh son. But he still lost his regular TV show.

GEMINI — Dean Martin, born June 17, has a birthday party every week. CANCER — David Brinkley was not born a twin on his July 10 birthday.

LEO — Julia Child is "The French Chef." But her Aug. 15 birthday was nothing to do with it. VIRGO — Larry Hagman was born Sept. 21, the son of Mary Martin. He shone in "I Dream of Jeanne" but flickered out on "The Good Life." LIBRA — Lloyd Haynes was born Oct. 19. But Pete Dixon, the role he plays on "Room 222," was delivered by ABC.

SCORPIO — Walter Cronkite was born Nov. 4. Was it fate that decided he would become a CBS news anchorman? SAGITTARIUS — William Buckley was born to wealth on Nov. 24. It wasn't Zodiac that made him conservative. CAPRICORN — Mary Tyler Moore, a Dec. 29 baby, reads the signs in her life, the TV ratings on her show.

Does West Just Guess Or Is There A Correct Opening Lead?

"Please settle a problem that is driving me and my friends out of our so-called minds," requests a correspondent. "We want to know if there is a correct play for West in the accompanying hand or if he just has to guess at the right play.

ACTION PLAN

"West thought long and anxiously about his opening lead. Since South seemed to be ready for a club lead, West decided to open a spade.

"Declarer put up the jack from dummy and East played the deuce of spades. West died a thousand deaths but South had to win the trick with the king and West breathed again.

LOW DIAMOND

"Then South led a low diamond and West had a horrible problem. If he put up the king of diamonds, it might turn out that his partner had the singleton ace. But if West played a low diamond instead of the king, it might turn out that South had led from the ace-queen and then West would lose his trump trick.

"West stewed anxiously for a long time and then played the king of diamonds. As you can see, that was the end!

"Did West make a horrible play of just an unfortunate guess?"

CAUSED MISERY

Just imagine that West had not doubled. If South led a low diamond, it would be obvious that he could not be trying to hoodwink West. If South had the ace-queen of diamonds he would take a normal finesse through East for he East for he would have no reason to suspect that West had the king of diamonds.

In other words, the situation would be quite clear and West could safely play his low diamond.

Early Hartford Park An Urban Renewal

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Bushnell Park was Hartford's first city park and one of America's earliest urban beautification projects.

It was established in 1854 on land purchased by the city along the Connecticut River. When the city bought the land, it was an industrial slum and dump. The park was named after the Rev. Horace Bushnell, whose work led to the purchase.

DALLAS MUSEUM

Meso-American Cultures Pushed

By ALINE WILLBUR
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

DALLAS — The acquisition of 60 of the finest pieces of pre-Columbian art known, catapults the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts into prominence in the field of Meso-American cultures.

A well guarded secret ("We are not at liberty to divulge where and from whom the pieces were bought") and the union of two foundations, the McDermott and the Algur H. Meadows, led to this coup.

The museum already had an impressive pre-Columbian collection. Started 30 years ago as "station-wagon-art" with friends of the museum bringing artifacts they either had excavated themselves or bought at the excavation sites, the collection had grown through the years grouped and exquisitely displayed around the great Tlaloc, the rain god "who makes things grow." The huge ceramic head and his two acolyte frogs were found together and dominate the museum's main pre-Columbian gallery.

Thirteen cultures of ancient Mexico, ranging in date from the first great Meso-Amrican culture, the Olmec, 1000 B.C., to the last, the Aztec, A.D. 1500, are represented in the new acquisition.

The strength of the new addition is in Olmec culture and blends beautifully with the museum's present collection. But what links every period of the new acquisition more than their chronological order is the human, moving quality of its pieces. They speak to the heart as much as to the scholar:

The two seated terra-cotta figures, gossiping behind the half-raised hand, legs nonchalantly crossed over ankle; the seated man and woman, arms entwined after a hard day's work, whose faces have the strength and serenity of some of Millet's peasants; the standing female figure whose rounded forms and whimsical face recall Windblad's porcelain figures; the seated man with black-and-white turban, whose shell eyes gaze at the world with detachment.

The outstanding piece of the Olmec period is a white jade mask. How has it been bleached? No one knows. With the full, massive look of a bitter Roman Caesar it was fully hollowed in the back, including the nose and could have been worn in ceremonial rites. Another extraordinary mask, this one in stone, is of Teotihucan art, which gave us the Pyramids of the Sun and Moon outside of Mexico City. The incredible impact of the mask is still there in spite of the fact its slit eyes have lost their jade and the mouth its enamel teeth.

The Olmec section is mostly made of large stone pieces and ceramics, but there are a number of smaller figurines in jade and hard stone probably intended for an offertory cache, and several pendant ornaments in the shape of legendary animals. They are fashioned and delicately carved in the blue-green jade favored by the Olmec over the bright green jade admired by the Maya.

Outstanding ceramics from the West Coast of Mexico again stress the human representative quality of the period: a brown seated couple from Jalisco with white His and Her turbans, and the extraordinary dog from Colima who looks so "doggish" seen from the side and so human when seen from the front.

The most recent piece in the acquisition is a standing figure of Xipe, the God of Spring, dated AD 1400-1500. This Aztec piece is unique in that it shows in the bent arm the four holes where it was tied back together after it was broken and repaired by a pre-Columbian craftsman. The figure still retains the red coloring on the body of the "impersonator." Spring coming out of its winter skin: the maillot-like skin was laced in the front and back, the mask face is ready to fall off revealing the inner shell eyes and double mouth.

The 60 new pieces will be incorporated into the existing collection and the entire pre-Columbian galleries will be re-installed in larger quarters in the fall.

MOTION PICTURE GUIDE

The Marin Motion Picture and Television Council provides these ratings of movies now being shown in Marin County. The council's findings are from California and National Parent-Teacher Association magazines and Parents' Magazine unless otherwise noted. More complete reviews may be obtained by calling the San Rafael City Library.

FAMILY

"Living Free" — Dramatic but laugh-provoking adventure of lion cubs in this excellent sequel to "Born Free." A delight.

"Lost Horison" — Spectacular musical version of classic tale about Shangri-La, that mystical hidden valley of brotherly love and tranquil longevity. Fine cast.

"Neptune Factor" — Exciting and novel adventure science fiction. Film is about the efforts to locate an undersea laboratory which has been swept to the bottom of the sea by an earthquake.

"Support Your Local Sheriff" — A western spoof along the lines of "Cat Ballou." A goldmining town where a lawman never lasts longer than a day gets a newcomer to take the job. Some dialogue in poor taste.

"Ten From the Show of Shows" — Hilarious skits from classic Sid Caesar TV shows of early fifties. Pure entertainment.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"Day of the Jackal" — Highly charged but lengthy thriller about an attempt on the life of DeGaulle by extreme right-wing French OAS because he decolonized Algeria. Some suggestive scenes.

"Hireling" — Set in 1920s in England this unusual film details the sensitive relationship between a chauffeur and the aristocratic lady he drives. She has a nervous breakdown and he helps her regain her confidence.

"Legend of Boggy Creek" — Documentary that chronicles the experiences of people who live around Fouke, Ark., who have seen a huge, hairy monster for the past decade. All attempts to track this creature have failed. (Box office Magazine)

"Paper Moon" — An expertly crafted sophisticated comedy drama recreating the 1930s. A traveling salesman-con artist agrees to deliver a 9-year-old orphan girl to an aunt in Missouri. The girl is tough, smokes and swears and outswindles her mentor. Disturbing thought is that some children may copy her behavior.

"Rio Lobo" — Due to a Yankee spy a secret gold shipment is stolen by Confederates. After the war the U.S. colonel in charge of the gold searches for the informer but becomes involved with several other problems. Usual action-packed old fashioned western.

"Slither" — Deathbed instruction from a fellow convict sends a man on a wild chase for hidden stolen money. This kooky off-beat comedy has plenty of profanity and violent overtones.

BORDERLINE
(Most sources say Adults Only)

"Bananas" — A raw, raucous satire on subjects formerly held sacred. Plot is an excuse for all kinds of hilarious situations.

"The Family" — Considerable violence in this action drama about a professional killer for a syndicate. He eventually develops a conscience until he finds he has been used by the woman he loves. (Boxoffice Magazine)

"Legend of Hell House" — Intriguing haunted house horror movie is steeped in parapsychological lore. Some violence and vulgarity but phenomena is reported in a low-keyed fashion.

"Man Who Loved Cat Dancing" — Attempted gang-rape, vicious handfights and heavy gunplay do not commend this film to the impressionable young. During a train robbery in the Old West, a married woman is abducted in the get-away. Love develops between the thief and the lady. (Film Information).

"Touch of Class" — Sophisticated French bedroom farce. An expose of the difficulties inherent in an extramarital affair. Frank sexual scenes and language.

"Travels With My Aunt" — A prim British accountant becomes embroiled in drug smuggling, illegal currency and theft. Film seems excessive, turning a light comedy into heavy fantasy.

"You'll Like My Mother" — Violence and a graphic birth scene add terror to this story of a pregnant war widow who receives a hostile reception from her late husband's family. She uncovers some shocking secrets.

ADULTS ONLY

"Blume In Love" — Self-indulgent romance about a lawyer who tries to win back his divorced wife. Story told in confusing flashbacks. At an adult level love, hate and sexual feelings are explored from a man's point of view.

"Play It As It Lays" — Penetrating film on insanity peculiar to Hollywood alone. Story of a fading film star. An unloved ex-wife, mother of an institutionalized child, is always a victim.

"Scarecrow" — The poignant story of the friendship of two likable drifters is punctuated by comic incidents. Sex, nudity, cursing and violence are played for realism rather than exploitation.

Is this page different?

In size it is. Due to a world-wide shortage of newsprint, the I-J has purchased a supply of paper that is two inches narrower than usual. We'll be using this paper during the next month. Vandals Damage A Construction Site

Vandals ripped up electrical conduits and damaged plumbing at a bank under construction at 1707 Grant Avenue, causing damage estimated at $800, according to Novato police.

The contractor, Carl N. Swenson Co. Inc. of San Jose, reported the damage occurred between 6 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Japanese Attend A-Bomb Memorial

NAGASAKI, Japan (UPI) — About 11,000 persons attended a memorial service Thursday on the 28th anniversary of the World War II atomic bomb attack against Nagasaki.

Mayor Yoshitake Mototani used the occasion to denounce nuclear tests such as those conducted by France in the South Pacific.

The port city in western Kyushu was the second Japanese city hit by an atomic bomb in August, 1945. Three days earlier, Hiroshima became the first target of an atomic bomb.

Giant Vessel On First Trip

The bulk-carrying ship Ultramar left Wednesday night for Vancouver, B.C., to be loaded with coal for Japan. It is 892 feet long and can carry 81,500 tons of cargo.

The $30-million vessel was turned over by the National Steel & Shipbuilding Co. to the new owners, Aries Marine Shipping Co. of New York, and assigned to the U.S. Merchant Marine.

Does West Just Guess Or Is There A Correct Opening Lead?

"Please settle a problem that is driving me and my friends out of our so-called minds," requests a correspondent. "We want to know if there is a correct play for West in the accompanying hand or if he just has to guess at the right play.

ACTION PLAN

"West thought long and anxiously about his opening lead. Since South seemed to be ready for a club lead, West decided to open a spade.

"Declarer put up the jack from dummy and East played the deuce of spades. West died a thousand deaths but South had to win the trick with the king and West breathed again.

LOW DIAMOND

"Then South led a low diamond and West had a horrible problem. If he put up the king of diamonds, it might turn out that his partner had the singleton ace. But if West played a low diamond instead of the king, it might turn out that South had led from the ace-queen and then West would lose his trump trick.

"West stewed anxiously for a long time and then played the king of diamonds. As you can see, that was the end!

"Did West make a horrible play of just an unfortunate guess?"

CAUSED MISERY

Just imagine that West had not doubled. If South led a low diamond, it would be obvious that he could not be trying to hoodwink West. If South had the ace-queen of diamonds he would take a normal finesse through East for he East for he would have no reason to suspect that West had the king of diamonds.

In other words, the situation would be quite clear and West could safely play his low diamond.

This is an acceptable opening bid if the long suit is a major, but a doubtful bid if it is a minor suit.

Early Hartford Park An Urban Renewal

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Bushnell Park was Hartford's first city park and one of America's earliest urban beautification projects.

It was established in 1854 on land purchased by the city along the Connecticut River. When the city bought the land, it was an industrial slum and dump. The park was named after the Rev. Horace Bushnell, whose work led to the purchase.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

AQUARIUS — Did Jack Benny's birth on Feb. 14 make him stingy and want to drive an antique auto? PISCES — Robert Young, born on Feb. 22, is no doctor. But good ratings on "Marcus Welby, M.D." make his future secure as an actor. ARIES — Shirley Jones smiled when she was born March 31. She still does as mother on "The Partridge Family."

TAURUS — Glen Campbell was born June 22, the seventh son of a seventh son. But he still lost his regular TV show.

GEMINI — Dean Martin, born June 17, has a birthday party every week. CANCER — David Brinkley was not born a twin on his July 10 birthday.

LEO — Julia Child is "The French Chef." But her Aug. 15 birthday was nothing to do with it. VIRGO — Larry Hagman was born Sept. 21, the son of Mary Martin. He shone in "I Dream of Jeanne" but flickered out on "The Good Life." LIBRA — Lloyd Haynes was born Oct. 19. But Pete Dixon, the role he plays on "Room 222," was delivered by ABC.

SCORPIO — Walter Cronkite was born Nov. 4. Was it fate that decided he would become a CBS news anchorman? SAGITTARIUS — William Buckley was born to wealth on Nov. 24. It wasn't Zodiac that made him conservative. CAPRICORN — Mary Tyler Moore, a Dec. 29 baby, reads the signs in her life, the TV ratings on her show.

DALLAS MUSEUM

Meso-American Cultures Pushed

By ALINE WILLBUR
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

DALLAS — The acquisition of 60 of the finest pieces of pre-Columbian art known, catapults the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts into prominence in the field of Meso-American cultures.

A well guarded secret ("We are not at liberty to divulge where and from whom the pieces were bought") and the union of two foundations, the McDermott and the Algur H. Meadows, led to this coup.

The museum already had an impressive pre-Columbian collection. Started 30 years ago as "station-wagon-art" with friends of the museum bringing artifacts they either had excavated themselves or bought at the excavation sites, the collection had grown through the years grouped and exquisitely displayed around the great Tlaloc, the rain god "who makes things grow." The huge ceramic head and his two acolyte frogs were found together and dominate the museum's main pre-Columbian gallery.

Thirteen cultures of ancient Mexico, ranging in date from the first great Meso-Amrican culture, the Olmec, 1000 B.C., to the last, the Aztec, A.D. 1500, are represented in the new acquisition.

The strength of the new addition is in Olmec culture and blends beautifully with the museum's present collection. But what links every period of the new acquisition more than their chronological order is the human, moving quality of its pieces. They speak to the heart as much as to the scholar:

The two seated terra-cotta figures, gossiping behind the half-raised hand, legs nonchalantly crossed over ankle; the seated man and woman, arms entwined after a hard day's work, whose faces have the strength and serenity of some of Millet's peasants; the standing female figure whose rounded forms and whimsical face recall Windblad's porcelain figures; the seated man with black-and-white turban, whose shell eyes gaze at the world with detachment.

The outstanding piece of the Olmec period is a white jade mask. How has it been bleached? No one knows. With the full, massive look of a bitter Roman Caesar it was fully hollowed in the back, including the nose and could have been worn in ceremonial rites. Another extraordinary mask, this one in stone, is of Teotihucan art, which gave us the Pyramids of the Sun and Moon outside of Mexico City. The incredible impact of the mask is still there in spite of the fact its slit eyes have lost their jade and the mouth its enamel teeth.

The Olmec section is mostly made of large stone pieces and ceramics, but there are a number of smaller figurines in jade and hard stone probably intended for an offertory cache, and several pendant ornaments in the shape of legendary animals. They are fashioned and delicately carved in the blue-green jade favored by the Olmec over the bright green jade admired by the Maya.

Closely related to the Olmec are several pro-classic pieces including a twisting black stone fish with his mouth open, a greenstone round monkey head with hollowed inner circled eyes, and a seated female figure from Xochipala in the present state of Guerrere. A single representation of the Zapotec culture is included in a figure bowl of the Monte Alban period. Surrounded by lush foliage, a wounded warrior is incised in a ceramic cylindric vase.

Outstanding ceramics from the West Coast of Mexico again stress the human representative quality of the period: a brown seated couple from Jalisco with white His and Her turbans, and the extraordinary dog from Colima who looks so "doggish" seen from the side and so human when seen from the front.

The most recent piece in the acquisition is a standing figure of Xipe, the God of Spring, dated AD 1400-1500. This Aztec piece is unique in that it shows in the bent arm the four holes where it was tied back together after it was broken and repaired by a pre-Columbian craftsman. The figure still retains the red coloring on the body of the "impersonator." Spring coming out of its winter skin: the maillot-like skin was laced in the front and back, the mask face is ready to fall off revealing the inner shell eyes and double mouth.

The 60 new pieces will be incorporated into the existing collection and the entire pre-Columbian galleries will be reinstalled in larger quarters in the fall.

LONDON (UPI) — Britons ate 2.3 per cent more potatoes in 1972 than in the previous three years, the Potato Marketing Board reports.

MOTION PICTURE GUIDE

The Marin Motion Picture and Television Council provides these ratings of movies now being shown in Marin County. The council's findings are from California and National Parent-Teacher Association magazines and Parents' Magazine unless otherwise noted. More complete reviews may be obtained by calling the San Rafael City Library.

FAMILY

"Living Free" — Dramatic but laugh-provoking adventure of lion cubs in this excellent sequel to "Born Free." A delight.

"Lost Horison" — Spectacular musical version of classic tale about Shangri-La, that mystical hidden valley of brotherly love and tranquil longevity. Fine cast.

"Neptune Factor" — Exciting and novel adventure science fiction. Film is about the efforts to locate an undersea laboratory which has been swept to the bottom of the sea by an earthquake.

"Support Your Local Sheriff" — A western spoof along the lines of "Cat Ballou." A goldmining town where a lawman never lasts longer than a day gets a newcomer to take the job. Some dialogue in poor taste.

"Ten From the Show of Shows" — Hilarious skits from classic Sid Caesar TV shows of early fifties. Pure entertainment.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"Day of the Jackal" — Highly charged but lengthy thriller about an attempt on the life of DeGaulle by extreme right-wing French OAS because he decolonized Algeria. Some suggestive scenes.

"Hireling" — Set in 1920s in England this unusual film details the sensitive relationship between a chauffeur and the aristocratic lady he drives. She has a nervous breakdown and he helps her regain her confidence.

"Legend of Boggy Creek" — Documentary that chronicles the experiences of people who live around Fouke, Ark., who have seen a huge, hairy monster for the past decade. All attempts to track this creature have failed. (Box office Magazine)

"Paper Moon" — An expertly crafted sophisticated comedy drama recreating the 1930s. A traveling salesman-con artist agrees to deliver a 9-year-old orphan girl to an aunt in Missouri. The girl is tough, smokes and swears and outswindles her mentor. Disturbing thought is that some children may copy her behavior.

"Rio Lobo" — Due to a Yankee spy a secret gold shipment is stolen by Confederates. After the war the U.S. colonel in charge of the gold searches for the informer but becomes involved with several other problems. Usual action-packed old fashioned western.

"Slither" — Deathbed instruction from a fellow convict sends a man on a wild chase for hidden stolen money. This kooky off-beat comedy has plenty of profanity and violent overtones.

BORDERLINE
(Most sources say Adults Only)

"Bananas" — A raw, raucous satire on subjects formerly held sacred. Plot is an excuse for all kinds of hilarious situations.

"The Family" — Considerable violence in this action drama about a professional killer for a syndicate. He eventually develops a conscience until he finds he has been used by the woman he loves. (Boxoffice Magazine)

"Legend of Hell House" — Intriguing haunted house horror movie is steeped in parapsychological lore. Some violence and vulgarity but phenomena is reported in a low-keyed fashion.

"Man Who Loved Cat Dancing" — Attempted gang-rape, vicious handfights and heavy gunplay do not commend this film to the impressionable young. During a train robbery in the Old West, a married woman is abducted in the get-away. Love develops between the thief and the lady. (Film Information).

"Touch of Class" — Sophisticated French bedroom farce. An expose of the difficulties inherent in an extramarital affair. Frank sexual scenes and language.

"Travels With My Aunt" — A prim British accountant becomes embroiled in drug smuggling, illegal currency and theft. Film seems excessive, turning a light comedy into heavy fantasy.

"You'll Like My Mother" — Violence and a graphic birth scene add terror to this story of a pregnant war widow who receives a hostile reception from her late husband's family. She uncovers some shocking secrets.

ADULTS ONLY

"Blume In Love" — Self-indulgent romance about a lawyer who tries to win back his divorced wife. Story told in confusing flashbacks. At an adult level love, hate and sexual feelings are explored from a man's point of view.

"Play It As It Lays" — Penetrating film on insanity peculiar to Hollywood alone. Story of a fading film star. An unloved ex-wife, mother of an institutionalized child, is always a victim.

"Scarecrow" — The poignant story of the friendship of two likable drifters is punctuated by comic incidents. Sex, nudity, cursing and violence are played for realism rather than exploitation.

Vandals Damage A Construction Site

Vandals ripped up electrical conduits and damaged plumbing at a bank under construction at 1707 Grant Avenue, causing damage estimated at $800, according to Novato police.

The contractor, Carl N. Swenson Co. Inc. of San Jose, reported the damage occurred between 6 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Giant Vessel On First Trip

The bulk-carrying ship Ultramar left Wednesday night for Vancouver, B.C., to be loaded with coal for Japan. It is 892 feet long and can carry 81,500 tons of cargo.

The $30-million vessel was turned over by the National Steel & Shipbuilding Co. to the new owners, Aries Marine Shipping Co. of New York, and assigned to the U.S. Merchant Marine.

Japanese Attend A-Bomb Memorial

NAGASAKI, Japan (UPI) — About 11,000 persons attended a memorial service Thursday on the 28th anniversary of the World War II atomic bomb attack against Nagasaki.

Mayor Yoshitake Mototani used the occasion to denounce nuclear tests such as those conducted by France in the South Pacific.

The port city in western Kyushu was the second Japanese city hit by an atomic bomb in August, 1945. Three days earlier, Hiroshima became the first target of an atomic bomb.

Burglary, Pot Charges Denied

A Belvedere youth accused of illegally entering his parents' home has pleaded innocent to felony charges of burglary and possessing marijuana.

William Edward Hoefer, 18, will have a preliminary hearing Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

Belvedere police said they caught Hoefer climbing out of a window at his parents' house, even though the Hoefers had forbidden their son to enter the residence while they were on vacation.

Police said a quantity of marijuana was found in his pocket.

Benefit Concert Set In Berkeley

An evening of music for the benefit of the Ali Akbar College of Music will be presented Aug. 25th in Berkeley, not at the college in San Rafael as erroneously reported yesterday by the Independent-Journal.

The concert at the Berkeley Community Theater will start at 8 p.m. and will feature sarod master Ali Akbar Khan and teachers from the college: flutist G. S. Sachdev, tabla drummer Zakir Hussain and Kathak dancer Chitresh Das. Appearing with them will be Alan Watts, philosopher, lecturer and teacher, an authority on Zen.

Wilderness Land Supported For Oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special federal-state commission recommended Thursday 75 per cent of 80 million acres of federally-owned wilderness in Alaska be opened for oil, gas and other mineral drilling and mining.

But the Federal-State Land Use Planning Commission, in a report filed with Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, said any mineral resources exploration and development should be allowed only under permits and leases, with adequate environmental safeguards.

Some of the 60 million acres the commission recommended for mineral development overlapped with nearly 41 million acres the panel said should be set aside for primary use of water foul preserves, fish and wildlife habitats, recreation or archeological or other scientific study.

The commission's recommendations dealt with federal lands that comprise 19 per cent of Alaska. The lands, scattered over various parts of the state, do not include 90 million acres of federal land already set aside for parks, wild life refuges, military preserves and other public uses.

Nor do they include 103 million acres of federal land the state of Alaska is entitled to under the 1959 act making it a state, or the 42 million acres Eskimos and other native people can claim under the Alaska Native Claims Act.

Morton has until Dec. 18 to make his recommendations to Congress on what should be done with the federal wilderness areas, which range from remote mountains to arctic ice fields and includes wild rivers.

The petroleum and mineral industries on one side and environmental groups on the other form the extremities of the interests lobbying Morton and Congress on uses of the land, comprising the largest tract of wilderness.

The 80 million acres does not cover the North Slope oil fields or the route of the proposed trans-Alaskan pipeline that will bring oil to Valdez, on the southern coast. But Interior Department officials said the land is known or suspected to contain vast mineral resources, in many cases in some of the most scenic spots.

Some options open to Morton in his recommendations include parks, wildlife refuges and forest preserves. Or he could propose leaving the land in the general public domain, opening it up to homesteading or selling it to private interests.

Another option would be to open some of the land to the state of Alaska, which so far has selected 63 million of its 103 million acres, or to the Alaska natives, who have not made any selections.

The commission, which held numerous public hearings on the subject, conceded that one of its main problems was to strike a balance between resources development and environmental and scenic preservation.

It said it also had to recognize the rights of natives and other persons living mostly off the land. Therefore, it said all 80 million acres would remain open to hunting and fishing.

Of the 60 million acres proposed for mineral development, the commission said 2.68 million acres should be limited to oil and gas extraction.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

TV Group Hopes To Give Marinites A New Soapbox

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Click on the trusty living room television set in September and there, a few turns of the dial away from the networks' new fall cops-and-robbers shows and situation comedies, you may see your neighbor, or perhaps yourself, giving views on an issue of particular community interest in Marin County.

It will be possible, promises the nascent Marin Community Video Association, to watch a running account of the issues and events surrounding the attempt to recall the mayor and two city councilmen in Corte Madera over Community Antenna Television (CATV) — or Cable TV.

This Corte Madera coverage, which will be the first, and others to follow will be brought to the citizens of Marin County by the citizens of Marin County, say members of the Marin video group.

"Every place should have public access television, every place will have public access television and we will have it here," said Gerald Pearlman, a member of the ad hoc executive committee of the community video association.

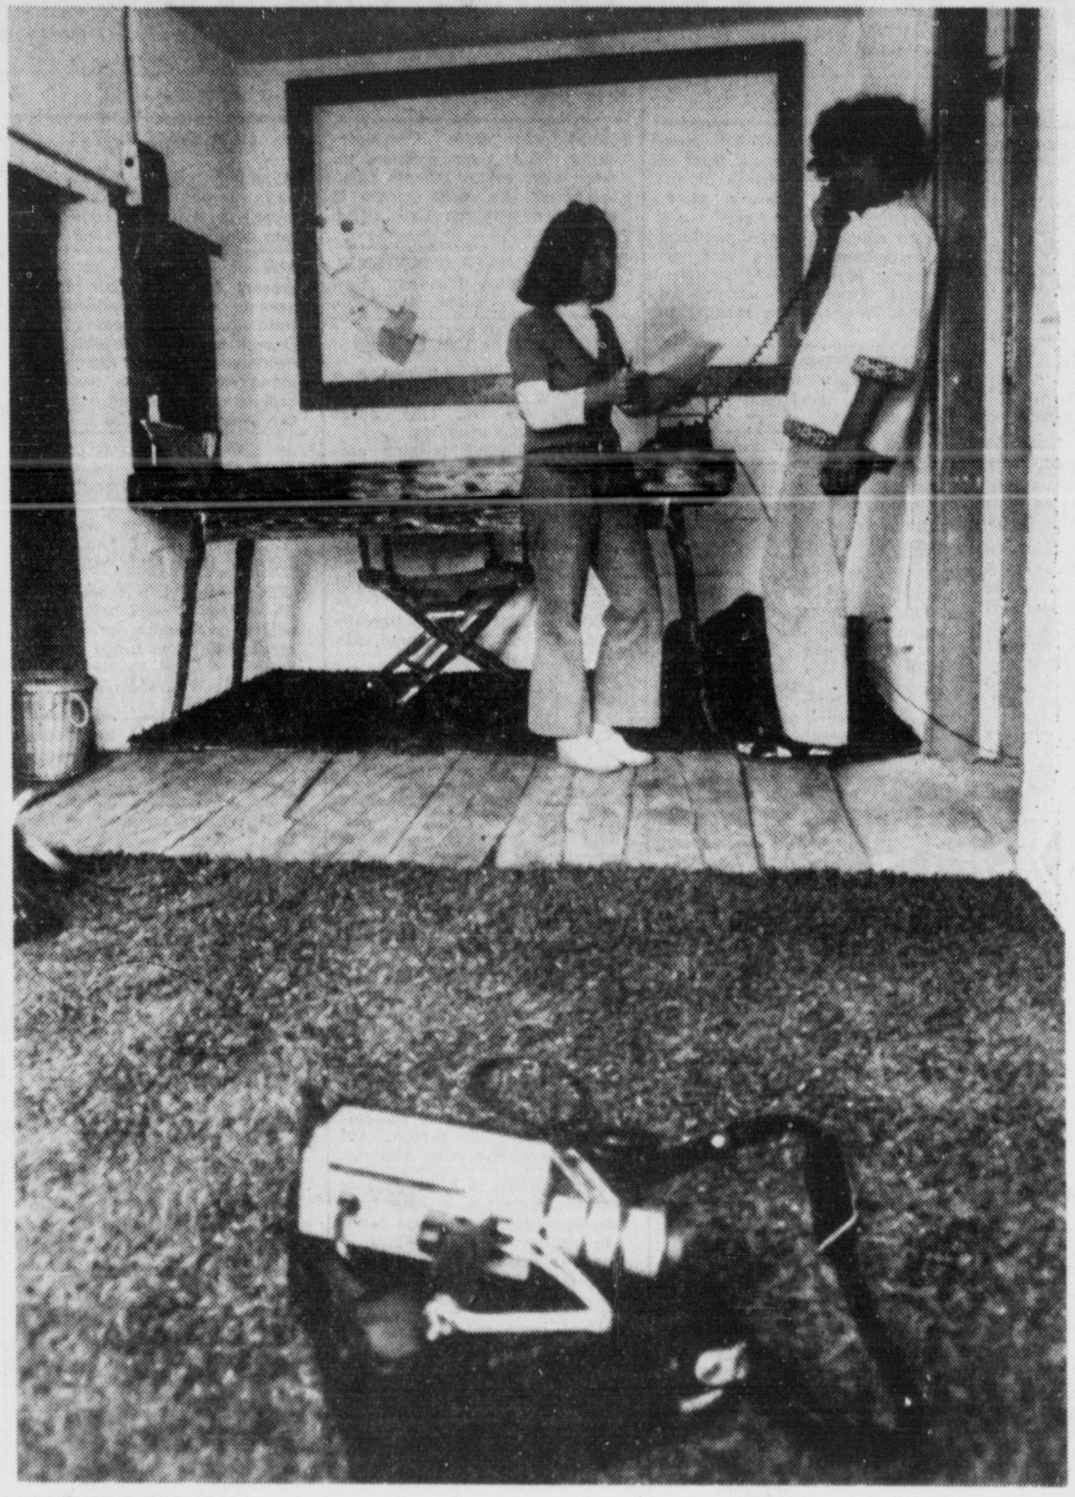
Pearlman, 39, once produced community-oriented programs broadcast over cable TV in Canada. A resident of Muir Beach, he is a former director of the community services district there. In 1968, he helped produce an award-winning film account of the events during the Democratic convention in Chicago.

The Federal Communications Commission has agreed with Pearlman. Last year it ruled that all cable TV companies in the top 100 markets — practically the entire U.S. — make at least one public access channel available by 1977 for the free use of the community.

Although local cablecasters are not legally bound to provide public access for four more years, Televue Systems, the largest cable TV company in the county with 35,000 subscribers, has indicated that it will provide some air time before the Corte Madera recall election Sept. 18.

If it does, the Corte Madera shows — following a scenario written by a part-time reporter, Barbara Boxer —will include the history of the controversy, discussions with shopping center developers and their opponents who sparked the recall vote, plus man on the street interviews intended to provide a barometer of local feeling.

Tentative plans are for two programs, about an hour long, Sept. 16 and 17, the two days before the recall vote.



TV CENTER — Writer Barbara Boxer and producer-director Gerald Pearlman occupy this tiny cublicle which is the home of a big idea: television coverage of the community, by the community, for the community. The Marin Community Video Association, of which Mrs. Boxer and Pearlman are part, plans local shows under a new Federal Communications Commission order opening channels to the people.

Under the FCC ruling, the cablecaster must let any citizen put a show on the air on a first-come, first-served basis. The cable company must make basic production facilities available free or at a nominal cost. And the cablecaster is forbidden to exercise control over what people put into their programs.

So, short of being libelous or obscene, a person can do anything he wants on video tape and it will go on the air and can be seen in any home in the county hooked to cable TV. There are six cable companies in Marin with a total of about 54,000 subscribers.

"Whether the Rotary Club has something to say about what they're up to, or the Black Panthers, or whoever, it's going to go on the air," Pearlman vowed.

With hardly any money and no equipment of its own, the video association, its members readily admit, is more of a concept and an idea powered by the energy and talents of its dozen or so executive committee members and their less active friends.

The association recently moved into a tiny cinderblock cubicle of an office at 21-A Corte Madera Avenue in Mill Valley. Steve McNamara, publisher of the Pacific Sun, donated the space in a corner of the Sun's new quarters.

Another association member, John Korty of Mill Valley, has provided some video equipment that has been used on practice tapings and will be used for the Corte Madera work. Korty, an independent videotape producer, has contributed footage for "Sesame Street," "Electric Company" and the "ABC Movie of the Week."

The association — arranging incorporation as a nonprofit organization —is operating on a $1,500 grant from the Cambium Foundation of San Francisco and members are preparing applications for other grants to supply enough money for the group to operate for the next three years.

Members envision a central studio office with cameras, editing equipment and a tape library or resource center. Plans are for four satellite bureaus, probably in Novato, San Rafael, Corte Madera and Marin City.

The bureaus will be essentially storefront operations manned by a community person the association will train. It will be equipped with a portapak outfit, which consists of a handheld camera and videotape recorder that is carried with the aid of a shoulder harness. The equipment sells for about $1,500, putting it within reach of schools, churches and community groups.

Once established, its members say, the association will produce education programs, community rap sessions, programs for the elderly, documentaries, news shows and programs that will be a showcase for local musicians, artists and craftsmen.

"For example," said Pearlman, "not everyone can play clubs like the Lion's Share. Consequently a lot of talent in this county withers on the vine and dies. When we get this thing going, people can come and play and sing or dance and do what they want to do."

Pearlman estimates that it will take more than $100,000 to get the association established and going on a full-time basis.

The object of it all, he says, is to bring the attention of citizens home by providing decent information about local issues that concern them. The association also will provide the medium for people to participate in their community and to get their views heard.

"That's what public access is, information. And information," according to Pearlman, "is energy."

Attorneys For Nude Bathers Say Marin's Law In Conflict

By GEORGE NEVIN

California law gives citizens the right to get all-over tans if they want and Marin County has no right to bar skinnydippers from private beaches, a battery of attorneys argued Thursday.

Nonsense, countered a deputy district attorney: most people are offended by the sight of sun worshippers cavorting in the nude.

Those arguments and others were presented to Municipal Court Judge Robert A. Smallman in the latest legal skirmish over nude sunbathing on West Marin beaches.

Smallman said he will announce a decision Monday on a move by the four attorneys to free eight persons of charges of being nude in public.

The attorneys — Fred A. Hurvich and David Mayer of the American Civil Liberties Union, Peter J. Muzilo of the Marin Public Defenders office and Paul Kayfetz — attacked the arrests on three grounds:

1. Nude sunbathing is an expression of philosophy and is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees free speech.

2. State law already has preempted the field with laws against improper sexual behavior, and Marin has no right to pass an antinudity ordinance if the state Legislature has not.

3. The criminal complaint which charges the eight merely accuses them of "wilfully appearing nude in a public place," and is too vague for the attorneys to prepare an adequate defense.

The attorneys got nowhere with Judge Smallman on the constitution issue. Smallman held that freedom of speech does not protect exhibiting a nude body.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Girard R. Corteau challenged Hurvich's contention that state law already has preempted the field of nudity laws. "Nudity per se does not involve obscenity, lewdness or sexual activity," he said. Since nudity doesn't equal sex, there is room for both for state laws against improper sexual behavior and a county ordinance forbidding nudity, he said.

"If nudity isn't a sexual activity," asked Judge Smallman, "what is it? Why did the board of supervisors pass an ordinance against it? Why do pepple get uptight about it?"

"Because," Corteau replied, "People frown on it. They don't approve of it."

Failure to keep nudes away from public beaches means "you're telling people they can't use a certain beach if they don't want to be offended by people cavorting in the nude."

Hurvich took a different point of view: "Under Mr. Corteau's version, there is no place for the nudes. A large segment of the population is being deprived of equal protection of the law."

The state, he said, allows room for everyone to do what he wants. "Little Beach (near Muir Beach, where three of the eight were arrested) has traditionally been a place where nudes could go."

The five persons arrested on Bolinas Beach actually were on private property, which is not covered by the county ordinance, which mentions "public lands," the attorney contended.

They claimed this means land actually owned by a politicial entity, and not merely land used by the public, which is termed a public place. Such places can be either publicly or privately owned, they argued.

Little Beach, too, is private, although leased to the county.

The eight persons accused of nudity are Stephen Francis White, 22, and Susan Mehrings White, 23, both of Oakland, and Walter Voigt, 33, of Strawberry, all arrested on Muir Beach; and Roland Jacopetti, 37; Elizabeth Kreusler Ehmann, 39; Nancy Joan Denmark, 26, and Theodore Harvey Saladin, 36, all of Bolinas, and Peter Holmes Davidson, 30, of Colorado. They were arrested at Bolinas Beach.

Canon Village Appeal On Fairfax Agenda

The Fairfax Town Council will hear a citizens' appeal of planning commission approval of a precise plan for Canon Village and Tennis Club at 8 p.m. Monday in the Fairfax Women's Club.

The council will consider granting Survival Inc., the county recycling agency, a $1,000 subsidy and an animal control ordinance toughening current regulations

Ex-POW Sets Wedding Date

DALLAS (UPI) — Charles Stackhouse, a Navy lieutenant commander who spent six years in a Hanoi prison, will marry a Dallas airline hostess Aug. 21 at Lemoore, Calif.

Stackhouse, a Cincinnati native, met Alanna Whelan in May and proposed to her the night of a salute to Vietnam veterans at the Cotton Bowl.

Best man at the wedding will be Stackhouse's cellmate in Hanoi, Air Force Capt. Robert Lilly of Dallas.

Tight Zone Rules Eyed In Belvedere

A set of amendments designed to tighten up Belvedere zoning ordinances has been approved by the city planning commission and referred to the city council.

City Mgr. William L. Cavalli said the council will discuss the changes at a special meeting Aug. 28.

The changes adopted by the commission Wednesday incorporate suggestions by the consulting firm of Livingston and Blayney in their Belvedere planning study, completed in November 1971.

According to Cavalli, the major change is one which outlaws building on substandard lots belonging to home owners with adjacent land.

The revisions would also create two new zones, open space and cove multiple dwelling zones.The latter would differ from the regular multiple-family dwelling zone in that it would allow professional offices, churches, club buildings and apartment offices with a use permit.

Height limits for structures would be reduced from 42 to 36 in the multiple zone and from 32 to 28 feet in all other zones.

There are also changes limiting the amount of land covered by buildings, setting minimum lot sizes for various sized apartment houses, and changing the length of sideyard setbacks.

About 60 per cent of California's population lives in the state's eight southernmost counties.

Ross Council Set To Purchase Land

The Ross Town Council decided Thursday night that $66,250 is a fair price for a 1.7-acre parcel of land near the post office and agreed to purchase it for a park.

The property had been declared surplus by the Ross Valley Flood lood Control Zone.

Mayor Frederick S. Allen said an independent appraisal had shown "there was nothing wrong" with the price the county had put on the parcel.

The property has been discussed as a possible site for a tennis court, but Allen and other councilmen assured neighbors who objected that no decision had been made yet on the exact use of the property.

He also told them that the "alternative" to turning the land into a park is to see it used for 11 rental units on the Kentfield side of the property and one residence on the Ross side.

The council agreed to try to work out a deal with the county to pay for the property over a two-year period, using federal revenue sharing funds.

The council also took a brief look at the proposed $359,675 budget for 1973-74 and tentatively accepted it. Mayor Allen set another meeting for 8 p.m. next Thursday in the town hall to adopt the budget and set the tax rate.

The budget, while higher than last year's spending program of $330,542, is expected to allow the tax rate to drop from $1.83 per $100 assessed valuation to $1.75.

The Ross Town Council Also:

HILLSIDE — Granted Roger and Peggy Dillan permission to build a residence on a hillside lot at Southwood Avenue and Ivy Drive over the objections of some neighbors who feared water runoff.

HOUSE — Learned from attorney Blackie Burak that a house at 16 Glenwood Avenue, formerly used as a branch of the communal More House, now is empty and is to be rented to a single family.

DOGS — Tabled discussion of a tougher antidog ordinance after Councilman Roy Farrington Jones said "no one moved to Ross for that."

PERMIT — Granted Joseph Filipelli of 28 Southwood Avenue permission to enclose two porches, add a deck and carport to his house and to use a detached barn as a guest cottage or servant's quarters.

Two Killed As Planes Collide

CASTROVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Two military training planes trying to land at the same time bumped into each other Thursday, killing a Vietnamese trainee and his instructor.

One T41 trainer crashed and the other landed safely.

Neither of the victims was identified.

Strict Grooming

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — The Nevada State Prison has dropped its strict grooming standards for prisoners in favor of hair regulations more "in keeping with the times."

Sergeant Is Killed In Car Crash

T/Sgt. Donald Ellsworth Paugh, 38, of 1165 San Jose Boulevard, Novato, was pronounced dead on arrival at Sonoma Valley Hospital.

The California Highway Patrol said the accident occurred at 2:05 a.m. when his car drifted off the road and struck a tree. Officers said he may have fallen asleep at the wheel.

Doctor Suggests Recycled Bodies

LONDON (UPI) — A British doctor and conservationist said Thursday that bodies should not be buried or cremated, but instead should be reprocessed with sewage to make fertilizer and fuel.

"We do not burn sewage. Why burn the dead?" Dr. S.L. Henderson Smith said in a letter to the magazine World Medicine.

Most people, he said, have a Victorian attitude to death and are too squeamish to face the facts. But he said a new approach to the disposal of bodies could provide useful fertilizer and even help solve the world fuel crisis.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, clean air.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Bread Hike

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Town Talk Baking Co. and Weber Baking Co. have announced 2-cent-a-loaf bread price hikes to offset higher costs of ingredients.

Lowly Catfish Assuming Role In California Dining

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The ugly, whiskered catfish, introduced into California waters in 1874, has reached a new peak of popularity.

Beef shortages and threats of soaring prices have turned the consumer to possible new meat substitutes and leading the list, according to the state Department of Fish and Game, is the catfish.

Ralph "Catfish" Young, spokesman for the department who works out of Long Beach, attributes the new, surging interest in catfish to its easy catchability and wide availability across the state.

The state spent about $275,000 in catfish programs last year, stocking Southern California waters with half a million, yearling fish. Smaller ones also were planted throughout Northern and Central California.

"There is a tremendous interest in catfish," Young said. "We've had quite a few inquiries about where to catch them and requests for a free catfish recipe booklet are running about 300 a day."

Young advises that the catfish, distinguished from other fish by its smooth, scaleless body and eight long whiskers, can be taken on ordinary or even the crudest of tackle. He suggests such baits as mackerel, live bluegills, minnows, crayfish, clams, "in fact they seem to like something that smells a bit. They really go for odors."

The catfish, Young adds, is "very sensitive to vibrations and that type of thing. They seem to hear noises. You've got to be very, very quiet and very, very patient. Patience is the essence."

Young, who has tried most of the 21 recipes he helped compile in the booklet (available by writing the department at 350 Golden Shore, Long Beach, Calif. 90802), calls the catfish "one of the best tasting I've ever eaten. It has a chickenish texture and it's rather delicate. I think it's very delicious. I like fish and I think it's one of the best."

The ingredients for Mother Hubbard's Secret are: 3 pounds skinned catfish fillets, 1 gallon water, 1 cup salt, ½ cup beer or ale, ½ cup prepared mustard, 2 cloves finely minced garlic, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ¼ teaspoon liquid hot pepper sauce, ½ cup toasted sesame seeds and 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and paprika.

To put it all together add salt to water and stir until dissolved. Pour brine over fish and let stand for 30 minutes. Remove fish from brine and dry. Combine beer, mustard, garlic, Worcestershire sauce, liquid hot pepper sauce, ¼ cup sesame seeds and parsley. dip fish in mustard mixture and sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup sesame seeds and paprika. Place on well greased grill inside smoke oven. Cook in a very slow oven at 250 degrees for one hour or until fish flakes easly when tested with a fork. Serve with hot biscuits. Serves six or more.

The ingredients for the Colonel's Favorite are:

2 pounds catfish steaks, ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, 2 cups cooked rice, 2 tablespoons grated onion, ½ teaspoon curry powder, 5 thin lemon slices, ¼ cup butter or margarine and chopped parsley.

To put it all together cut the fish into serving size portions place in a well greased baking dish 13-by-9 by 2 inches. Sprinkle fish with salt and pepper. Combine rice, onion, and curry powder and spread over fish. Top with lemon slices and dot with butter. Cover. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for 25 to 35 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove cover the last few minutes of cooking to allow for slight browning. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves six.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Mass Seafood Poisoning Can Be Frightening Aboard Ship

We know what happened recently when food poisoning broke out on a cruise ship. Before World War II, a similar outbreak occurred on one of our Navy cruisers. The ship was in the English Channel when more than half the crew developed nausea, vomiting, abdominal cramps, and severe diarrhea.

There were not enough heads or hospital facilities to handle the emergency. Since it was a nice, warm, sunny day, the victims were helped to the deck where they could lie down and receive medication as needed.

IT WAS A MESS, but there was nothing else to do. At the height of the emergency, the men were helpless due to severe prostration and dehydration. Had we been at war, the cruiser would have been at the mercy of the enemy.

The incidents were recalled when I read about an epidemic of ciguatera poisoning that developed in 24 or 25 crew members aboard a Brazilian cargo ship bound for Mobile, Ala.

This is one of the most common forms of fish poisoning in Caribbean waters. Oddly, it is caused by fish that are considered excellent foods elsewhere. The list includes sea bass, grouper, barracuda, and snapper. It is not known why these fish are toxic after living in certain waters.

ACCORDING TO the report, symptoms developed from 30 minutes to six hours after lunch. The victims developed severe prostration, vomiting, dizziness, muscle aching, and joint pains in the extremities. Tingling and burning of the tongue, dryness of the mouth, abdominal pain, and profuse watery diarrhea also ensued.

The toxic material in the fish also affected the nervous system, because some developed numbness around the eyes and seven had brief periods of transient blindness, or blurred vision. When the ship arrived in Mobile, 20 of the crew members were hospitalized. All recovered within four days.

The lunch consisted of barracuda stew with cocoa, beans, rice, soup, and bread and butter. The only person who did not get sick was a crewman who had not eaten the stew.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael 94902.

NOT SENILE

E.D.P. writes: I have always tried to be accurate in my spelling, but in the last few days I have noticed that I make mistakes which I keep correcting. I am 82. Is this due to incipient senility, which causes a certain amount of disorientation?

REPLY

Changes along this line may stem from tiny strokes, but this may go on for decades before senility sets in. Incidentally, if your spelling of incipient and disorientation is any indication of mental alertness, I don't think you have anything to worry about.

CANCER WEIGHT LOSS

G.S. writes: Why do cancer victims lose so much weight?

REPLY

Some lose weight because the tumor interferes with the absorption or digestion of food. Others, because the malignancy is painful or has a toxic effect on the body that interferes with appetite.

FIBROIDS, INFERTILITY

Mrs. H. writes: Could a fibroid tumor of the uterus prevent a woman from becoming pregnant?

REPLY

Yes, especially if the inward tumor protrudes into the cavity of the uterus.

PROTECTED GRAFTED SKIN

B. M. writes: Several years ago I burned my arms and had to have skin grafts. The doctor tells me I shouldn't get the area sunburned, as this might cause cancer. Is he correct?

REPLY

Yes. Skin that has been damaged, especially by burns, is more susceptible to cancer due to sunlight.

THE SMOG CRISIS

Expert Says Statesman Needed

The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

PASADENA — Just a hint of that old Dutch accent creeps in as Arie Jan Haagen-Smit explains, cajoles, reminisces, and predicts.

As usual, he's talking smog, discussing the long, challenging, and frustrating battle he has waged against air pollution — and the gestures flow with the words.

Dr. Haagen-Smit, who recently amnounced his retirement as chairman of California's pioneering Air Resources Board, put it in these words:

"I never was lobbying for the job I had. So now I can go to the Governor (Ronald Reagan) and say the job needs a different kind of general — someone with different qualifications.

"Now we need a statesman, someone who can get all the important forces to do something they don't really want to do."

A professor emeritus of bio-organic chemistry, Dr. Haagen-Smit has been associated with California Institute of Technology since 1937. His background in research — in quest of plant substances called essential (odorous) oils — led him, fortuitously, into the struggle against smog.

The Netherlands-born chemist was the first to correctly point out the true nature and source for the Los Angeles area's notorious photo-chemical smog. His discovery took place immediately after World War II.

"I was on a scientific committee of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce," he said. "We discussed the problem of plant damage, as requested by the chamber's agriculture committee."

After months of discussion, Dr. Haagen-Smit says, "I finally wrote a little letter asking: 'If we want to know what's in the air, why don't we measure it?' Since nobody did it, and since I'd just finished a project on pineapple odor and had all this equipment stored, I did it.

"What I got was honest-to-goodness condensed smog. It turned out to be an abundant amount of hydrocarbon materials that could only have come from gasoline. So I drew the conclusion that this came from gasoline by oxidation in air.

"I also found high-oxidant, high-ozone content. At first, I didn't want to believe this, since the books say ozone is absent from cities."

However, an experiment prompted by a colleague, Dr. E. C. Bradley, retired vice-president for chemical research of the Union Rubber Co., clinched it.

"I showed him my work," Dr. Haagen-Smit said. "Then we put some experimental rubber out in the sunlight and his rubber went to pot.

"I had guessed right. It was a very satisfying thing, even though I didn't particularly want to publish it. I didn't want to be drawn into this (smog) thing. It wasn't my field, and I have a strong sense of who's competent and who isn't. I'd already marched a little out of my field by getting into photochemistry."

What Dr. Haagen-Smit had discovered was the intricate photo-chemical reaction among pollutants that takes place to build Los Angeles' particularly unpleasant type of smog. It's a reaction series that works best in what southern California is best known for — bright, sunny days.

Soon after making this discovery, however, he was persuaded by friends and colleagues to take a leave of absence from Caltech and work solely on smog.

The result, at least early on, was best described by Dr. James Bonner, a fellow faculty member:

"One little story. When Haagy showed that it was hydrocarbons that made smog, the oil companies got together to prove that this was not true.

"They — in the form of the Western Oil & Gas Association — hired the Stanford Research Institute to prove that he was wrong. They tried to hang smog on sulfur dioxide (SQ2). SO2 was abolished from the Los Angeles Basin. Smog got worse.

"Western Oil & Gas Association flunked. Haagen-Smit received an 'A.' "

Other studies, also aimed at disproving or at least testing his ideas, finally confirmed his work, "and this was a very important point for me," Dr. Haagen-Smit says. "I was vindicated."

His entry into chemistry seems almost natural, although he said he found very little interest in the field as a student.

"I was born in Utrecht, a small town in the center of the Netherlands, where my father was chief chemist at the Royal Mint. Watching the pouring of molten gold and silver was a common occurrence, and my two sisters and I used to play hide-and-seek between stacks of gold and silver bars."

"Even though my preference was in mathematics, the job opportunities in this field were too limited and the chemical education seemed more prudent," he adds. While inorganic chemistry "didn't appeal to me, organic chemistry showed an orderly structure which I liked."

This took him into studies of plant substances, including a peculiar fatty oil from a tree that grows in Indonesia. The compounds found are related to the active principle of poison ivy, poison oak, and Chinese lacquer.

Miller Sees Trouble Ahead For 2 PGA Leaders

CLEVELAND (UPI) — If Johnny Miller is to be believed, then co-leaders Don Iverson and Al Geiberger will hit trouble today in the second round of the Professional Golfers' Association Championship.

Iverson and Geiberger, making the most of the easy conditions which prevailed Thursday morning, had hot putting rounds and finished with four-under-par 67s over the rolling 6,852-yard, par 36-35–71 Canterbury Golf Club layout.

Miller, the 26-year-old U.S. Open champion, went out late and like most of the other big names who followed, had trouble matching par on the back nine. He shot a one-over 72 after making a trio of bogeys between the 14th and 16th.

Unhappy about the way the greens played during the afternoon on Thursday, Miller said: "You watch, those guys who shot under par will have trouble when they go out late Friday.

"Hitting on the greens is like hitting on a table," Miller said. "They watered the perimeter and the front edge of the greens and I think that's unfair. That's tricking the course up."

Miller, not one given to making excuses and bucking authority, continued: "It's not fair and I don't care if the PGA knows about it."

Course Superintendent Bill Burdick rejected Miller's charge.

"There was uniform watering of the greens. It's just the wind dried out the back and higher spots," he said.

Iverson's only victory to date was in a satellite event, while the 35-year-old Geiberger has gone winless since taking the PGA in 1966.

The starting order was reversed for today's round with the low 70 and ties suriviving until Saturday's third round.

Bob Dickson, only the third man to win the U.S. and British Amateur titles in the same year, was at 69 along with Mike Hill, the tempestuous Dave's younger brother, and veteran Mason Rudolph, who came out of a sick bed to fire five straight birdies on the back nine which he completed in a four-under 31.

Tournament favorite Tom Weiskopf, who admitted to "feeling pressure," was at 70 where he was joined by former British and U.S. Open champion Tony Jacklin; '69 PGA winner Ray Floyd, and outsiders Don Bies, Gibby Gilbert and Bobby Brue, a club pro.

Two Ryder Cup players and champions in other years, Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino, buried their chances with 76s.

Weiskopf, feeling unaccustomed pressure after winning five tournaments, including the British Open, in his last nine starts, said he could have used a little help from his putter.

But generally he was satisfied with his round.

"I played excellent golf, especially early in the round, but I found the greens surprisingly slow and left a lot of putts short," he said.

Nicklaus started in great style when he canned a 40-footer at the first hole "but after that I could not get the ball close to the hole," he said.

Big Jack, who has missed out on major honors since last year's British Open, was not too discouraged with his opening round. "I like the pattern I played if not the result. I'm swinging good, something I've not done recently."

Nicklaus said he suffered several bad lies. "I landed in the rough at the par 5s and had to use four and six irons to get out. That's got to be pretty bad."

Defending champion Gary Player was unable to keep a wayward driver under control and finished with a 73 where he was joined by several others.

The 148-man field had to contend with hot, humid weather with the temperature in the 90s. A wind got up late in the afternoon and there was a threat of rain in the air when the last threesome trooped into the clubhouse, which should make conditions slightly easier today.

'WE GOT SPOILED'

Manager Fox Assesses Giants' Batting Slump

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — When a club gets only 12 runs and 31 hits in six games it shouldn't come as any surprise when four of the six decisions wind up as losses.

That's what has happened to the San Francisco Giants since last Friday, and as of the moment Manager Charlie Fox is ready to pull out his hair.

"I guess we got spoiled around here by all that hitting earlier in the season," Fox said Thursday after his Giants dropped a 5-3 decision to the streaking Montreal Expos. "Maybe we aren't as good as we looked before but we should be able to hit better than we have in the last week.

"Frankly, I don't know what to do except ride it out and hope things get better."

"With the kind of pitching we been getting lately we should have a winning streak going," Fox said. "Instead, we are going the other way. Managing is not as easy as it looks but the toughest part is when the team doesn't hit, especially a team like ours with so many good hitters on it. There are times when I feel like grabbing a bat and going up there myself, and hell I never was that good a hitter."

Mike Torrez and Mike Marshall combined to hold the Giants to seven hits—their high in a week. What hurt, though, was a bounce to short by Gary Matthews with the bases loaded and two out in the first and a strikeout by Ed Goodson in the seventh with two on and two out.

"When we were going good," Fox reminisced, "in both those situations we would have gotten a hit. The shame of it now is that our pitching is sound and most of it is going down the drain."

Two-run homers by Jim Lyttle and Ken Singleton netted the Expos, now in second place in the N.L. East, four quick runs off Giants' starter Jim Barr (9-11) and it proved too big a margin to overcome, although Don Carrithers, Jim Willoughby and Don McMahon combined to hold Montreal to two hits and one run from the third on.

Bobby Bonds hit his 31st homer and a sacrifice fly to account for two San Francisco runs and Chris Speier's single drove in the other.

The Expos move on to San Diego for a weekend series with the Padres starting tonight while the Giants host the New York Mets. Tom Seaver (13-6) pitches for New York tonight while Juan Marichal (9-7) goes for the Giants.

Saturday will be Giants-Kodak Picture Day. From 10:45 to 11:30 a.m., fans with cameras will be allowed to rim the stands around the Candlestick Park playing field to photograph Giant players who will make a complete circle of the stadium. Game time is 12:15 p.m.

The Fox-Lasorda Fight: Good For Both Giants And Dodgers

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — You wouldn't call Charlie Fox and Tom Lasorda a couple of kids. They don't exactly qualify as members of the Pepsi Generation.

You'd be more likely to call them what they are: a pair of old bucks. Certainly too old to get out there and start fighting in front of everybody the way they did last Saturday in San Francisco's Candlestick Park.

The fight they had, if you'd call it that, turned out like some baseball trades — good for both sides. To understand why, you have to know some of the background.

On Friday night, the night before Fox and Lasorda tangled, the Dodgers whipped the Giants, 3-0, on a three-hitter by Andy Messersmith.

"He has a reputation for coming too close to our hitters," says the Dodgers' coach. "Not only up here, but also down in Santo Domingo where I had a lotta Dodger players last winter. I don't know where he gets this, from (Juan) Marichal or somebody else, but I remember him doing the same thing when he was pitching for the Escogido club and I was managing Licey. Anyway, he threw a couple pitches under Messersmith's chin Friday.

Now it's a day later, Saturday.

The Giants are taking batting practice. Charlie Fox is leaning on the batting cage watching his hitters when he happens to notice Tom Lasorda walking by.

"What are you getting on my pitchers for?" says Fox.

"Because he's throwing at too many of our players," answers Lasorda, meaning Sosa.

"Don't get on him again," snaps Fox.

"I'll get on him any time I want," snaps back Lasorda.

Meanwhile, Lasorda notices Mike Sadek, one of the Giants' catchers, standing on the other side of the batting cage. Sadek is a good friend of Lasorda's even though he works for the hated Giants.

"Where were you when both teams came charging out last night?" Lasorda asks Sadek. "I was looking for you."

"Why didn't you look for me?" cuts in Fox.

"Because you're too old," says Lasorda.

"I'm still young enough to whip you real quick," Fox says.

"Then come on," says Lasorda.

Charlie Fox accepts the invitation, the two got at it for less than a minute before the whole thing is broken up and from there on the accounts of the "battle" differ.

Lasorda's version goes this way:

"I'd have to say it was a unanimous decision, three punches to none. I threw a left to the mid-section, a right cross to the head and another left to the mid-section. Charlie never touched me. Never laid a glove on me. All I was trying to do was protect my players, and I think Charlie was doing the same thing. You gotta admire him for that."

Says Fox:

"I don't agree with the way he (Lasorda) scores it. How could you judge who won or lost? It was too short a contest, all over in 30 seconds. Nothing serious."

Those last two words tell it all.

Tom Lasorda, pound for pound baseball's modest answer to George Foreman, kept his great fighting reputation intact against Charlie Fox.

Charlie Fox didn't do that badly either by taking on Lasorda. The Giants had been in a bit of a slump before the skirmish. They had dropped five on their last seven, and you'd be surprised how something like what Fox did can wake up a ball club. The Giants won Saturday's contest, 3-2, in 10 innings. Tito Fuentes' homer did it, and guess who was the winning pitcher? Elias Sosa.

If there's ever a next time though, there is something Tom Lasorda should know about Charlie Fox.

Charlie Fox went a little easy on him. He didn't show him everything he has. One of those things is a black belt.

BIG SERIES IN NEW YORK

Knowles Starts Again For A's

NEW YORK (AP) — The Oakland Athletics and New York Yankees will continue jockeying for position in their respective division races as a three-game series opens tonight.

Knowles, 4-4, will be making his third start since the thumb injury that sidelined Jim Hunter. The left-handed relief pitcher has gone 11 innings and allowed just three earned runs so far as a starter.

Hunter, 15-3, is expected to return to action next Tuesday night with a start at Boston. The A's announced earlier this week that Hunter had been placed on the disabled list retroactive to July 24, but learned Thursday such a move was prohibited.

Catcher Jose Morales, scheduled to join the A's, returned to Tucson of the Pacific Coast League when the A's learned Hunter could not be placed on the disabled list.

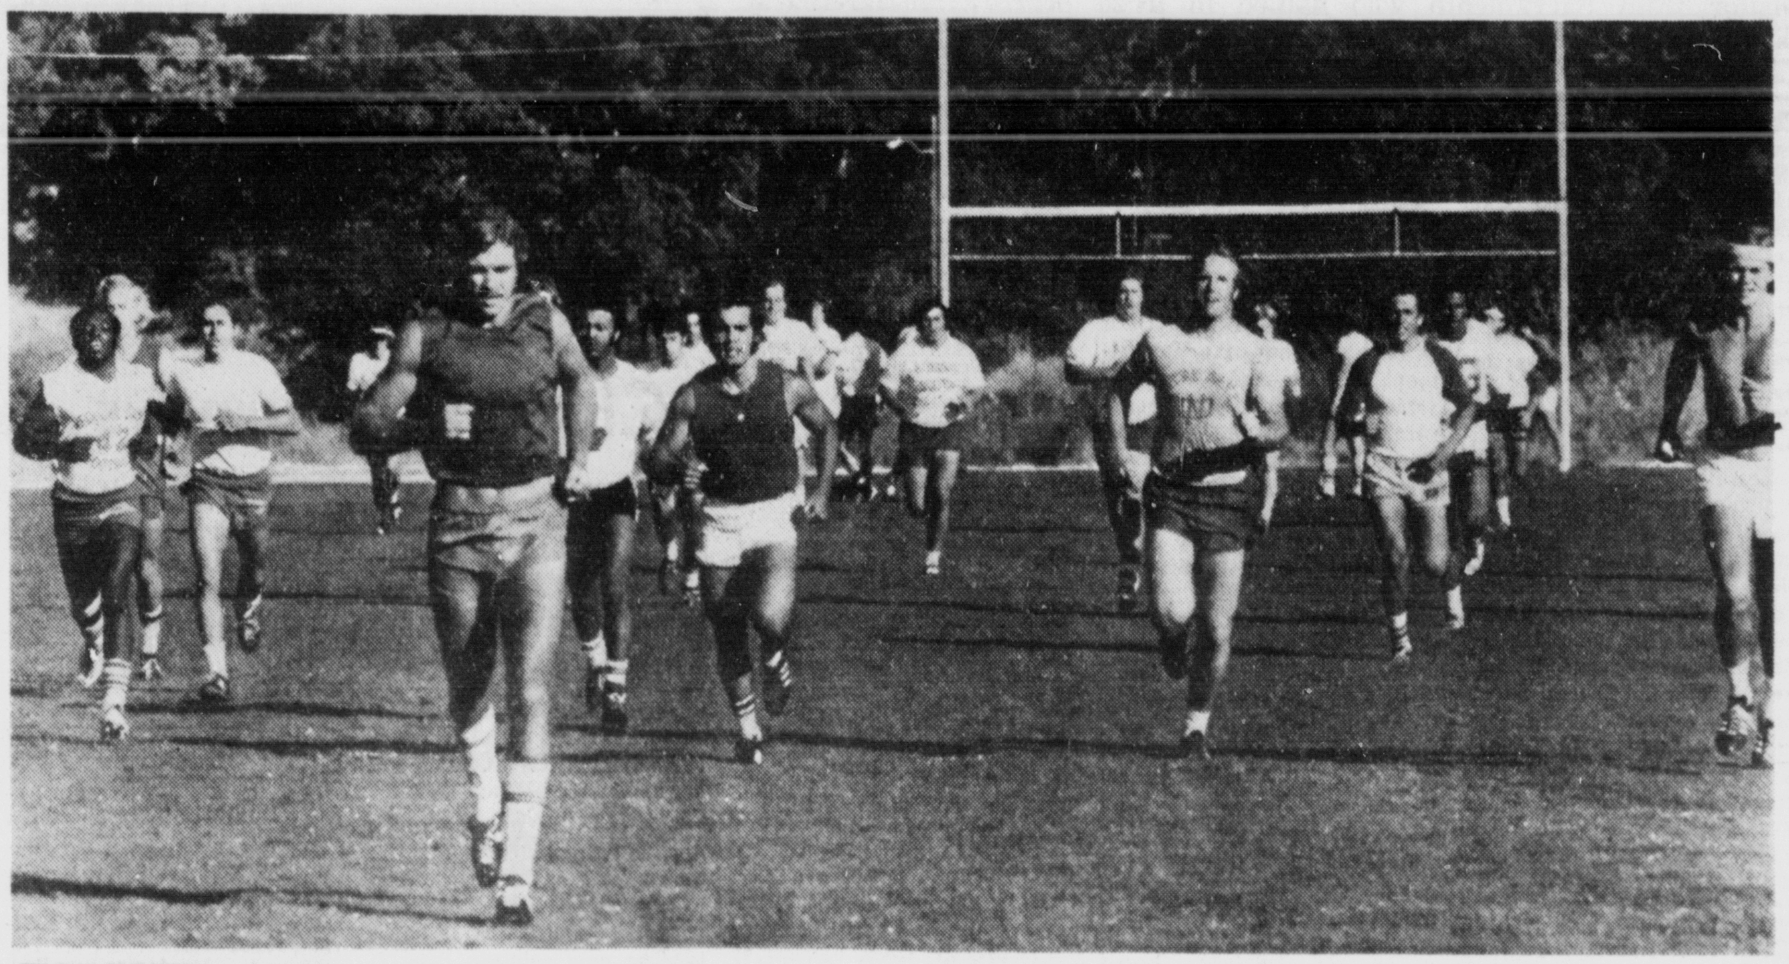
The Yankees are in third in the East, but follow division-leading Baltimore, who edged Minnesota 2-1, by only a game.



THUNDERING HERD — Members of the South all-star team ran in place to sweat off a few pounds and activate a few rusty muscles for next Saturday's Ross Valley Kiwanis Club North-South Football Game at San Rafael High School. The team, coached by Bruno Banducci of Marin Catholic and comprised of players from Marin Catholic, Drake, Redwood and Tamalpais, is working out daily at 6 p.m. at Marin Catholic.

Two Hamilton Boxers Beaten

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two Hamilton Air Force base boxers were beaten Thursday night, but the young United States national amateur team went on to defeat West Germany seven bouts to three.

As 6,125 fans at Nassau Coliseum watched, heavyweight Nick Wells of Fort Worth, Tex., was knocked out in the first round by Peter Hussing of Muehlheim, and light middleweight Jerome Bennett of Tacoma, Wash., lost a decision to Peter Spitzenberg of Essen.

The American team won four bouts by decision and three by knockout.

South '11' Takes It Easy

If everything goes according to coach Bruno Banducci's newly-conceived plan, the South team will "take it easy" up to, but not including, next Saturday.

Banducci and his squad opened drills Monday for the eighth annual Ross Valley Kiwanis North-South All-Star football game, scheduled for next Saturday at 1 p.m. at San Rafael High School.

The team consists of 25 graduated seniors from four southern Marin high schools — Drake, Tamalpais, Redwood and Marin Catholic (which Banducci coaches).

It has explosive potential on offense, and Banducci has no intention of leaving its speed and shiftiness behind it on the practice field with a series of hard workouts.

"We'll let 'em conserve energy," he said. "They're all in pretty good shape anyway, so we won't make 'em pay on the practice field."

The team is working out five days a week from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at Marin Catholic, avoiding the midday heat and allowing several of the players to continue their summer jobs. The first scrimmage probably will be held Monday or Tuesday, Banducci said.

A confessed copycat, Banducci borrowed his relaxing idea from University of Southern California coach John McKay, whose well-rested College All-Stars gave the pro champion Miami Dolphins a tough battle in a 14-3 loss last month.

Since he is not facing the Dolphins, but rather a team of graduated seniors from Novato, San Marin, San Rafael and Terra Linda high schools, Banducci expects more than a close loss. (He got that much last year, as he coached the underdog South in a 28-15 defeat.)

The core of this year's South team consists of nine players from Redwood, which tied for the Marin County Athletic League title with Terra Linda at 5-1 and had an 8-1 overall slate.

Redwood contributes three all-league offensive linemen — center Bob Fulton, guard Scott Cochrane and tackle Ken Massucco — as well as its starting tight end, Matt Gondak.

If this fierce forward wall gives time, two all-league wide receivers blessed with speed — Ken Zepponi of Drake and Dennis Morini of Tamalpais — will be able to zip downfield.

Throwing to them will be Steve Gaddis or Tim Nowell of Tamalpais or Ben Partee of Marin Catholic. Banducci has expressed confidence in all three. Nowell also was an all-league defensive back, and Partee is considered of that caliber, though he did not make all-MCAL because Marin Catholic does not belong to the league for varsity football.

The running corps is headed by all-leaguer Alvin Price of Tam, 1971 all-leaguer Mike Connor of Redwood and 1972 leading scorer Daryl Edralin of Redwood.

Connor, also an all-league defensive back two straight years, was the only player on either squad to be selected for the prestigious statewide North-South game to be staged Sunday by the Shriners.

Massucco, Zepponi and Tamalpais end Craig Marshall are recent additions to the team. Declining to play, after originally being selected, were running back Mike Shimmin and center Gerald Russell of Tam; tackle Jim Schalich, linebacker Mark Ferrua and guard Tim Huber of Marin Catholic; and tackle Chuck Hildreth of Drake. Drake runner Phil Wilkinson is working out with the team and will join the squad if another player drops out, Banducci said.

"We have depth of quality players we didn't have last year," Banducci said. "We should be able to play everyone, and everyone should be able to make a contribution and feel he is part of the team."

49ers' Pass Defense In Stern Test

KENT, Ohio (UPI) — The San Francisco pass defenders know they will get a good workout Saturday night when the 49ers meet the New York Jets at Tampa, Fla.

That's because Jets mentor Weeb Ewbank made it official Thursday that Joe Namath will start for the Jets to "get his timing down and work with the new keys we've installed."

San Francisco coach Dick Nolan has already announced that Steve Spurrier will go most of the way at quarterback for the 49ers. Spurrier has played briefly but impressively in the first two exhibition wins but admits he considers this game a key in his quest to become the top 49er signal-caller.

Wide receiver Terry Beasley, the number one draft choice of 1972 who has been hampered by injuries ever since, will make his first 1973 appearance although he will not start. He has been working out at about three-quarter speed.

The 49ers have too many running backs in camp and coach Nolan indicates he wants to look at them all in the Jets game. It is expected that 217-pound Odell Lawson will see plenty of action. Lawson was cut by New England last year, but could be a surprise and especially caught the coaches eyes when he burst for a long run during a 49er scrimmage. The prospector running attack produces very few long gallops.

PRO FOOTBALL

'Skins Test Punter Vs. Denver

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Coming off a defeat with a questionable quarterback, a running back with a troublesome reputation and the loss of the first string safety, a pro football team could hardly be described as set.

But that is in fact the case with the Washington Redskins, whose only misery seems to be getting a punter who can average more than 38 yards a kick.

The new punter, David Beverly, will get his big chance at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium before an expected sellout crowd of 53,000 tonight when the Redskins take on the Denver Broncos in a National Football League exhibition game.

The Redskins-Broncos contest kicks off the second big weekend of NFL pre-season activity with 10 more games slated for Saturday night and one each on Sunday and Monday nights.

The New England Patriots play host to the New York Giants Sunday night and Kansas City entertains Detroit Monday night.

Beverly, who boomed the football long and high for Auburn University, has a chance to be the only rookie that coach George Allen may keep on the Redskins' squad, which is deep in veterans and former all-pros.

When Rosey Taylor, the safety on last season's National Football Conference championship team, fractured his elbow in last week's 17-14 loss to the Detroit Lions, it could have been tragic.

But Allen had traded over the winter for Ken Houston, all-pro safety last season for the Houston Oilers. Houston had been playing on the second team, but will move into the lineup tonight.

And Duane Thomas, who had refused to play in 1972 for Dallas, New England and San Diego, is slated to start at running back for Washington. A change has come over Thomas who is shucking his loner image by clapping encouragement to his teammates of three weeks and is even beginning to chatter a bit.

Finally, quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, one of the NFL's all-time passing leaders, is recovering from an Achilles tendon injury that sidelined him for most of the previous season. Jurgensen will quarterback the Redskins in the second half after Billy Kilmer runs the club in the first half.

The Broncos, in their first start of the exhibition season will rely on the running of Floyd Little, two-time rushing leader of the American Football Conference, and the passing of Charley Johnson, who set a Denver completion record last year.

In other games, SMB Flyers defeated Denny's Mobile 8-3, and KFC trounced Perry's 18-4.

FISH AND GAME

Weather Woes For Fish Derby

The Loch Lomond Live Bait Barge striper derby has been going for a week now, but the weather and the fish weren't too cooperative until Thursday morning.

Before that, it was windy and rough, but the weather broke Thursday and many anglers returned with limits, including Bob Armitage, a visitor from Sacramento who hauled in a 26 pound, two-ouncer to take the lead in the derby.

Larry Mah and Grant Howe, two of the local pros, while fishing together, took five bass casting jet-tailed jigs at The Brothers last Sunday. Larry had a 23½ pounder and Grant took one weighing 21½, Jim LeCzel of Corte Madera caught a 33 pounder drifting a shiner at The Brothers, but it was the day before the derby started. This feat, at least shows that there are some big fish out there. Trolling has been slow — almost nil, even by the champs.

Best fishing has been by drifting shiners or by plugging with lures. Before Thursday, according to Keith Fraser of the bait shop, 70 anglers have signed up, and there are just six fish logged with the smallest fish weighing just six pounds. There are 10 prizes, plus four weekly prizes, plus four trophies and all the prizes are first class. You'd better get out there quick; first prize is a 12-foot Trailerboat Special with a $229 value.

SALMON FISHING at California City has had a little flurry too. Tuesday, Tommie Miller and his dad of San Rafael took two, and saw six others landed. It's probably worth a go, and should improve through September.

THE NAME of Ray C. Albertson of Alturas was the first of 385 drawn as successful applicants for permits for the special buck antelope hunt, Aug. 27-Sept. 3, in Modoc, Lassen, Shasta and Siskiyou counties, the Department of Fish and Game announced.

Albertson was one of 11,262 applicants for the permits. The number of applicants set a new record for the 10 years the hunts have been held. The previous record was 8,271 applicants who filed in 1971. Notification to the other successful applicants is in the mail.

Persons whose names were drawn have only to Aug. 14 to claim their permits, said James Christopher, Department of Fish and Game license chief. Unclaimed permits will go to alternates.

Christopher said permits will be issued to the successful applicants after paying the $15 fee.

FOR THE SECOND time within a month, the Department of Fish and Game has removed a depredating mountain lion from the Maxwell Keith ranch in the Adelaide area west of Paso Robles, San Luis Obispo County.

The second lion, an adult male like the first one, was captured after killing eight sheep, five of them registered, on the ranch in Dover Canyon.

Fish and Game personnel tagged the lion and fitted it with a radio collar so that its movements could be followed and released it in a remote location on Los Padres National Forest.

Late last month trackers caught up with a depredating mountain lion that had killed five and possibly six sheep on the same ranch. This animal was moved to a Placer County location.

Biologists with the Fish and Game said the two animals were possibly litter mates, which would account for their presence in the same area. Adult lions generally roam individual areas.

The location of the kills is about 20 miles south of the area the Fish and Game Department has selected for an intensive two-year study of mountain lions that is only now getting under way. Objectives of the study are to refine lion population estimates and to gather information for a management program.

Incidentally, the mountain lion survey being conducted throughout the state has logged the number of lions in Marin County at approximately "one".

Tillie Seeks 1st Golf Tourney Win

(First in a series)

Tille Gondak will be playing on her home golf course in the sixth annual Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions next Friday at 9 a.m., but she believes this could be a disadvantage.

"This can be an adverse force, because I know where all the trouble is," she said referring to the Marin Country Club course in Novato. "And I've been in trouble there, too."

The eight-handicapper also sees the advantages of being on the home course, but "it could work against you because others expect you to do well there."

Mrs. Gondak, women's club champion of Marin Country Club five of the last seven years, believes Nancy Gapinski and Laura Cann will be the players to beat.

Mesdames Cann and Gapinski represent the Meadow Club near Fairfax and San Geronimo National Golf Club, respectively. Others in the field are: defending champion Cookie Baer of Peacock Gap, Virginia May of Indian Valley and Terry Nichols of Mill Valley. They will negotiate 18 holes of scratch medal play.

Mrs. Gondak, a long-ball hitter, has been playing on Tuesdays and Thursdays to tone up her game. She also tees off on Sundays with her husband, Charles, a Pacific Telephone employee in San Francisco. Mrs. Gondak has three children: Cris, 23, Ralph, 20, and Matt, 18.

Wells Falters In Raider Trial

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — Former Oakland wide receiver Warren Wells, cut from the club after personal and legal troubles, apparently was disappointing in a workout with the team recently.

"Considering all that Warren did for us, we'll take another look," said a Raider official, "but it's doubtful he'll be brought to camp.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Royals Have Wonderful Dreams

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Surprise contenders like the Kansas City Royals begin to dream wonderful dreams when they see fellows like Hal McRae win key games.

It was like that for the "Miracle Mets" of 1969 when a borderline major league like Ron Swoboda won many a game in the stretch run of the National League race and then played a brilliant world series against the Baltimore Orioles.

McRae and Swoboda are similar in that they have known weaknesses which may mean they will spend their entire careers as part-time players. Swoboda was farmed to the International League only Wednesday by the New York Yankees but will be recalled in September for the stretch run. Guys like McRae and Swoboda have a way of playing their best when everybody else is uptight.

McRae, acquired from the Cincinnati Reds last winter, drove in two runs with a triple and a homer and made a game-saving catch in the sixth inning Thursday night as the Royals beat the Boston Red Sox, 3-2. The victory gave the Royals a one-game lead over the idle Oakland A's in the American League's Western Division.

The Baltimore Orioles defeated the Minnesota Twins, 2-1, and took over first place in the east, the Chicago White Sox shaded the Detroit Tigers, 5-4, and the Milwaukee Brewers nipped the California Angels, 6-5, in other AL games.

National League scores were Montreal 5 San Francisco 3, Atlanta 8 St. Louis 6, Los Angeles 1 New York 0 and San Diego 10 Philadelphia 9 in 11 innings.

McRae is hitting .205 for the season but has 19 hits in his last 59 at bats for a .322 average and says he's hitting better "because I've changed my stance."

McRae and other guys on the bench have been contributing in the last three weeks," said manager Jack McKeon. "We're not really centering on one guy to do the work. When everybody gets involved and starts doing his thing, that's the sign of a championship team."

McRae tripled home a run and scored on Rick Reichardt's sacrifice fly in the second inning and opened the fourth inning with his fourth homer of the season. He saved the game in the sixth when he made a leaping stab against the right field wall of a drive by Orlando Cepeda with two out and two on. Steve Busby got credit for the win with Doug Bird pitching the last 1⅓ innings for his ninth save.

Bill Lee (12-7) took the loss. He pitched eight innings, surrendering three runs on seven hits while walking three and striking out one. The Terra Linda left-hander failed for the fifth time to win his 13th game.

Mike Cuellar pitched a six-hitter and struck out 10, raising his record to 9-12 for the Orioles, who dealt the Twins' Bert Blyleven his 11th loss against 14 wins.

Bill Sharp's third homer of the season came in the ninth inning and gave White Sox relief star Cy Acosta his seventh win while tagging 18-game winner Joe Coleman of the Tigers with his ninth defeat.

Dave May's two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth lifted the Brewers to their win over the Angels.

GOLF NOTES

Players Set For Champs Tourneys

Golf tournament action in Marin County was minimal last week as fairway followers and participants geared for the men's and women's Tournaments of Champions.

The highlight of the golfing week found Mrs. James Moore winning the Malcolm Brown Trophy last Friday at Mill Valley Municipal Golf Course. She carded an 86-24—62.

But the big news centers around preparations for the Tournament of Champions. The women play next Friday, 9 a.m. at Marin Country Club in Novato. The men compete Sunday, Aug. 19 at 8 a.m. at Indian Valley.

Both affairs promised to be hotly contested, particularly the women's. Defending champion Cookie Baer of Peacock Gap in San Rafael faces Tillie Gondak of Marin County Club in Novato, Nancy Gapinski of San Geronimo National, Laura Cann of Meadow Club near Fairfax, Virginia May of Indian Valley, and Terry Nichols of Mill Valley.

The gals, who were out practicing this week on Marin fairways, believe that Mrs. Baer played far better than her 14 handicap indicated. Her rivals are determined to crown a new champion. Likely candidates are Mesdames Gondak, Cann, May and Gapinski. And some say to watch out for Mrs. Nichols — an aggressive player with much determination.

The men's affair seems simpler to analyze. The majority of players tab Mat Palacio Jr. of Marin Country Club. He brings a two-handicap into play — and a tourney title in his only previous T of C participation in 1971.

Walton Nearly Dies From A Bee Sting

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES — All-American basketball center Bill Walton of UCLA suffered a near fatal bumblebee sting last week, the UCLA Daily Bruin reported Thursday.

Walton's older brother Bruce, rookie offensive tackle training with the Dallas Cowboys at Thousand Oaks, told the newspaper: "Bill was riding his bike and got stung by a bee. He didn't know he was allergic to bees. He rode home and collapsed. He went to the doctor who gave him an immediate shot.

"The doctor told him if he hadn't acted quickly it could have proven fatal.

Bruce also said Bill will have to carry a kit with an antidote in case of another bee sting, the newspaper said.

"If he gets stung by a bee, he knows he'll be able to take a pill or a shot," Bruce said.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Desperate Woman Gets Good News

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. You have suggested in your column that a person in my situation should seek the advice of an investment counselor. I have tried to find one to no avail. After my husband was killed 5 years ago, I invested the $80,000 in insurance money very unwisely I'm afraid. Because I desperately need additional income I took $10,000 of the capital recently. My Social Security amounts to less than $200 monthly and I need $500 per month to live. Would you please review my holdings and tell me how to increase my income? — F.S.

A. Of the $70,000 of your original capital you now have a portfolio worth $61,500 which returns about $2,700 annually or 4.5 per cent. With a few adjustments this rate of return could be increased to 7.8 per cent. In order to meet your living expenses your capital must return over 6 per cent. Since your bonds and certificates of deposit meet this requirement, I would recommend leaving these investments intact.

The highest rate of return on the common stock and mutual fund portion of your portfolio is from U.S. Fidelity & Guaranty at 5.8 per cent. Two of your holdings pay no dividend, the remaining six issues yield less than 4.0 per cent currently. Thus the common stocks and funds should be liquidated and the proceeds of approximately $37,000 reinvested for income. Approximately one-third of this capital should be placed in common stock, the remainder divided between two good quality bond issues.

The specific common stock issues are 100 Chemical New York Corp. (NYSE), 200 Larwin Mortgage Investors (NYSE) and 100 Southern Pacific (NYSE). 12M of Avco Financial Services 9¼s of 1989 and 11M of Pacific Telephone & Telegraph 9⅛s of 2004 round out your portfolio. These bonds, which are rated A and AA respectively, have adequate interest coverage. The $4,798 in interest and dividends on this adjusted portfolio will increase your monthly income by $400. Together with the $170 in Social Security this will provide $570 per month, more than enough to meet your living expenses.

Dividend Increase

TORRANCE — The board of directors of Standard Brands Paint Company have voted an increase in the quarterly cash dividend rate on the common stock. The directors announced a quarterly cash dividend of 6¼ cents per share, paid Aug. 6, 1973, to shareholders of record.

Prime Rate News Cuts Into Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the prime rate rising again to a new high level, investors retreated nervously to the sidelines and stock prices fell sharply in light trading today on the New York Stock Exchange.

First National City Bank, the second largest bank in the nation, raised its prime rate to 9 ¼ per cent from 9 per cent today and it was expected other banks would follow. Investors have been concerned recently by the climbing rates.

There was little else in the news background to influence the market which has been lethargic and lower most of the week.

L'Ark Will Open Next Month Featuring Intricate Carvings

L'Ark, a new gift shop featuring carved animals of all sizes and shapes, will open next month at 339 San Anselmo Avenue, next to San Anselmo Hotel.

Owner of the shop will be Pauline Abramson of Larkspur, who returned from a one-year tour of the world during which she and her husband collected unique and rare items from countries like Russia, Japan and Thailand. Her husband, Lewis Abramson, who has been dealing in investments, will be helping her operate the store.

"We'll have more than 600 items, all original things that you would not usually find in other shops," said Mrs. Abramson. Her animal motif gifts will range from delicate butterflies in limoges china to larger pieces of carved wood.

L'Ark will carry carved animals from Russia and Japan, batiks from Thailand, original items like weather vanes, Italian pottery, and many other hand-made pieces. The store will have a children's corner with old fashioned rocking horses, and patchwork quilts with animals on them.

L'Ark will have animal crackers in a cookie jar for the children, and will serve cold duck to customers on Fridays.

World's best?

BMW Bavaria.

This may be the most desired, most sought after, most coveted car in America, and understandably so. Because the new Bavaria is not only elegant. It's superbly engineered. And it gives you a kind of driving "lift" like nothing you've ever known before. The car is prestigious. True. Luxurious. Absolutely. But above all, this car is built for driving pleasure on the open road. Its strong new 3-liter engine makes it the most nimble, responsive car you may ever have driven. So, if you're interested in a German luxury car, don't fail to give yourself a chance to test the one that's so much fun to drive. World's best? It may very well be.

Contradictory Actions By Transit District

Marin County Transit District directors (who double as county supervisors) decided this week to try to increase the district's tax rate to 25 cents per $100 accessed valuation next year — five times the present limit.

That levy, we understand, would product about $2 million per year to underwrite bus transit within Marin which supplements the commute service of the Golden Gate Bridge District. The bridge district runs the local Marin buses under contract with the transit district.

Two million dollars does not sound like an excessive amount to subsidize mass transit. Many millions have been spent in building roads which directly or indirectly subsidize bus and truck lines and private automobile owners.

BUT AT the same meeting, the directors took an opposite tack. While voting to up the tax rate to provide a better transit system, they also voted to meantime cut back on the existing system.

This will be done by eliminating some of the less-used bus schedules. No route will be eliminated entirely, but service will be less frequent on some and early morning and late evening runs will be cut off from others.

Cutting the service while proposing to increase the tax rate to enlarge service sounds rather self-contradictory.

The explanation given is that present bus patronage falls too far short of the cost of operating the in-county buses. The 5-cent tax rate fails to make up the loss. The district is using up a reserve fund it built up for several years while it was only a "paper district."

Even the reduced service, according to Ray W. Foreaker, transit district manager (who doubles as county director of public works), will require using some of the reserve fund. It will, he said, leave a reserve of just under $100,000 at the end of the fiscal year. He figures that amount of reserve is necessary.

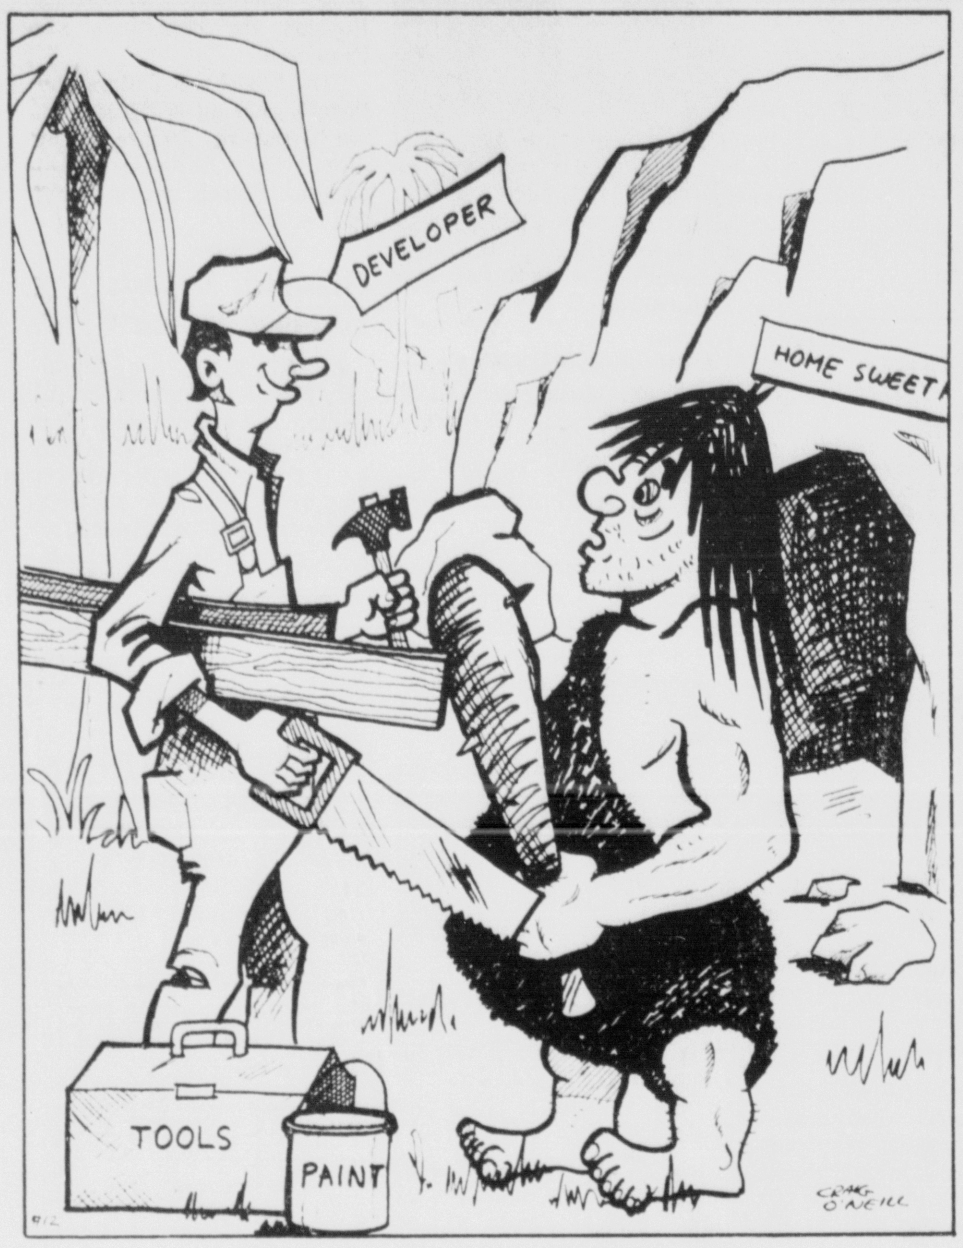
THE FLAW in this arrangement is that, by reducing service, the transit district will drive people away from bus use — exactly the opposit of the its purpose.

The fact that a particular route at a particular time of day is not now drawing many riders may mean that it is not needed. On the other hand, it may mean simply that existence of the service is not understood widely enough.

The transit district has done little to promote bus use within the county, although the bridge district has done a good job of promoting commute bus use. The transit district has not even posted schedules at bus stops.

Maybe the trouble is that neither the supervisors (who double as transit directors) nor the public works director (who doubles as transit manager) know a great deal about mass transit operations.

Marin County Transit District should make every effort to promote more use of buses. Cutting the existing service is not likely to promote more use.



"But I like things the way they are."

No Need For Puzzlement To Exist Over Responsibility For Watergate

WASHINGTON — In the play "Anna and the King of Siam," the King is always remarking, "It's a puzzlement!"

In the witness box before the Ervin committee, H.R. Haldeman ended his testimony by saying, as if brooding aloud, that as of that moment he couldn't see how Watergate came into being or where the responsibility for it must lie.

It really is not that puzzling. The evidence on the public record already seems sufficient to show where in four concrete instances the Watergate burglary, the psychiatrist's office break-in and, what is even worse, the White House coverup could have been stopped.

While it may not yet be possible to see where the collective crimes of Watergate started, it is possible to see where it could have been stopped — if those who had the knowledge and power to stop them had acted faithfully, fearlessly and honorably.

HERE ARE THE FOUR instances in which those with great power close to the President could have said "no" and the Watergate monster would almost certainly have been sidetracked — instead of saying "yes," in the wake of which so much evil and harm to the presidency flowed.

1. — When Atty. Gen. John Mitchell failed to instantly fire G. Gordon Liddy — an employee on the staff of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President — when Liddy unfolded his plan to burglarize and bug Democratic National Committee headquarters — even after, as Mitchell claimed, he had twice previously rejected Liddy's plan. If Mitchell testified truthfully, hadn't Liddy then and thereby proved to be unreliable and unwilling to follow the orders of the attorney general?

2. — When John D. Ehrlichman, after learning of the unauthorized Liddy-Hunt break-in of the Los Angeles office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, failed to bring about their dismissal. There was ample cause for it. These men were then employees at the White House. Ehrlichman testified that the break-in was not authorized. Dr. Fielding, the psychiatrist, was not charged with violating national security or any other crime. He had stolen no classified papers, but Liddy and Hunt broke into his office to steal his classified papers — papers professionally private between doctor and patient.

AFTER THESE TWO failures to act decisively, the Watergate monster was on the loose. These were two crucial turning points.

3. — But there was another crossing at which the worst consequences to the President and to the nation could have been halted. To me the coverup on the part of officials of the administration and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President was worse than the Watergate offenses themselves. John Mitchell concluded that it was better to cover up everything he knew about the Watergate offenses than to face them promptly, cleanly and openly because doing so might hurt Richard Nixon's presidential campaign. And in the end, the presidency and the nation and the quality of the democratic process were grievously wounded.

4. — The worst could have been averted at one more point. Mitchell testified that he kept President Nixon in the dark before the election for political reasons, and after the election for fear that Mr. Nixon would act too decisively; that is, as he said, for fear the President "would lower the boom." He left me with the impression that he thought that would be a mess. Mr. Mitchell's coverup led to a worse mess.

I am not suggesting that this is all there is to Watergate. But I am suggesting that there is an answer to Mr. Haldeman's puzzlement about the origins of Watergate and at least where much responsibility for it lies.

The Siege Of Mason's Neck, Habitat Of National Bird

WASHINGTON — Corregidor, Leningrad, Cassino and Khe Sanh have nothing on Mason's Neck. It has been under seige longer than any of them. It has been shaken, but never fallen. Now it is under assault again, and this could be the worst.

Mason's Neck is a peninsula that juts into the Potomac River barely 20 miles below Washington, within view of Mount Vernon. It is the last holdout anywhere near the nation's capital of the nation's endangered symbol, the American bald eagle. And that is the kind of information that provokes an eloquent shrug from Virginia authorities who want to build an airport nearby.

Repeatedly over the past decade, residents of the area have combined to stave off business interests pressuring the relatively undisturbed backwater. One developer wanted to convert the neck into a ready-made city of 20,000 persons.

The area's residents formed a committee and sought help. National organizations threw their influence and more importantly their assets behind the preservation effort. The Nature Conservancy produced $5.9 million to hold over 900 acres of marsh and forest until a series of connecting parks, historical sites and wildlife refuges could be linked together to keep the neck unviolated.

Then when the concerned groups sighed at what seemed victory, another attack came from the river side, where Maryland dredgers wanted to work close to the Virginia shore. That would have ruined the great marsh around which the eagles breed. The dredgers were turned back, too, after the alarm was sounded. The eagles seemed safe for awhile.

But such victories never last long. That was two-and-one-half years ago.

The other side is at it again, this time in the persons of Virginia state airport officials and the United States Army. The state officials would like to build a major airport for private and business planes on the property of Fort Belvoir, taking some of the load off Washington National Airport. A projected 400 jet and propeller flights a day would use the runway, plotted to run inland off a cover barely a quarter-mile from the eagle sanctuary.

Fort Belvoir, headquarters of the Army Engineers, already has one airport about a mile away, the other side of U.S. Route 1. Its approaches run over Army property, rather than the neck. But apparently there is no thought of using it for the private air traffic outlet.

In this case, as in so many, plans have tiptoed close to the execution stage before the public was let in on them.

Meanwhile the state has been negotiating with the Army for final permission to proceed — and, unfortunately, Gov. Linwood Holton is an old friend of Mr. Nixon who has diligently preserved that goodwill in hopes of a federal appointment when his term in Richmond expires. Thus the attackers are wielding a powerful new weapon this time.

The siege of Mason's Neck is of concern to the whole country, if only because it involves the national capital and the national bird. Further, if the sanctuary is breached by this attack, it will be ironic — and instructive to all — that it finally fell not to the feared private developers, but to a sneak attack from a combination of state and federal power that should have been arrayed in its protection.

Wheels For Marin Appreciates Support

The staff of Wheels for Marin would like to express our genuine appreciation for the excellent story Fred Strebeigh did on Whistlestop Wheels in the July 31 Independent-Journal.

It was another example of the great supportive help the I-J has given to the transportation programs: Whistlestop for Seniors, and Wheels for Marin serving the ill and the handicapped, now merged into Whistlestop Wheels.

Without this kind of support and the present participation of Red Cross, Easter Seal Society, Zonta International, as well as the many organizations and individuals who have contributed so much over the years, our programs could not have existed.

These programs are filling a great need in Marin, and are being looked to as models across the state.

We hope to see you and all your readers at the Whistlestop Wheels bike swap on Sept. 22, at College of Marin.

Chavez Supporter Disputes Editorial

I feel called upon to take issue with your Aug. 3 editorial on the farm workers' strike.

You claim that the Teamsters — United Farm Workers fight is "simply a jurisdictional dispute." But the California Supreme Court has recently ruled differently, saying that the Teamsters are working as allies of the growers.

You claim that the UFW organizing campaign "was and is to benefit union treasuries." But under UFW contracts wages have gone up, the farm workers have achieved job security, the use of pesticides has been strictly controlled, and some of the money from the union treasury has gone to finance construction of four medical clinics to aid a people whose life-expectancy is 30 years less than the average in America.

Finally, you claim that the UFW is opposed to secret-ballot elections for union representation, and cite their campaign against Proposition 22 last November. Proposition 22 would have done a lot of things, but it would not have provided for fair or effective union representation, because it would have prevented most workers from participating in elections and prohibited strikes during the harvest season.

Cesar Chavez is not afraid of honest elections; thousands of his supporters are willing to go to jail for the UFW. Nobody has risked jail for Frank Fitzsimmons' Teamsters.

New FDA Regulations Harmful To People

Along with a million other concerned people, I've written letters to congressmen, appealing for reason and updated thinking within the FDA, concerning nutritional needs. Despite the flood of letters, including many from leading scientists and physicians, pointing out that while we're not an underfed nation, we are undernourished, the plan to ban supplements is being carried out. Within 60 days, vitamins A and D will become prescription drugs and other supplements are to follow by the year's end.

Such non-responsiveness to the wishes and needs of the public indicates that the FDA considers us to be uninformed faddists, incapable of knowing what may be best for our individual needs, thus we're being protected from ourselves!

Which motivates me to invite FDA officials to come visit our store, for example, as objective observers. Listen to our customers as they talk with us and among themselves. You'll discover that they're reasonable, intelligent people, fully capable of making rational decisions, obviously. They're learned by experience and by studying the writings of new age scientists, that wholeness and balance can't be reached without good nutrition, which includes supplementation. As Prof. E. Cheraskin has said: We have to take "heroic counter measures" to cope with an artificial world.

Can you, FDA officials, ignore the right of these people to flourish? We in the health food industry can find other means of supporting ourselves. But we're concerned for our customers, if your plan prevails, who will be hard put to thrive if you impose those restrictions, based on outdated, disproven theories which haven't caught up with what the new breed of preventive scientists advocate.

Perhaps you could learn something about optimum health from these people who know where they're going, despite bureaucratic roadblocks along the way.

Objects To Courtroom And Divorce Stories

As an editor who would seem to be responsible for the quality of the Independent-Journal, I can't see how you can sit back and accept it as it is. I find some of your policies close to scandalous.

In your articles pertaining to those on trial for thefts, check forgery, etc., you often feature quotes and background information which is damaging. (One, for instance, stated information from a boy's probation officer's report used in court regarding the boy's family relationships and parents' "drinking problem" along with, of course, the family name and address.)

I know these people and if they will let this go by, fine. But I won't. No one deserves this kind of publicity.

Rather than report confidential facts as these, I suggest you can create a column for courthouse action just listing names, ages and charges, if you must. Can't you see the hurt and embarrassment you can cause by publishing private information?

I believe this to be true, also, with your divorce stories of any even slightly prominent couple, which often include the amount of alimony requested, etc., as well as the names and ages of children. (As if they're not going through enough!) Everyone interested in the divorces filed in the county may find them listed with all the others.

If you need these articles to fill up space I suggest you use the Guiness "Book of World Records." I'd rather see you helping people rather than hurting them.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Saturday's 73rd annual Hobo Convention in Britt, Iowa, proves that hippies are nothing new under the sun.

Hobos discovered how to freeload down life's highway before the hippie was invented.

A hippie isn't sure where he's headed but he knows how to get there: In somebody else's car.

Hobos have been on the road for 73 long years, and where has it got them? To Britt, Iowa.

Marin Has Its Watergate: One Closed Against All Comers

First, a most grateful thanks for the stack of birthday cards, most of which had personal notes of best wishes and approval of the column. I wish there were some way I could put in words what I feel,

Next: A number of the cards asked how we landed at the top of Wolfe Grade, if we turned right at Kentfield Corners? The answer is: We didn't turn right. Somehow we worked our way over into what is now Del Mesa — search me!

A WORD ABOUT our local Watergate: It has the same name but different genes. The extremists on the Marin Municipal Water District board simply closed the gate. That district was brought into being as a service organization, not a legislative one.

They are playing water roulette, with the homes and lives of every one living in the district, by not going ahead with the hookup voted by the people they are elected to serve. One throne room is enough in this county of ours. Neither are they gods or royalty.

THERE IS ONE thing I have wanted to urge you to do for some time. It is this: Make it a habit to read the columns of short paragraphs (usually on Wednesday) relating the action of the board of supervisors at their Tuesday meetings. Many things of importance are listed there.

Here is something that has bothered me for years: During the first days of considering the purchase of the Net Depot Annex for a park site, a seismologist living in another county and who had been with the federal government for a number of years telephoned me one evening from his home. He urged me to try to stop the purchase for the following reason:

Off shore a short distance is a fault (I think he said it was a part of the San Andreas one). He said that the seismologists had worried about it for years as there was a constant movement each year — one side moving north and the other south. . .

There was so much in-fighting going on at the board level that I just didn't pass the word along.

I think I should take this up as soon as there seems to be a move to buy the depot now.

SACRAMENTO SCENE

Accountability? Yes; Lockstep Control? No

By RUS WALTON

There is indeed a need for greater accountability in public education. Taxpayers and parents deserve a better stewardship of their school tax monies.

But increased accountability must not mean increased centralism. In fact, increased state control of local school districts is one of the factors weakening accountability. Greater centralism would only assure lock-step controls without accountability.

That is why many conservatives are upset about two items adopted at its July meeting by the state Board of Education. They frankly fear that the two items are two more planks in the lid for the coffin for local controls.

THE FIRST ITEM, "California School Accounting Manual," is a 140-page directive based on the concept of "Program Budgeting": meaning, a grouping of proposed expenditure items according to the series of "activities or programs they are intended to support."

That brings up the second item adopted by the board: "Statement of School District Development of Goals and Priorities." Hook that with the accounting manual and you come very close to something called PPBS (Planning, Programming and Budgeting System).

The advocates of PPBS hide behind the claim that it is simply designed to get the most out of each dollar spent, to make the teacher and the administrator accountable. In a sense, that is true. But the central question is: accountable to whom? For what?

Those who push for PPBS march under the flag of "efficiency and cost control." They fly a false banner.Their true standard is "centralize and conform." It's not just costs they would control — it's kids, as well.

Because, when you dig through the semantic garbage and the elitist camouflage, you get to the nub of PPBS as it relates to public education and our kids: the direction and control of student attitudes and behavior.

IF YOU THINK that summation too harsh, take a look at products coming off today's largely "programmed and budgeted" education assembly line. As Governor Reagan once said: "It's not that our young people don't know anything; it's just that they know so much that isn't true."

How much more control do those PPBS birds want? Right now not more than 10-15 per cent of the decisions affecting our local schools are made at the district level. The balance are mandated by federal and state masters, through the allocation of specific funds for specific programs, through fastening priorities to special grants, and by requiring pre-set evaluations.

THE BOARD of education, by embracing those two pre-PPBS items as it did, moved in the wrong direction. It should be working to restore and revitalize local autonomy. Accountability could be more properly achieved if the state and federal masters would get out of the temple and let the districts run their schools.

Kids, parents, teachers and administrators should not be forced to walk in lock step. Not if you're building a society of free individuals.

Novato Mayor Gives City's Horsey Set Lecture On Manners

At a recent Novato City Council meeting, Mayor Fred F. Ruegg had some not-too-kind words to say to horse riders, especially the younger ones.

It came after a request was made to include more horse trails on the city plan. Representatives of Marin Trails and Novato horse people asked for the addition of more designated horse trails.

Mayor Ruegg said he hoped they would give other people the same courtesy which they were asking. He said the adult horse riders ought to teach their children proper manners while riding horseback.

The mayor pointed out they should not ride horses on the sidewalks, and when the horse leaves its large calling card, it ought to be cleaned up.

Youngsters should not ride their horses up to the front doors of food establishments such as Baskin-Robbins ice cream store on Grant Avenue which not only creates a smelly condition but also keeps potential customers away, he said.

He told of one girl who rode her horse through the gate at Pioneer Memorial Park right past a sign reading "No Horses" and onto the turf of the park. He said he told her that she should not take her horse there, and she defied him.

It may not do any good, but at least the mayor made it clear that not everyone likes horses on sidewalks.

AMONG THE CITIZENS of Novato who are against City Mgr. Charles A. Brown is Betty Machado, former candidate for the city council and a member of the Novato Unified School District board.

Not long after Brown was appointed city manager, she was intrigued by his name and a slogan of the "Peanuts" comic strip. She engineered a "You're a Good Man Charley Brown Day."

Some people told her to wait and see if Charles Brown was a "good man," but she did not.

Now that she does not like him, we wonder how she feels about her "Good Man Charley Brown Day."

ONE NOVATO butcher shop will probably come out of the meat shortage with more business.

Grant Avenue Meats in the Tresch Triangle has adopted the policy of not selling meat to anyone except regular customers. When a woman the other day wanted a large number of T-bone steaks, she was told to get them from her regular meat market as she had not been in the store before. That was when the policy was adopted to serve regular customers.

If the store can supply its regular customers during the meat shortage, they will probably remember when the meat shortage ends.

Span Transit Fare Hikes Go On Shelf

A committee of Golden Gate Bridge District directors agreed Thursday to forget about bus and ferry fare hikes for at least six months.

The finance-auditing committee, which has pushed for months to raise both transit fares and bridge tolls, decided to press only for toll hikes.

An 18-month study on how such increases would affect bridge and transit use is now underway. Some conclusions may be ready early next year and the committee agreed to await those results.

The committee postponed reviving the plan to raise the toll to 75 cents until more data is available on the district's financial needs over the next five years. The hike had been turned down by the full bridge board because of opposition by San Francisco supervisors, but several of the supervisors now favor a higher toll charge.

Bank Is Robbed By Banker At Lunch

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — John Nicholas, an employe of a downtown bank, was charged Thursday with robbing a bank a few doors away.

Consumer Guide Now Available In Spanish

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Attorney General Evelle J. Younger Thursday announced his office has published a Spanish-language edition of a booklet giving persons tips on protecting themselves against bunco artists and confidence men.

The 28-page booklet, entitled "On Guard: A Guide to the Consumer," previously was made available in English to the public. It can be obtained in both Spanish or English by writing the Public Correspondence Unit, 5th and Capitol Mall, Sacramento.

Younger—Four Too Many In Top Race

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Republicans can't afford a four-way race for governor next year because President Nixon's fund raisers milked GOP contributors of so much money last year, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger said Thursday.

He said he personally plans money-raising dinners later this year in four California cities for his potential gubernatorial campaign. He is one of the four most frequently mentioned contenders for the GOP nomination next year.

Younger said the field of potential candidates would be narrowed if key GOP backers would publicly declare who they support. But Younger said he is not advocating any "king-making" effort to pick a single candidate.

Younger said he hopes that "100 or so" top GOP leaders in California will "choose up sides" so that prospective candidates know which are the two or three candidates with the most support.

"I expect if that process takes place, I will be beneficiary of a great deal of that support," Younger said.

Asked what was wrong with four major candidates running for the GOP nomination to succeed Gov. Ronald Reagan, Younger replied.

"We could, but we would lose the general election. There just aren't enough resources for four candidates."

He said the two major problems facing the California Republican party are: being outnumbered by a 60-40 ratio in voter registration, and being short of campaign money because GOP contributors were pressured to give so much to Nixon's 1972 campaign.

In addition to Younger, other frequently mentioned GOP candidates for governor are Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, Controller Houston Flournoy and Robert Finch, onetime lieutenant governor and former presidential adviser.

Asked about the possible candidacy of Caspar Weinberger, the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Younger said: "For a variety of reasons, I think nothing will come of it. I don't think he's interested."

Checks Suspect Pleads Innocent

A San Rafael man who allegedly cashed four bad checks at a San Anselmo poultry market between July 11 and 13 has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to two counts of forgery.

Preliminary hearing for Aldo Barberini, 40, of 321 Paloma Avenue, was set for Tuesday.

He is charged with cashing $450 in checks written in the name of Carol Agnost, at Marin Poultry, 34 Greenfield Avenue.

Contradictory Actions By Transit District

Independent-Journal
SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY
44 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 10, 1973 EDITORIAL PAGE

Marin County Transit District directors (who double as county supervisors) decided this week to try to increase the district's tax rate to 25 cents per $100 accessed valuation next year — five times the present limit.

That levy, we understand, would product about $2 million per year to underwrite bus transit within Marin which supplements the commute service of the Golden Gate Bridge District. The bridge district runs the local Marin buses under contract with the transit district.

Two million dollars does not sound like an excessive amount to subsidize mass transit. Many millions have been spent in building roads which directly or indirectly subsidize bus and truck lines and private automobile owners.

BUT AT the same meeting, the directors took an opposite tack. While voting to up the tax rate to provide a better transit system, they also voted to meantime cut back on the existing system.

This will be done by eliminating some of the less-used bus schedules. No route will be eliminated entirely, but service will be less frequent on some and early morning and late evening runs will be cut off from others.

Cutting the service while proposing to increase the tax rate to enlarge service sounds rather self-contradictory.

The explanation given is that present bus patronage falls too far short of the cost of operating the in-county buses. The 5-cent tax rate fails to make up the loss. The district is using up a reserve fund it built up for several years while it was only a "paper district."

Even the reduced service, according to Ray W. Foreaker, transit district manager (who doubles as county director of public works), will require using some of the reserve fund. It will, he said, leave a reserve of just under $100,000 at the end of the fiscal year. He figures that amount of reserve is necessary.

THE FLAW in this arrangement is that, by reducing service, the transit district will drive people away from bus use — exactly the opposit of the its purpose.

The fact that a particular route at a particular time of day is not now drawing many riders may mean that it is not needed. On the other hand, it may mean simply that existence of the service is not understood widely enough.

The transit district has done little to promote bus use within the county, although the bridge district has done a good job of promoting commute bus use. The transit district has not even posted schedules at bus stops.

Maybe the trouble is that neither the supervisors (who double as transit directors) nor the public works director (who doubles as transit manager) know a great deal about mass transit operations.

Marin County Transit District should make every effort to promote more use of buses. Cutting the existing service is not likely to promote more use.

No Need For Puzzlement To Exist Over Responsibility For Watergate

WASHINGTON — In the play "Anna and the King of Siam," the King is always remarking, "It's a puzzlement!"

In the witness box before the Ervin committee, H.R. Haldeman ended his testimony by saying, as if brooding aloud, that as of that moment he couldn't see how Watergate came into being or where the responsibility for it must lie.

It really is not that puzzling. The evidence on the public record already seems sufficient to show where in four concrete instances the Watergate burglary, the psychiatrist's office break-in and, what is even worse, the White House coverup could have been stopped.

While it may not yet be possible to see where the collective crimes of Watergate started, it is possible to see where it could have been stopped — if those who had the knowledge and power to stop them had acted faithfully, fearlessly and honorably.

HERE ARE THE FOUR instances in which those with great power close to the President could have said "no" and the Watergate monster would almost certainly have been sidetracked — instead of saying "yes," in the wake of which so much evil and harm to the presidency flowed.

1. — When Atty. Gen. John Mitchell failed to instantly fire G. Gordon Liddy — an employee on the staff of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President — when Liddy unfolded his plan to burglarize and bug Democratic National Committee headquarters — even after, as Mitchell claimed, he had twice previously rejected Liddy's plan. If Mitchell testified truthfully, hadn't Liddy then and thereby proved to be unreliable and unwilling to follow the orders of the attorney general?

2. — When John D. Ehrlichman, after learning of the unauthorized Liddy-Hunt break-in of the Los Angeles office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, failed to bring about their dismissal. There was ample cause for it. These men were then employees at the White House. Ehrlichman testified that the break-in was not authorized. Dr. Fielding, the psychiatrist, was not charged with violating national security or any other crime. He had stolen no classified papers, but Liddy and Hunt broke into his office to steal his classified papers — papers professionally private between doctor and patient.

AFTER THESE TWO failures to act decisively, the Watergate monster was on the loose. These were two crucial turning points.

3. — But there was another crossing at which the worst consequences to the President and to the nation could have been halted. To me the coverup on the part of officials of the administration and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President was worse than the Watergate offenses themselves. John Mitchell concluded that it was better to cover up everything he knew about the Watergate offenses than to face them promptly, cleanly and openly because doing so might hurt Richard Nixon's presidential campaign. And in the end, the presidency and the nation and the quality of the democratic process were grievously wounded.

4. — The worst could have been averted at one more point. Mitchell testified that he kept President Nixon in the dark before the election for political reasons, and after the election for fear that Mr. Nixon would act too decisively; that is, as he said, for fear the President "would lower the boom." He left me with the impression that he thought that would be a mess. Mr. Mitchell's coverup led to a worse mess.

I am not suggesting that this is all there is to Watergate. But I am suggesting that there is an answer to Mr. Haldeman's puzzlement about the origins of Watergate and at least where much responsibility for it lies.

ERNEST B. FURGURSON

The Siege Of Mason's Neck, Habitat Of National Bird

WASHINGTON — Corregidor, Leningrad, Cassino and Khe Sanh have nothing on Mason's Neck. It has been under seige longer than any of them. It has been shaken, but never fallen. Now it is under assault again, and this could be the worst.

Mason's Neck is a peninsula that juts into the Potomac River barely 20 miles below Washington, within view of Mount Vernon. It is the last holdout anywhere near the nation's capital of the nation's endangered symbol, the American bald eagle. And that is the kind of information that provokes an eloquent shrug from Virginia authorities who want to build an airport nearby.

Repeatedly over the past decade, residents of the area have combined to stave off business interests pressuring the relatively undisturbed backwater. One developer wanted to convert the neck into a ready-made city of 20,000 persons.

The area's residents formed a committee and sought help. National organizations threw their influence and more importantly their assets behind the preservation effort. The Nature Conservancy produced $5.9 million to hold over 900 acres of marsh and forest until a series of connecting parks, historical sites and wildlife refuges could be linked together to keep the neck unviolated.

Then when the concerned groups sighed at what seemed victory, another attack came from the river side, where Maryland dredgers wanted to work close to the Virginia shore. That would have ruined the great marsh around which the eagles breed. The dredgers were turned back, too, after the alarm was sounded. The eagles seemed safe for awhile.

But such victories never last long. That was two-and-one-half years ago.

The other side is at it again, this time in the persons of Virginia state airport officials and the United States Army. The state officials would like to build a major airport for private and business planes on the property of Fort Belvoir, taking some of the load off Washington National Airport. A projected 400 jet and propeller flights a day would use the runway, plotted to run inland off a cover barely a quarter-mile from the eagle sanctuary.

Fort Belvoir, headquarters of the Army Engineers, already has one airport about a mile away, the other side of U.S. Route 1. Its approaches run over Army property, rather than the neck. But apparently there is no thought of using it for the private air traffic outlet.

In this case, as in so many, plans have tiptoed close to the execution stage before the public was let in on them.

Meanwhile the state has been negotiating with the Army for final permission to proceed — and, unfortunately, Gov. Linwood Holton is an old friend of Mr. Nixon who has diligently preserved that goodwill in hopes of a federal appointment when his term in Richmond expires. Thus the attackers are wielding a powerful new weapon this time.

The siege of Mason's Neck is of concern to the whole country, if only because it involves the national capital and the national bird. Further, if the sanctuary is breached by this attack, it will be ironic — and instructive to all — that it finally fell not to the feared private developers, but to a sneak attack from a combination of state and federal power that should have been arrayed in its protection.

Wheels For Marin Appreciates Support

The staff of Wheels for Marin would like to express our genuine appreciation for the excellent story Fred Strebeigh did on Whistlestop Wheels in the July 31 Independent-Journal.

It was another example of the great supportive help the I-J has given to the transportation programs: Whistlestop for Seniors, and Wheels for Marin serving the ill and the handicapped, now merged into Whistlestop Wheels.

Without this kind of support and the present participation of Red Cross, Easter Seal Society, Zonta International, as well as the many organizations and individuals who have contributed so much over the years, our programs could not have existed.

These programs are filling a great need in Marin, and are being looked to as models across the state.

Chavez Supporter Disputes Editorial

I feel called upon to take issue with your Aug. 3 editorial on the farm workers' strike.

You claim that the Teamsters — United Farm Workers fight is "simply a jurisdictional dispute." But the California Supreme Court has recently ruled differently, saying that the Teamsters are working as allies of the growers.

You claim that the UFW organizing campaign "was and is to benefit union treasuries." But under UFW contracts wages have gone up, the farm workers have achieved job security, the use of pesticides has been strictly controlled, and some of the money from the union treasury has gone to finance construction of four medical clinics to aid a people whose life-expectancy is 30 years less than the average in America.

Finally, you claim that the UFW is opposed to secret-ballot elections for union representation, and cite their campaign against Proposition 22 last November. Proposition 22 would have done a lot of things, but it would not have provided for fair or effective union representation, because it would have prevented most workers from participating in elections and prohibited strikes during the harvest season.

Cesar Chavez is not afraid of honest elections; thousands of his supporters are willing to go to jail for the UFW. Nobody has risked jail for Frank Fitzsimmons' Teamsters.

New FDA Regulations Harmful To People

Along with a million other concerned people, I've written letters to congressmen, appealing for reason and updated thinking within the FDA, concerning nutritional needs. Despite the flood of letters, including many from leading scientists and physicians, pointing out that while we're not an underfed nation, we are undernourished, the plan to ban supplements is being carried out. Within 60 days, vitamins A and D will become prescription drugs and other supplements are to follow by the year's end.

Such non-responsiveness to the wishes and needs of the public indicates that the FDA considers us to be uninformed faddists, incapable of knowing what may be best for our individual needs, thus we're being protected from ourselves!

Which motivates me to invite FDA officials to come visit our store, for example, as objective observers. Listen to our customers as they talk with us and among themselves. You'll discover that they're reasonable, intelligent people, fully capable of making rational decisions, obviously. They're learned by experience and by studying the writings of new age scientists, that wholeness and balance can't be reached without good nutrition, which includes supplementation. As Prof. E. Cheraskin has said: We have to take "heroic counter measures" to cope with an artificial world.

Can you, FDA officials, ignore the right of these people to flourish? We in the health food industry can find other means of supporting ourselves. But we're concerned for our customers, if your plan prevails, who will be hard put to thrive if you impose those restrictions, based on outdated, disproven theories which haven't caught up with what the new breed of preventive scientists advocate.

Perhaps you could learn something about optimum health from these people who know where they're going, despite bureaucratic roadblocks along the way.

Objects To Courtroom And Divorce Stories

As an editor who would seem to be responsible for the quality of the Independent-Journal, I can't see how you can sit back and accept it as it is. I find some of your policies close to scandalous.

In your articles pertaining to those on trial for thefts, check forgery, etc., you often feature quotes and background information which is damaging. (One, for instance, stated information from a boy's probation officer's report used in court regarding the boy's family relationships and parents' "drinking problem" along with, of course, the family name and address.)

I know these people and if they will let this go by, fine. But I won't. No one deserves this kind of publicity.

Rather than report confidential facts as these, I suggest you can create a column for courthouse action just listing names, ages and charges, if you must. Can't you see the hurt and embarrassment you can cause by publishing private information?

I believe this to be true, also, with your divorce stories of any even slightly prominent couple, which often include the amount of alimony requested, etc., as well as the names and ages of children. (As if they're not going through enough!) Everyone interested in the divorces filed in the county may find them listed with all the others.

If you need these articles to fill up space I suggest you use the Guiness "Book of World Records." I'd rather see you helping people rather than hurting them.

A WORD ABOUT our local Watergate: It has the same name but different genes. The extremists on the Marin Municipal Water District board simply closed the gate. That district was brought into being as a service organization, not a legislative one.

They are playing water roulette, with the homes and lives of every one living in the district, by not going ahead with the hookup voted by the people they are elected to serve. One throne room is enough in this county of ours. Neither are they gods or royalty.

THERE IS ONE thing I have wanted to urge you to do for some time. It is this: Make it a habit to read the columns of short paragraphs (usually on Wednesday) relating the action of the board of supervisors at their Tuesday meetings. Many things of importance are listed there.

Here is something that has bothered me for years: During the first days of considering the purchase of the Net Depot Annex for a park site, a seismologist living in another county and who had been with the federal government for a number of years telephoned me one evening from his home. He urged me to try to stop the purchase for the following reason:

Off shore a short distance is a fault (I think he said it was a part of the San Andreas one). He said that the seismologists had worried about it for years as there was a constant movement each year — one side moving north and the other south. . .

There was so much in-fighting going on at the board level that I just didn't pass the word along.

I think I should take this up as soon as there seems to be a move to buy the depot now.

Accountability? Yes; Lockstep Control? No

By RUS WALTON

There is indeed a need for greater accountability in public education. Taxpayers and parents deserve a better stewardship of their school tax monies.

But increased accountability must not mean increased centralism. In fact, increased state control of local school districts is one of the factors weakening accountability. Greater centralism would only assure lock-step controls without accountability.

That is why many conservatives are upset about two items adopted at its July meeting by the state Board of Education. They frankly fear that the two items are two more planks in the lid for the coffin for local controls.

THE FIRST ITEM, "California School Accounting Manual," is a 140-page directive based on the concept of "Program Budgeting": meaning, a grouping of proposed expenditure items according to the series of "activities or programs they are intended to support."

That brings up the second item adopted by the board: "Statement of School District Development of Goals and Priorities." Hook that with the accounting manual and you come very close to something called PPBS (Planning, Programming and Budgeting System).

The advocates of PPBS hide behind the claim that it is simply designed to get the most out of each dollar spent, to make the teacher and the administrator accountable. In a sense, that is true. But the central question is: accountable to whom? For what?

Those who push for PPBS march under the flag of "efficiency and cost control." They fly a false banner.Their true standard is "centralize and conform." It's not just costs they would control — it's kids, as well.

Because, when you dig through the semantic garbage and the elitist camouflage, you get to the nub of PPBS as it relates to public education and our kids: the direction and control of student attitudes and behavior.

IF YOU THINK that summation too harsh, take a look at products coming off today's largely "programmed and budgeted" education assembly line. As Governor Reagan once said: "It's not that our young people don't know anything; it's just that they know so much that isn't true."

How much more control do those PPBS birds want? Right now not more than 10-15 per cent of the decisions affecting our local schools are made at the district level. The balance are mandated by federal and state masters, through the allocation of specific funds for specific programs, through fastening priorities to special grants, and by requiring pre-set evaluations.

THE BOARD of education, by embracing those two pre-PPBS items as it did, moved in the wrong direction. It should be working to restore and revitalize local autonomy. Accountability could be more properly achieved if the state and federal masters would get out of the temple and let the districts run their schools.

Kids, parents, teachers and administrators should not be forced to walk in lock step. Not if you're building a society of free individuals.

Novato Mayor Gives City's Horsey Set Lecture On Manners

At a recent Novato City Council meeting, Mayor Fred F. Ruegg had some not-too-kind words to say to horse riders, especially the younger ones.

It came after a request was made to include more horse trails on the city plan. Representatives of Marin Trails and Novato horse people asked for the addition of more designated horse trails.

Mayor Ruegg said he hoped they would give other people the same courtesy which they were asking. He said the adult horse riders ought to teach their children proper manners while riding horseback.

The mayor pointed out they should not ride horses on the sidewalks, and when the horse leaves its large calling card, it ought to be cleaned up.

Youngsters should not ride their horses up to the front doors of food establishments such as Baskin-Robbins ice cream store on Grant Avenue which not only creates a smelly condition but also keeps potential customers away, he said.

He told of one girl who rode her horse through the gate at Pioneer Memorial Park right past a sign reading "No Horses" and onto the turf of the park. He said he told her that she should not take her horse there, and she defied him.

It may not do any good, but at least the mayor made it clear that not everyone likes horses on sidewalks.

AMONG THE CITIZENS of Novato who are against City Mgr. Charles A. Brown is Betty Machado, former candidate for the city council and a member of the Novato Unified School District board.

Not long after Brown was appointed city manager, she was intrigued by his name and a slogan of the "Peanuts" comic strip. She engineered a "You're a Good Man Charley Brown Day."

Some people told her to wait and see if Charles Brown was a "good man," but she did not.

Now that she does not like him, we wonder how she feels about her "Good Man Charley Brown Day."

ONE NOVATO butcher shop will probably come out of the meat shortage with more business.

Grant Avenue Meats in the Tresch Triangle has adopted the policy of not selling meat to anyone except regular customers. When a woman the other day wanted a large number of T-bone steaks, she was told to get them from her regular meat market as she had not been in the store before. That was when the policy was adopted to serve regular customers.

If the store can supply its regular customers during the meat shortage, they will probably remember when the meat shortage ends.

Span Transit Fare Hikes Go On Shelf

A committee of Golden Gate Bridge District directors agreed Thursday to forget about bus and ferry fare hikes for at least six months.

The finance-auditing committee, which has pushed for months to raise both transit fares and bridge tolls, decided to press only for toll hikes.

An 18-month study on how such increases would affect bridge and transit use is now underway. Some conclusions may be ready early next year and the committee agreed to await those results.

The committee postponed reviving the plan to raise the toll to 75 cents until more data is available on the district's financial needs over the next five years. The hike had been turned down by the full bridge board because of opposition by San Francisco supervisors, but several of the supervisors now favor a higher toll charge.

Bank Is Robbed By Banker At Lunch

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — John Nicholas, an employe of a downtown bank, was charged Thursday with robbing a bank a few doors away.

Consumer Guide Now Available In Spanish

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Attorney General Evelle J. Younger Thursday announced his office has published a Spanish-language edition of a booklet giving persons tips on protecting themselves against bunco artists and confidence men.

The 28-page booklet, entitled "On Guard: A Guide to the Consumer," previously was made available in English to the public. It can be obtained in both Spanish or English by writing the Public Correspondence Unit, 5th and Capitol Mall, Sacramento.

Younger—Four Too Many In Top Race

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Republicans can't afford a four-way race for governor next year because President Nixon's fund raisers milked GOP contributors of so much money last year, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger said Thursday.

He said he personally plans money-raising dinners later this year in four California cities for his potential gubernatorial campaign. He is one of the four most frequently mentioned contenders for the GOP nomination next year.

Younger said the field of potential candidates would be narrowed if key GOP backers would publicly declare who they support. But Younger said he is not advocating any "king-making" effort to pick a single candidate.

Younger said he hopes that "100 or so" top GOP leaders in California will "choose up sides" so that prospective candidates know which are the two or three candidates with the most support.

"I expect if that process takes place, I will be beneficiary of a great deal of that support," Younger said.

Asked what was wrong with four major candidates running for the GOP nomination to succeed Gov. Ronald Reagan, Younger replied.

"We could, but we would lose the general election. There just aren't enough resources for four candidates."

He said the two major problems facing the California Republican party are: being outnumbered by a 60-40 ratio in voter registration, and being short of campaign money because GOP contributors were pressured to give so much to Nixon's 1972 campaign.

In addition to Younger, other frequently mentioned GOP candidates for governor are Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, Controller Houston Flournoy and Robert Finch, onetime lieutenant governor and former presidential adviser.

Asked about the possible candidacy of Caspar Weinberger, the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Younger said: "For a variety of reasons, I think nothing will come of it. I don't think he's interested."

The Battle of Lexington and Concord took place April 19, 1775.

Checks Suspect Pleads Innocent

A San Rafael man who allegedly cashed four bad checks at a San Anselmo poultry market between July 11 and 13 has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to two counts of forgery.

Preliminary hearing for Aldo Barberini, 40, of 321 Paloma Avenue, was set for Tuesday.

He is charged with cashing $450 in checks written in the name of Carol Agnost, at Marin Poultry, 34 Greenfield Avenue.

New Church Puts Women In Back Seat

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — The accent is not on youth in the formation of a conservative new Presbyterian denomination, and women's lib has made few converts.

Virtually all the delegates at a planning session that wound up here Thursday after three days of debate were middleaged or older, and they laid the groundwork for a church structure in which women will take a back seat.

The delegates represented more than 200 Southern Presbyterian churches that have severed their ties to the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., the million-member southern Presbyterian body.

They forged the groundwork for a new denomination that will spurn most of the more liberal policies of the present mother church, returning to what the delegates consider the denomination's basic tenets.

Four major operating committees of the new group will meet in Atlanta Sept. 7-8 to make final preparations for the Dec. 4 Birmingham, Ala., session at which the church will officially begin.

The delegates adopted a constitutional proposal providing that all church offices be held by men. Opposition to ordination of women was one of the reasons many of the churches dropped out of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

The group, which feels it is returning to what the Presbyterian church should be, rather than forming a new body, also provided that title and control of church property be left with local churches. The group adopted the Book of Church Order of 1933 of the Presbyterian church as its basic document, and the Westminister Confession as the foundation of its doctrine.

The leaders of the group, called the Continuing Presbyterian Church, have opposed what they consider a swing to liberalism in the church, particularly in stands on abortion, premarital sex, ordination of women and other social and religious matters.

Britain's Commonwealth Equality Pleases Heath

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON (UPI) — Britain has effectively relinquished its role as leader of the 33-nation British Commonwealth, and Prime Minister Edward Heath is happier for it.

The Statute of Westminster of 1931 creating the Commonwealth defined the status of member nations as "autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, but united by a common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Those were the days when Britain's empire spanned the globe. In the years since, 12 members became independent republics and the Empire shrank dramatically.

Far from being united "by a common allegiance to the Crown," in recent years Commonwealth conferences became forums for vehement criticism of Britain—"Brit-bashing" as Heath called it—especially by African and Asian leaders.

But at this year's Commonwealth conference, just concluded in Ottawa, Britain put the emphasis on the phrase, "in no way subordinate one to another," and made it clear Britain would no longer act as the undisputed leader of the Commonwealth.

"It has been a constructive conference—better than any other Commonwealth conference I have attended," Heath told newsmen before leaving Ottawa.

British officials said when Heath made this comment he was thinking of the Singapore prime minister's conference in 1971 when the Asians and black leaders slammed him unmercifully for his plans to resume arms sales to South Africa.

"We had the impression that in the last nine days he had grown to like the Commonwealth, to which earlier he appeared to attach little importance," a British correspondent wrote from Ottawa.

Another said: "Having endured sustained Brit-bashing and general abuse at the 1971 Singapore conference, he arrived an apprehensive man, very much on edge. But things have turned out very much better than he expected."

British officials say Heath was pleased that this year's Commonwealth conference dropped most of the set piece speeches of the past and did most of its business at small private meetings attended only by the leaders and one or two aides for each.

Aides say Heath believes such free exchanges are worthwhile and that he favors holding more such meetings.

Divorce Lawyer, Burtons Confer

ROME (UPI) — The lawyer handling divorce proceedings for Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton arrived to confer with the estranged couple today.

Lawyer Aaron Frosch and his wife were met at Leonardo da Vinci Airport by Miss Taylor's secretary and Burton's secretary and driven directly to the villa of producer Carlo Ponti, where Burton has been staying.

Frosch announced in New York July 31 that the couple had asked him to file for divorce in Switzerland, where they have their permanent residence in Gstaad. Since then Miss Taylor has been living in a suite at Rome's Grand Hotel but has spent most of her evenings with Burton and the Pontis.

Pakistan Has A New President

Fazal, 69, until recently was speaker of the National Assembly.

Opposition candidate Amirzada Khan, of the pro-Moscow National Awami Party, polled 45 votes in the secret ballot. One vote was declared invalid, and six of the 191 joint house members were absent.

Prime ministerial elections are scheduled for this coming Sunday, with President Zulfikhar Ali Bhutto running as the ruling party candidate, an all but certain winner.

Both are scheduled to be sworn in Tuesday.

"Anything Besides Winning Is Failure"

"Speed is not the primary goal in racing. What good is it if you have the fastest car if it only lasts a few miles? We strive to see that the car stays together for the full distance of a race. . . . You have to finish all 500 miles [at Indianapolis] in order to win. And anything besides winning is a failure."

Race driver Mark Donohue doesn't project the image most of us picture of the high-living, hard-driving daredevil portrayed in books and movies. Known as "Captain Nice" by men who often act and talk as tough as the pavements on which they drive, Mark's serious demeanor and total dedication to his profession have made him "one of the best five or six in the world" and also one of the most prosperous men in motor sports. Bagley Pens State Office Pay Hike Bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The salary of the governor would be increased to $60,000 a year and California's six other statewide officials would get raises averaging $8,000 each under a proposal by a key legislator.

Bagley's bill already has the support of at least two candidates for governor and backers said it will probably be enacted by the legislature.

Three other states pay their governors more than California's: New York $85,000, Texas $58,500 and New Jersey $50,000. (Bagley said the hikes would be the first pay raises for top state officials since 1971 and would average only about 5 per cent a year. He said the raises are "only a matter of pay equity" and if the legislature doesn't act before 1975, the consitution prohibits raises until 1979.

Here are the raises proposed by Bagley:

Lieutenant governor, controller, secretary of state, treasurer, and superintendent of public instruction, from $35,000 to $42,500 a year.

Bagley says he probably will run for controller next year.

He said he introduced the bill on the request of the staff of Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger, a potential gubernatorial candidate, to raise the attorney general's pay to $51,155, the same as the chief justice of the State Supreme Court.

He said traditionally those two posts have had the same pay, but that judges' salary raises have not been matched in recent years.

Then "a concensus was reached" this week, Bagley said, to use his bill to raise the salaries of all constitutional officers.

"Look at the superintendent of public instruction. More than 1,000 local superintendents are making more than the state superintendent. Throughout the state, top local officials are making more than $40,000. Local government is replete with examples," he said.

Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, another likely gubernatorial candidates, said the Bagley plan sounded "reasonable" and would probably be enacted this year.

The bill is AB 2149.

Lagunitas Adds Schoolteachers

The Lagunitas School District board on Wednesday hired two more teachers for its open classroom program, bringing the staff to six.

Supt. Harry F. Roche said trustees employed Sue Thomas at $11,000 a year and Leif Glomset at $9,500.

The program's enrollment is 157, about the same as last year, Roche said.

The board also transferred a full-time teacher to its advanced basic capabilities program, to open the program to additional students.

Trustees adjourned to Sept. 5 at 7:30 p.m.

Cattlemen Tell Their Side Of Costs

By JAMES WILSON

MISSION, S.D. (AP) — Howard Lamoureaux is one of the high-rollers of the Great Plains.

He has survived blizzards and droughts for half a century while building a 17,000-acre cattle ranch. But he's not sure how he survived the high cost of raising beef, and says ranchers have much more to lose than consumers from today's soaring market prices.

"We can lose everything we have," he says.

Lamoureaux and his grandson, Bill Potter, operate the 27-square mile spread between Mission, S.D., and Valentine, Neb., in the heart of the cattle country of the Upper Midwest. They raise about 500 head of their own cattle and graze another 2,500 head for cowmen who have the money to buy calves but don't have the grass to fatten them.

The ranchers buy 400-pound calves in the fall, feed them to about 800 pounds during the next 12 months and then sell to feeders who fatten the animals for commercial slaughter.

Last fall Lamoureaux and Potter sold 350 head of yearlings for $42.50 a hundredweight. Last week they rejected an offer of $50 a hundredweight.

"I asked $55 and was turned down," said Potter, 25. "Two days later I heard feeders were paying $65 a hundred for yearlings. The market is so wild nobody knows what they're worth."

Potter said his yearlings will go to sales barns after the Sept. 12 beef freeze ends. "We don't know what they're worth but an auction should get us a fair price," he said.

Lamoureaux, in his 70s and Potter, an Air Force veteran who has worked with his grandfather most of his life, said the prices sound good but there's another side of the coin. They said overhead costs have tightened the profit margin to the point where only the high prices at the market are saving the business.

"Last year we paid $220 a ton for the high-protein feed that supplements the wild hay we feed the cattle," Potter said. "Today it costs $350 a ton.

"That was a $25,000 tractor you saw being hauled away for repairs," the rancher said. "We've got two more rigs for cutting hay that cost $15,000 apiece. You can't buy a tractor for less than $10,000."

Potter said the next problem may be the accelerating cost of purchasing calves for the next crop. "Last year we paid $52.50 a hundredweight for the calves. The price could go out of sight this year."

His grandfather added: "The only bigger gambler than a cattle rancher is a farmer."

"Sometimes I really get angry," Potter said. "I wished the meat boycotters could come out here some week in the winter when we're working 10 or 11 hours a day in below-zero weather feeding the animals. We work Sunday mornings, and last winter I worked all day on Christmas and New Year's.

"Starting Monday we'll have to work 14 straight days getting the hay up. Then we'll have to sort cattle and get them ready to sell. After we buy our new crop of calves, we vaccinate them, dehorn and brand them and check for illnesses."

Ten miles to the northwest toward the community of Mission, there is another Lamoureaux operation, smaller in land but larger in the number of livestock.

Howard's brother, Claude, owned and operated the ranch for more than a quarter of a century until his death two months ago. Bob Lamoureaux, Claude's son, is looking after it today while continuing his job for the Caterpillar Tractor Co. in Peoria, Ill.

The ranch covers 13,000 acres and is considered by cattlemen in South Dakota and northern Nebraska as perhaps the best balanced operation in the region. Its lush pastures provide feed for more than 1,000 cattle and calves.

"Ranchers are taking a bum rap for the high cost of beef," said Bob Lamoureaux, a middle-aged civil engineer. "In 1948, my dad sold 400 head of yearlings for 30 cents a pound. Today they may be worth 60 cents a pound. But the cost of machinery, feed supplements and labor has increased sevenfold."

Howard and Bob Lamoureaux own about 50 square miles of South Dakota prairie worth more than $2 million. They acknowledge that between them they have about $200,000 worth of machinery. The auction price of their combined cow and cattle herds would bring them more than $1 million.

"But," said Bob Lamoureaux, "we could make more money if we had the money we have invested in ranching in government bonds instead. But we have two things going for us: the continuing appreciation of the value of the land and the fact that we are doing something we enjoy."

System Planned To Stop Thefts

An electronic security system to eliminate book theft will be installed at the Sir Francis Drake High School library when the school opens Sept. 11.

The $10,800 system is expected to pay for itself within two years, according to Edward J. Neumeier, Tamalpais High School District information officer.

The device was installed in the Tamalpais High School library in 1972 and within 18 months had cut the book losses from 34 per cent to four per cent of total collection, Neumeier said.

The system is also planned for Redwood High School. San Rafael and Terra Linda school libraries installed similar systems last year, he said.
